BRISTOL, a city, seaport, & co. of Engl., sit. chiefly in Glo'stersh., & partly in Somersetsh., on the Avon, at its confl. with the Frome, & 8 m. S.E. of its embouchure in the Bristol Channel; 11¼ m. N.W. Bath, 33¾ S.S.W. Gloucester, & 118¾ m. W. London, with which it is connected by the Great W. r. r. Lat. of cathedral 51° 27′ N., lon. 2° 36′ W. Area of bor., including the dist. added by the munic. act, 9,870 ac. Pop. in 1801, 39,914; in 1841, 123,188; & in 1851, 137,328. Bristol extends over several hills & intermediate valleys. The old city between the Avon & Frome is ill-built; & the quarters still further S. are of an inferior character, but all around these are many new streets, squares, & handsome modern residences, especially in the N. & W., in which latter direction is Clifton, comprised in the city liberty. The whole city is well-paved & sewered, & plentifully supplied with water. Principal edifices, the cathed., a beautiful structure, founded in the time of King Stephen, 175 ft. in length, 128 ft. in breadth, & having a tower 140 ft. in height. Of the pa. churches, the most interesting are those of St. Mary Redcliff, completed in 1376, & considered one of the finest in Engl.; St. James', formerly collegiate; St. Stephen's, built about A. D. 1470; St. Mark's, now the chapel of the mayor; & the Temple Church. There are 119 churches, —10 Baptist, 1 Brethren, 42 Episcopal, 1 Friends, 19 Independent, 1 Jews Synagogue, 26 Methodist, 1 Moravian, 1 Mormon, 6 Roman Catholic, 1 Unitarian, & 8 isolated congregations. Other principal edifices are the guildhall, built in the reign of Richard II.; the new council-house, jail, & bridewell; the exchange, a building in the Corinthian style, & used as a corn-mkt.; the commerc. rooms; Bristol institution, with a library & museum; the infirmary, also with a library & museum, & receiving annually 7,500 patients; the general hospital, instituted 1832, assembly rooms, Victoria rooms, office of the Bristol Steam Navigation Co., with a hall used for concerts, &c., the baths & pump-rooms at Clifton, a handsome theatre, & numerous good bridges. In 1841, there were stated to be 598 schools in the city, educating 21,864 pupils; of which 12 were endowed institutions. The grammar school, founded in 1532, has several small exhibitions, & two fellowships of 30*l.* a-year each, in St. John's Coll., Oxford. Queen Elizabeth's hospital educates 100 boys, & has a rev. of nearly 5,000*l.* a-year. Colston's three schools are perhaps next in importance. Alms-houses, & medical, & other benevolent institutions, are very numerous; the endowed charities are estimated at 23,000*l.*, & it is estim. that between 12,000*l.* & 15,000*l.* of voluntary contributions are distributed annually on account of various charities. Bristol has a new proprietary college, belonging to the Baptists, a school of medicine, a public library with 32,000 vols., a law library, medical library, & a mechanics' institution. It long ranked as the second commercial emporium of England, but its progress has not kept pace with that of other ports, more advantageously placed as outlets of great manufacturing districts. It has, however, large iron & brass foundries; copper, tin, zinc, & glass works; chemical & color works; sugar refineries & distilleries; & considerable manufs. of pins, shot, china, earthenwares, soap, leather, tobacco, cottons, hats, & floor-cloths, with extensive estabs. for ship-building; & in its vicinity are large brick & coal works. The Avon at Bristol though narrow, is deep enough for large ships, & early in the present cent., its course was turned for some distance, at a cost of 700,000*l.*, & its own channel now forms a harb., furnished with locks & quays 6,000 ft. in length. Ships of large burden, & first-rate steamers, load & discharge cargo at Kingroad, in the mouth of this riv. The city retains a large share of the West India trade. Imports, consisting chiefly of sugar, molasses, rum, coffee, tobacco, with wool, turpentine, hemp, timber, wine, & brandy, from N. & S. America, the Baltic, & France. Bristol communicates by railroad with Birmingham & Exeter, with the Thames, &c., by the Kennet & Avon canal. It was the first port in Britain, whence regular steam communication with the U. States was estab. It has a chamber of commerce & several mercantile corporate bodies; & it lately had 6 banking companies. In 1848 it was made a free port. The city is divided into 10 wards, & governed by a mayor, 16 aldermen, & 48 councillors. Its corporation has jurisdiction on the Avon from 4 m. above the city down to the sea, & along the channel to Clevedon; also the right to license pilots for numerous ports on the Bristol channel. Mkts. daily, that on Thurs. for cattle. Fairs for horses, leather, &c., Mar. 1 & Sept. 1. Spring assizes for civil causes, quarter sessions, sheriff's & other courts are held here. Bristol belongs to Clifton & Bedminster poor-law union. Under Henry VIII. it was made a bshp's see, lately united with that of Glo'ster. It sends 2 mems. to H. of C. It was a fortified city as early as the 5th cent. In Norman times it had a castle built by the Earl of Glo'ster, son of Henry I. In 1831 it was the scene of a violent riot, during which its episcopal palace & many other buildings were destroyed. Among its distinguished natives may be noticed Sebastian Cabot, Chatterton, Southey, & the sculptor Bailey. Bristol confers the title of Marq. on the Hervey family. The scenery in the vicinity, especially at Hotwell saline spring, is exceedingly beautiful.

BRISTOL BAY, an inlet of the Pacific Ocean, Russian Amer., between Cape Newnham & the peninsula Aliashka. Lat. about 54° N., lon. 160° W. Its discovery is assigned to Captain Cook.

BRISTOL CENTRE, p-o., Bristol t., Ontario co., N. Y., 208 W. Albany, 344 W.

BRISTOL CHANNEL, an arm of the Atlantic, entering between St. Ann's Head on the N. & Land's End on the S., extending into the S.W. part of Great Britain, between lat. 50° & 51° 40′ N., & lon. 3° & 5° 30′ W., bounded N.ward by S. Wales, & S. by the Engl. cos. Somerset, Devon, & Cornwall. At its E. extremity it terminates in the estuary of the Severn, besides which riv. it receives the Parrat, Taw, Torridge, Taff, & Towy. Sandy isl., with light-house, is in the mouth of the channel, & the towns of Ilfracombe, Combe-Martin, Watchet, Swansea, Kidwelly, & Tenby, are on its coasts. It contains Milford haven, Carmarthen Bay, & Swansea Bay, on the N., & Barnstable, Porlock, & Bridgewater Bay on the S. Its tides flow rapidly upward, & meeting with the currents of the Severn, cause the phenomenon called the bore.

BRITAIN, or GREAT BRITAIN, including England & Scotland, is the largest isl. of Europe, & the principal of the group of the British Isles, bounded on the N. & E. by the German Ocean, on the S. separated from France by the English Channel; bounded on the W. by the Irish Sea, & on the N.W. by the Atlantic Ocean. Its extreme length extends from lat. 50° to 58° 40′ N., or about 587 m.; its greatest breadth from lon. 5° 45′ W. to 1° 45′ E., or about 360 m. In general form it is wedge-shaped, being broadest at its S. extremity, & narrowest at its northern. Its eastern coast forms a waving, continuous, & rarely broken line, but the western coast is extremely irregular, & deeply indented with many bays & arms of the sea, interspersed with numerous isls. The S.E. part of Britain is a level alluvial surface; the centre undulating & hilly; the western & N.western mountainous & irregular. In the N. & W., primary strata & granite rocks prevail, in the middle districts, coal, lime, salt, & ironstone are abundant, & these are succeeded in England, on its E. & S.E. valleys, by tertiary chalk & the newer geological formations. A mntn. range, more or less elevated, extends from S. to N. of the isl., running through Cornwall, Devonshire, Somersetshire, & thence through Wales, varying in elevation from 1,500 to 3,500 ft. Another branch extends from the Cotswold hills, Gloucestershire, & runs through Derbyshire, Staffordshire, Yorkshire, Cumberland, Westmoreland, & Northumberland, with elev. from 2,000 to 3,000 ft.; succeeding these are the Cheviots, the Lammermoors, & the great Grampian range which intersect Scotland, & whose extreme altitude is measured by Ben Nevis on the W., & Ben Macdhui on the N.E., both attaining an elevation of upwards of 4,300 ft. The most considerable rivers are the Severn, Medway, Dee, Mersey, Clyde, on the W. coast, & the Thames, Trent, Humber, Tyne, Forth, Tay, & Spey, on the E. coast. The principal lakes are those of Cumberland & Westmoreland in England, & L. Lomond, Tay, Maree, &c., in Scotland. The principal bays & estuaries are the Bristol Channel, Cardigan Bay, Lancaster Bay, the Solway Firth, Firth of of Clyde on the W., & the Thames mouth, the Wash, the Humber, the Firths of Forth, Tay, Murray, & Cromarty on the E., while on the S. there are Falmouth, Plymouth, Portsmouth, & other important bays and harbors.

The British Islands include Ireland, the Isle of Wight, Anglesea, Man, the Scilly isls., Bute, Arran, the Hebrides, Orkney, & Shetland isls. The climate of Britain is greatly modified by its insular situation, the extremes both of summer & winter temperature being much less than that of corresponding latitudes on a continental surface. The mean annual temperature is about 49° Fahrenheit. The extreme summer heat seldom exceeds 80° Fahr., & the winter cold, with rare exceptions, does not extend beyond 25° to 32°. The annual fall of rain averages about 32 inches. Most rain falls on the W. side of the isld. (from 36 to 40 inches), the E. coast being comparatively dry (25 inches), but a cold N.E. & E. wind prevails more on the E. coast, while a warm W. & S.W. blows on the W.; from this reason, joined to the nature of the soil & elevation of the surface, the eastern half of the island is more an agricultural, while the W. is more a grazing country. Though variable, the climate of Britain is found, from tables of longevity, to be one of the most salubrious in the world, while the very general cultivation & drainage of the soil have removed those maladies that originate in marsh effluvia. Within the last century the average longevity of the population has been greatly increased. In 1800 the average mortality in England was 1 in 32, in 1847 1 in 45. The area of Britain is 90,038 sq. miles; including Ireland, the total area is 122,550 sq. miles, or 78,432,648 acres. In 1710 the population of England & Scotland amounted to 6,116,337; in 1801 to 10,942,646; in 1821 the population of the United Kingdom, including Irel., was 21,202,966; in 1831, 24,410,429; in 1841, 27,019,558; & in 1851, 27,675,324.

The following table shows the population of Great Britain and Ireland, the area in statute acres and square miles, also the number of acres to a person, & the number of persons to a square mile:

The British population is spread over a great multitude of islands which rise between the Atlantic Ocean & the North Sea, the large Island of Great Britain being the chief of the group. This island is surrounded by the Isle of Man, Anglesey, the Scilly Islands, the Isle of Wight, the outlaying Channel Islands, the Shetland Islands, the Orkneys, & the Hebrides. Five hundred islands have been numbered, but inhabitants were only found on one hundred & seventy-five islands on the day of the census in 1851. The British Isles extend over 11 degrees of latitude & 10 degrees of longitude; consequently, in the most northerly of the Shetlands, the night in the summer solstice is three hours shorter than in Jersey; & the sun rises & sets on the east coast of England 47 minutes before it rises & sets on the west coast of Ireland.

In the earliest period of our written history, these islands were peopled by Celts; Britain was their holy island, & the seat of their schools & most sacred groves. The isles of Anglesey & Man, both known under the name of Mona to the Romans, were the seats of the Druidic hierarchy & worship. Iona, or Icolmkill, a small island in the Hebrides, now containing 604 inhabitants, is celebrated as an early seat of Christianity. It was the station of St. Columba, who founded an order of missionaries there, & thus contributed to the diffusion of Christianity over Britain. The celebrated ruins on the island consist of a cathedral, a nunnery, & St. Oran's chapel, together with many ancient tombs & crosses; this island is often visited by tourists to the Western Highlands, & is only ten miles from the far-famed Staffa.

The population of the Island of Great Britain in 1851, was 20,536,357; Ireland contained 6,553,357 inhabitants; Anglesey, the next most populous island in the group, had 57,318 inhabitants; Jersey, 57,020; the Isle of Man, 52,344; the Isle of Wight, 50,324; Guernsey, 29,757; Lewis, 22,918; Skye, 21,528; Shetland, 20,936; Orkney, 16,668; Islay, 12,334; Bute, 9,351; Mull, 7,485; & Arran, 5,857; 17 islands contained a population ranging from 4,006 to 1,064; 52 had a population ranging from 947 to 105; & the remaining 92 inhabited islands ranged from a population of 92 downwards, until at last we come to an island inhabited by one solitary man.

Divisions.—The shire is an important sub-division of the kingdom; each has a lord-lieutenant, who is also keeper of the archives; a sheriff, an under sheriff, & justices of the peace, all appointed by the Crown; each shire has also a county treasurer & a clerk of the peace, each appointed by the lord-lieutenant; & a county coroner, elected by the freeholders. The revenue of the shires is chiefly derived from rates struck by the justices of the peace in counties at quarter sessions, & is for the most part appropriated in maintaining bridges, lunatic asylums, gaols, prisoners, & police. The terms "hundreds" & "tythings" had their origin in a system of numeration, but whether they represented persons, families, or holdings, is difficult to determine. In process of time, what was once a number became a name, & for a long period the terms have ceased to measure either area or population, as is evidenced by the fact that the hundreds in the survey after the Conquest, & the hundreds still remaining, differ widely in both elements, &, moreover, the present hundred is different in extent in the various counties; for instance, in Gloucestershire, the hundred contains on an average 29,000 acres; in Herefordshire, 49,000; & in Shropshire, 63,000. The hide was the lot or share of the first settler.

The sessional divisions existing in all the counties of England & Wales, for the purposes of special & petty sessions, are in general based on the hundreds & other ancient county sub-divisions. The justices have power to alter these divisions for the convenience of holding sessions, but they have no authority to alter the ancient hundreds. There are 609 sessional divisions in England & Wales, & for the purposes of assize & gaol delivery, eight circuits, besides the jurisdiction of the central criminal court. A Saxon burgh, or borough, was a hundred, or an assemblage of hundreds, surrounded by a moat or wall. As ancient boroughs fell into decay, new ones sprung up, & many towns not formerly boroughs, have been created boroughs for purposes not very intelligible. The affairs of municipal boroughs are administered by a mayor, aldermen, & other functionaries.

The 196 reformed boroughs in England & Wales contain a total population of 4,345,269 inhabitants; the population of 64 range under 5,000; 43 from 5,000 to 10,000; 68 from 10,000 to 50,000; 14 from 50,000 to 100,000; 4 from 100,000 to 200,000; & 3 above 200,000. The city of London is still unreformed, & therefore not included in these. Scotland contains 83 royal & municipal burghs, having a total population of 752,777 inhabitants; 55 have a population under 5,000; 16 from 5,000 to 10,000; 11 from 10,000 to 70,000; & 1 148,000.

The minor sub-divisions of townships, parishes, & manors, were re-distributed by William the Conqueror, after the battle of Hastings, & apportioned among the chieftains in his army. The Ecclesiastical districts & dioceses were designed exclusively for spiritual purposes, their boundaries are quite ignored by the general public, & rarely known by any secular officers, while, in many cases, even the clergy themselves, unprovided with maps or plans, are uncertain as to the limits of their respective cures. The division of the country ecclesiastically in Dioceses, Archdeaconries, & Deaneries, took place at a very early period. Most of the present bishopries were founded in Saxon times. The dioceses, on their first formation, had their limits co-extensive with the boundaries of the kingdom of the sovereigns who formed them; but sub-divisions were soon discovered to be necessary, & various princes subsequently made repeated alterations, until at length the whole arrangement settled into its existing shape.

The indigenous vegetation of Britain partakes of the character of that of the contiguous parts of Europe. All the grains & grasses, & the common European fruits, grow in almost all districts & situations, not too elevated, & both agriculture & horticulture have been brought to a great degree of perfection. The breeds of horses, cattle, sheep, & other useful animals, are also of the best description. Of wild animals, the fox, badger, wild cat, stoat, martin, otter, squirrel, hedgehog, dormouse, mole, mouse, hare, & rabbit, are the principal. The wolf, bear, beaver, & wild ox have become extinct for several centuries. The stag & fallow deer are still abundant in several localities. The great bustard & capercailzie are the only birds known to have become extinct in Britain. The bittern, eagle, & other birds of prey are becoming daily more rare. Great Britain is the most favored country in the world for the development of mineral industry. Fuel, the indispensable agent in the treatment of metalliferous ores, & the most powerful element in the production of motive force, is distributed unequally throughout England, Scotland & Ireland. The coal formation in these three divisions of the British empire, occupies rich & widely-spread basins, several of which, especially those of Newcastle-on-Tyne, Scotland & Wales being near the sea, are enabled to export the coal to those places where the metalliferous ores exist in abundance, but where, as in Cornwall, the absence of fuel renders their being worked both costly & difficult. The ores of iron, abundantly distributed in several of the coal basins, add greatly to the value of these. Each one so circumstanced has become the centre of a metalliferous district, where numerous works produce iron at a price so moderate, as almost to defy competition. The insular position of Great Britain, which facilitates the shipment of coal to the places where it is required, is equally important in transporting the iron by sea to any of the seaports of the world. These highly-favorable causes have given great development to the operations of coal mining, & the manufacture of iron, & especially since the application of cast iron for the purposes of constructing railroads. The quantity of cast iron produced in 1850 was 2,250,000 tons. The quantity of coal raised was estimated at 34,750 tons. These sources of wealth in coal & iron, which are alone sufficient to place a country at the head of mineral industry, are not the only ones possessed by Britain. Nature has given it mines of copper, tin, & of lead, of great richness. The annual production of copper is 12,000 tons; of tin ore, 11,000 tons; & of lead, 58,701 tons.

The total amount of land under cultivation and pasture in the United Kingdom has been roughly estimated at 48,779,000 ac.; of this 20,000,000 ac. are supposed to be annually under crop, gardens, &c. The amount of corn, after deducting seed, is estimated at 54,232,000 qrs.; & the total value of agricul. produce, £227,771,548. The value of real property assessed to the property-tax in Great Britain in 1851 was £105,529,962. The gross rental of Ireland amounts to £12,000,000, forming a total of £117,529,962. An approximate estimate of the gross annual produce of British manufactures makes the value £122,000,000.

Manufactures.—In the order of their importance, we begin with cotton The history of this manufacture, which now employs more hands than any other within Britain, & furnishes above one-third in value of the whole exports, is remarkable. The raw material is of vegetable origin, & is obtained from the internal coating of the pod or seed of the gossypium, of which there are several varieties—some growing as a tree or shrub, & others as an annual herbaceous plant. It is from the latter that the far greater part of the supply is obtained; & for this supply Britain is entirely dependent on other countries. Cotton grows in India, & would undoubtedly thrive well in many of the colonies; but the present supply is derived from the United States of America. In so far, therefore, as regards the raw material, Britain has no advantage in the market over other competitors; but her superiority heretofore has been in the admirable perfection of the machinery employed. The inventions of Arkwright, Hargreaves, Compton & Cartwright, have given advantages to a country possessing like Britain exhaustless fields of coal, vast accumulations of capital, & a dense & industrious population.

Woollens.—This is the most ancient, & was for centuries the great staple manufacture. The flocks of Britain furnished wool of peculiar excellence, & in abundance for home demand, & a large surplus for exportation. Though the manufacture cannot boast of an extension like that of cotton, it holds the next place to it; & besides working up the greater part of the wool grown in Britain, draws largely on other countries for additional supplies. In the finer broadcloths, Britain has formidable competitors in the Belgians, from whose forefathers the Britons may be said to have learned this branch, & also in the Saxons; but in other branches of the woollen manufacture the British superiority is decided. The chief seats of the woollen manufacture in England are Yorkshire, Lancashire, Gloucestershire, & Wiltshire, the latter being the most distinguished for broadcloths; Norfolk for worsted stuffs; Leicestershire & Nottinghamshire for woollen hosiery; blankets & flannels have numerous localities, but for the finer qualities the W. of England & several of the Welch counties are most celebrated. Carpets of every quality & pattern are extensively made at Kidderminster, Cirencester, Worcester, &c., but those of Wilton & Axminster are so superior as to suffer little by comparison with the celebrated fabrics of Turkey & Persia, & the matchless Gobelin Tapestry of France. A particular species of woollen manufacture, in which the resources of modern ingenuity are signally displayed, is that of shoddy. Its raw material is woollen rags, which, after various purifying processes, are reduced to their original wool, then re-spun, re-dyed, & re-manufactured. Formerly the article produced was so coarse as to be fit only for padding & similar purposes, but now, either alone or with a partial mixture of raw wool, shoddy is made into flushings, druggets, pilot & other great coats, carpets & table covers, some of the last of great beauty. The principal seat of the shoddy trade is Dewsbury, about 8 m. from Leeds. The woollen manufacture of Ireland is on a very limited scale, being confined to a few broadcloth factories near Dublin & Cork, & a few blankets & flannels, the former in Kilkenny & the latter at Wicklow. Scotland has made much more progress; the chief seats of the Scotch woollens are, Aberdeen for cloths, chiefly coarse, & the spinning of worsted; Kilmarnock for carpets, bonnets & shawls; Stirling & its neighborhood for carpets & tartans; Galashiels, Jedburg, & also a number of small towns along the foot of the Ochils, for narrow cloths of several varieties, tartans, shawls, plaids, &c.; Inverness for tartans; & Hawick for hosiery.

Linen.—In England the spinning of flax is carried on to a great extent, but its manufacture into cloth is comparatively limited. A considerable quantity of damask & diaper is made at Barnsley. Linen is the great staple of Ireland, & was long, in regard to textile fabrics, the staple also of Scotland. In the former, extraordinary means were employed to foster it. It early fixed its seat in the N., particularly near Belfast, & there the great changes which have taken place in the mode of manufacture, by the substitution of spinning mills & factories for the domestic wheel & loom, appear only to have fixed it more permanently. Almost the only form into which flax is manufactured in Ireland is plain linen, chiefly shirtings. In Scotland the manufacture assumes greater variety. Besides plain linen, it has manufactures of Osnaburghs, sheetings, sailcloth, sacking, &c., principally at Dundee; & of diaper & damask at Dunfermline. The staples of both towns are by far the most important of their kind in Britain.

Silk.—Here the raw material is, like cotton, entirely of foreign production. This great branch of manufacture, in regard to which, at least in finer fabrics, Britain must yield the palm of superiority to the French & Belgians. The number of silk mills is considerable, & confined chiefly to England. Paisley is almost the only town in Scotland where it is carried on to a great extent, & even there the shawls of unrivalled excellence are generally a mixed fabric of silk & wool. The chief seats of the silk trade in England are, the district of Spitalsfield in London, Manchester, & Coventry.

Beside the manufactures already mentioned, there is a great number which, though separately of less importance, absorb immense sums of capital, exhibit many of the most wonderful specimens of human ingenuity, & gives subsistence to millions of the population. We can do little more than name the most prominent. Of iron, the first process is converting ores into metals; & thence the additional step of converting it from its first smelted state into malleable iron, which, by undergoing a new process, steel is produced. Vast processes remain behind, & constitute numerous branches of manufacture under the general name of hardware. Several of the articles produced are of great bulk & magnitude, & many of them are so small as to be almost microscopic. To the former class belong iron bridges,—no longer suspension only, but tubular,—one of the structures of this kind now spans the Menai Strait; immense steam engines, & machinery of every kind, adapted to all the improvements of the age. Of the minor articles of hardware, the artisans of Sheffield & Birmingham produce a great variety; & of the precious metals, plate, jewellery & watches are made extensively, but nowhere more perfect than in London.—Porcelain, classic in shapes, gorgeous in colors, & exquisite in designs; & the potteries of Stafford are far famed. The manufactures of glass too, wrought into numerous forms of beauty & utility in the establishments at Newcastle & South Shields, excites the admiration. Another manufacture is that of paper, of vast extent, & in its processes exhibits some of the highest triumphs which human ingenuity has yet attained. In connection with it are various manufactures of which it may be considered as directly or indirectly the source—type founding, printing books, &c. The manufacture of leather, including its various subdivisions of tanning, currying, shoe, glove & harness making, with numerous minor branches in which leather is employed. The list of manufactures would be incomplete did we not enumerate hats, soap & candles, sugar refining, & the various chemicals on which the textile manufactures in particular depend for accomplishing their nicer processes, as bleaching, dyeing, &c.

Banks, &c.—The circulation of the Bank of England for the month ending Oct. 2d, 1852, was £21,948,954; of the private banks, joint stock banks, & also of the banks of Scotland & of Ireland, £14,788,865; total, £36,736,816, equal to $180,000,000. There are in Britain & Ireland, 65 insurance companies, in which were insured farming stock exempt from duty, in 1851, £59,402,077; besides there are 160 life insurance offices in London only. In November, 1851, there were 477 savings' banks in England & Wales, 43 in Scotland, 51 in Ireland, & 2 in the channel islands; total, 574. The number of accounts then open was 1,161,858; the total amount owing to depositors was £30,184,604, 11s. 2d.; the amount invested with the commissioners for reducing the National Debt was £30,173,347, & 8,680 annuities had been granted, to the amount of £153,567. The annual expenses of management, including all salaries, were £103,254.

Education.—Elementary instruction is furnished the poorer classes of children by endowed & charity schools, & the children of the middle classes are mostly educated at private schools. For the instruction of the clergy, gentry, &c., are the following institutions, viz., in England: the University of Oxford (19 colleges & 5 halls), Cambridge University (13 colleges & 4 halls), London University, & the University of Durham; in Scotland, University of St. Andrew's (2 colleges), University of Glasgow, University of Aberdeen (2 colleges), & University of Edinburgh; in Ireland, Dublin University, Royal College of St. Patrick, at Maynooth, & the Royal Belfast Academical Institution. And there are the King's College, London; St. Cuthbert's, Ushaw; Stonyhurst College; Manchester New College; St. Mary's College, Oscott; St. Patrick's College, Carlow; St. Edmund's College, near Ware; Colleges of St. Peter & St. Paul, near Bath; Spring Hill College, Birmingham; Stepney College; College of St. Gregory the Great, near Bath; Countess of Huntington's College, at Cheshunt; Baptist College, at Bristol; Airdale College, near Bradford; Protestant Dissenters' College, Rotherham; Presbyterian College, at Carmaerthen; St. Ryan's College, Kilkenny; Huddersfield College; Lancashire Independent College; Wesley College, near Sheffield; Queen's College, Birmingham; Wesleyan Collegiate Institution, at Taunton; Western College, at Plymouth; West of England Dissenters' Proprietary School, Taunton; St. Patrick's College, Thurles; New College, London; Owen's College, Manchester; Bedford Grammar School; Brecon Independent College; St. David's College, Lampeter. And there are also St. Augustine's College (Missionary), Canterbury; Royal Military College, Sandhurst; Royal Naval College, Portsmouth; East India College, Haileybury; & Royal Veterinary College, Camden Town; & 19 Foundation Schools in England. In the year ending October 31st, 1851, there had been 2,310 schools in connection with the Education Commission inspected in England & Scotland. They included 1,713 Church of England schools in England & Wales, 282 Protestant Dissenting schools in England & Wales, 98 Roman Catholic schools in Great Britain, & 217 Presbyterian schools in Scotland, of which 91 were of the Free Church. Accommodation was afforded in these schools for 299,425 scholars; the average number of children in attendance was 271,126, & the number present at examination was 256,888. The number of certificated teachers was 883, & the number of pupil teachers, 4,815. The total yearly expenditure was £213,927, an average of 18s. 2¼d. per scholar; the total income was £204,243, of which £84,039 was from school pence, & £86,999 from local subscriptions & collections. The sum voted for Public Education in 1852, in Great Britain, was £160,000 ($800,000); in Ireland, £164,577 ($823,885).

Export, Imports, &c.—In 1800 the annual exports of the British & Irish produce amounted to £35,903,000; the exports of foreign & colonial produce to £7,271,000, being a total of £43,174,000. The imports for same year amounted to £24,066,000. In 1852, the British & Irish exports to foreign countries were £72,049,367; to the colonies, £20,430,369; total, £92,479,736. The imports for the same year amounted to £109,345,409. The total number of vessels, their tonnage, & number of persons navigating the same, were in 1852, 34,402 vessels, 1,225 of which were propelled by steam; tonnage, 4,424,392; navigated by 243,512 men & boys. The total length of railroads authorized by parliament up to the 31st Dec., 1851, amounted to 11,962 miles; capital £368,428,000. The total length of railroads completed in Great Britain & Ireland at the end of the year 1853, was 7,774 m.; cost of construction, up to July 1853, £263,636,320, equal to $1,315,000,000. An almost instantaneous communication by electric telegraph has also been established throughout Great Britain & Ireland. Of other associated industrial companies, the investments are, in mining companies, £9,978,747; gas cos., £6,415,295; assurance cos., £6,000,000. The gross revenue of the Post Office for the year ending Jan. 5th, 1852, was £2,422,168; the cost of management was £1,304,163; the net revenue £1,118,004. The total number of letters in 1851 was 360,647,187, of which 36,512,649 were in Scotland, & 35,982,782 in Ireland. The payment made to the various railroad companies for the conveyance of mails for work done within the year, was £155,575 & £87,272 for work done in previous years. The total number of money orders issued in the year 1851, was 4,661,025; the amount £8,880,420. In 1851 the persons employed were in England & Wales 13,912; in Ireland, 1,927; in Scotland, 2,190, & in the colonies 939. The total amount paid to these persons was £727,120.

Nothing is known historically of Britain before the invasion of Cæsar, except a few obscure allusions, about 55, B. C. It is conjectured to have been originally peopled from the adjoining continent, first by the Celts from Gaul, & afterwards by Teutonic tribes from Germany & Scandinavia. The original Gaelic name, Albion (Albiun "white Isl."), is supposed to be derived from the appearance of its chalk cliffs. Britin formed by the Romans into Brittania, is conjectured to have been the name of the people, signifying a divided or separated nation. The Britons were at this period in a semi-barbarous state; but warlike, & possessed of moral courage & great bravery. After the invasion of Cæsar, the Romans did not return to Britain for about a century. The conquests were again resumed by Claudius, & under successive emperors & generals, especially Agricola, Antonius Pius, Severus, Caracalla; it was subdued & occupied till about A. D. 420, when it was finally abandoned by the Romans. Agricola built a wall & series of forts between the firths of Forth & Clyde, in order to bound the empire, & defend it from the invasions of the Caledonians. Adrian further circumscribed the Roman boundaries, by erecting a mud wall from the Solway Firth to the Tyne in Northumberland, & about the beginning of 3d century, Severus built a stone wall in the same direction, portions of which still remain. It was 68 m. long, 12 feet high, & 8 feet in thickness. There was a deep ditch on the N. side, & a road on the S., with 18 turrets & castles at intervals, along the line. After the termination of the Roman power, the conquest of the greater part of Britain was made by the Saxons, Jutes, & Angles, the latter giving their name to England; this conquest occupied about 130 years. In 1066 the Normans made a descent on England & possessed themselves of a great part of the country. In 1172 Ireland was subdued, & came under British government. In 1215 Magna Charta was obtained by the Barons. In 1283 Wales was united to England. In 1604 the accession of James VI., united the crown of Scotland to that of England. A civil war in Britain terminated in the execution of Charles I. in 1649. William III. was called to the throne after the revolution of 1688. The legislative union of Scotland & England took place in 1707. The American war began in 1776 & terminated 1784. The French revolution & war with France began in 1793, & terminated by the battle of Waterloo, June 15, 1815. The legislative union of Ireland with Britain, took place in 1799. In 1829 the Catholic Emancipation Act was passed; & a reform of the British parliamentary representation was effected by the Act of 1832.

The govern. of the united kgdm. is a limited monarchy. The legislative authority is vested in the sovereign, & the parl. or Houses of Lords & Commons, the concurrence of all which estates is necessary to the enactment of new laws, or to the repeal of those already in force. The monarchy is hereditary, under certain limitations. The house of peers, consisting of the Lords spiritual & temporal, is at present composed of 3 princes of blood-royal, 2 archbishops, 20 dukes, 20 marquises, 117 earls, 22 viscounts, 24 Engl. & 4 Irish bshps., 198 barons, peers of Engl., with 16 Scottish & 28 Irish representative peers,—in all 454 mems. The H. of C. is composed of 658 mems., of whom 144 sit as representatives of Engl. cos., 4 for the 2 univs. of Oxford & Cambridge, & 323 for Engl. cities & bors.,—in all 471 mems. for Engl. 15 mems. represent the Welsh cos., & 14 the cities & bors. of Wales; 30 mems. the cos. & 23 the cities & burghs of Scotl.; 64 mems. the cos. & 39 for the cities & bors. of Irel., & 2 mems. sit for the univ. of Dublin. Right of voting for county mems. in Engl. & Wales, is in all freeholders possessing land inherited, or if purchased in actual occupation of the value of £40 yearly, & of estate for life of £10 a-year under any circumstances; also tenants of land paying £50 rent; & in Scotland & Ireland, in freeholders of £10 per annum, & tenants, leaseholders, & copyholders nearly as in Engl. Right of voting for bor. representatives, is uniformly in occupiers of buildings with land to the value of £10 yearly, besides certain parties possessed of anc. privileges. The number of electors according to the registration of 1850, was:—

The cabinet council for carrying on the business of the state is composed of the president of the privy council, the lord high chancellor, first lord of the treasury, lord privy seal, chancellor of the exchequer, three secretaries of state, viz., home, foreign, & colonial affairs, the commander-in-chief of the forces, first lord of the admiralty, presids. of the boards of control (India), & of trade, sec. at war, & the paymaster-general. The courts of law & local government vary in different divisions of the empire; but each co. throughout the kingdom is governed by a lieutenant, sheriff & other officers appointed by the crown. The episcop. form of church government, of which the sovereign is the head, is the state estab. religion in England & Ireland, & the presbyterian form, that of Scotland. There is, however, the most complete toleration of all other religious sects throughout the empire. The most perfect degree of personal freedom is guaranteed in Britain by the Habeas Corpus act, which secures to the suspected prisoner a trial or liberation within a limited time,—the trial by jury, the liberty of the press, liberty of conscience, the right of franchise, & the total abolition of slavery. Each city & munic bor. has the election of its own separate corporate officers. The colonies have each a governor appointed by the crown; & who is assisted in each of the Brit. N. Amer. colonies by a council & legislative assembly, as also in each of the W. India isls., except St. Lucia & Trinidad. These two isls., & Brit. Guiana, Gibraltar, Malta, the Cape of Good Hope, Ceylon, the Mauritius, & Hong Kong, are placed under a governor & council, & the orders of the sovereign in council; the Guinea settlements, all the Australasian colonies, the Falkland isls., & St. Helena, are ruled by a governor, council, & Brit. acts of parl.; & Honduras is governed by a superintendent & magistrates.

Army & Navy.—The following were the numbers of men voted by the House of Commons for the military & naval services of the united kingdom, for the years 1850–51 & 1851–52, in each year respectively:—military, 175,919 & 162,630. The naval force at the same dates, were 39,093 & 38,957 men. On Jan. 1st., 1851, there were 21 admirals, 27 vice-admirals, 51 rear-admirals, 516 captains, 605 commanders, & 1,437 lieutenants in the service. The number of enrolled militia amounts to 80,000 men. The vessels composing the navy, are:— making a total of 420 vessels, mounting 15,026 guns; of which 114 are steamers, propelled by engines of an aggregate power 36,190 horses. This does not include the fleet of mail steamers, which are only armed with light six-pounder guns.

Revenue.—About two-thirds of the public rev. of the united kingdom is derived from duties of customs & excise; the remainder from stamps, post office, & assessed & income taxes. The annual rev. including expense of collecting from 1841 to 1848, has varied from 54 millions to 57 millions. The revenue for the year ending Jan. 1853, amounted to £57,755,571. Expense, £55,229,867. Surplus, £2,526,204.

British Empire (The), one of the most civilized & important states of Europe, & the most powerful & extensive on the earth. It consists of the Islands of Great Britain & Ireland, the smaller islands contiguous to them, & various colonies & dependencies scattered over the globe, from the equator to the frozen regions of the South, & the North, extending through every clime. Great Britain, the largest & most populous of the British Islands, includes the formerly independent kingdoms of England & Scotland, which, with Ireland, compose what is termed the United Kingdom of Great Britain & Ireland. Capital, London, the commercial metropolis of the world. The following table presents at one view this immense territory, its area in square miles, & the last census in every portion attainable:

BROOKLYN, city, cap. of Kings co., N. Y., is situated in 40° 41′ 50″ N. lat., & 73° 59′ 30″ W. lon., at the west end of Long Island, opposite to the south part of the city of New York, 146 m. S. Albany, 226 W. The population in 1810 was 4,402; in 1820, 7,175; 1830, 15,396; in 1840, 36,233; in 1850, 96,868; and in 1854, 120,000. It is the second place in population in the state, and the seventh in the United States. It is separated from the south part of the city of New York by the East river, a strait of the ocean which connects Long Island Sound with the bay and harbor of New York, ¾ m. wide. It is connected with the city of New York by six steam ferries, well provided with commodious boats.

The ground on which Brooklyn is built is, for the most part, more elevated than that of the city of New York. On the heights it presents a bold front, elevated 70 feet above tide water, affording a delightful view of the city & harbor of New York. The islands, the bay, & particularly Governor's Island, with its fine fortifications, & the shores of New Jersey, furnish a prospect rarely equalled, & scarcely surpassed. The city is regularly laid out, & the streets, with the exception of Fulton street, the oldest, are generally straight, crossing each other at right angles, and are from 50 to 60 feet wide, and a number of them have a greater width. A large number of the streets, including all within the thickly-settled parts, are paved and lighted. Many of the streets are bordered with trees, giving the place a peculiarly rural aspect. Fulton street, originally narrow in its lower part, has been amply widened, & is bordered with ranges of lofty brick stores, and now presents a commanding entrance to the city.

The City Hall, constructed of white marble, is 162 feet long, 102 feet wide, 2 stories high, with a basement and attic, & the top of the cupola is 135 feet above the base of the edifice. It stands on a triangular piece of ground formed by the intersection of Fulton, Court, & Joralemon streets. The Brooklyn Institute, Washington street, near Concord, chartered in 1824 as the Apprentices Library; in 1843 it received its present name. Connected with this institution is a youths' free library, open to all minors. Literary and scientific lectures of a high order are given during the winter months. The jail is a substantial & handsome building of freestone, in the E. part of the city. The Lyceum, in Washington street, is a fine granite building, with a spacious & commodious lecture-room. The harbor of Brooklyn is extensive, & susceptible of much improvement by the erection of wharves & slips. The Atlantic dock is a large basin, covering 42¼ acres, with a sufficient depth of water for the largest ships. This basin lies within Red Hook Point, with piers extending for a distance of 300 feet on Buttermilk Channel; on the piers are built large & extensive granite warehouses. The Navy Yard is the most extensive naval depôt in the United States, situated on the south side of Wallabout bay, at the north-eastern part of the city, & contains 45 acres of land. It is enclosed by a substantial brick wall on the land side, and on the left hand, as you enter its gate, there is a flower garden most tastefully arranged.

This spacious yard affords sufficient room for the residence of the officers, machine shops, storehouses, &c. The most conspicuous buildings are two large edifices, 250 feet long by 125 feet wide, and 120 feet high, capable of containing the largest ships of war while being built. In time of peace several national vessels are usually to be seen here, either laid up or undergoing repairs. A vast amount of cannon, cannon balls, bombs, and all kinds of munitions of war, is always on hand at this depôt. The Brooklyn Dry Dock is located at the Navy Yard, & is capable of receiving the largest ships of war. This is a magnificent work, unequalled by any of the kind in America, & scarcely surpassed by any in the world. The foundation is 406 feet long by 120 wide, and the main chamber or basin is 286 feet long by 30 wide at the bottom, & 307 feet long and 98 wide at the top. The weight of the iron folding gates is 150 tons; the pumps discharge 40,000 gallons per minute. The engine-house is a fire-proof building, containing machinery of the most perfect kind. The whole occupied sixteen years in the course of construction. The United States Naval Lyceum was organized in 1835, by the officers of the navy & marine corps. The objects of its founders and supporters have been to encourage a spirit of harmony in the service, the promotion of useful knowledge generally, and more especially such acquirements as are adapted to men of their sphere of action, to aid them in increased efficiency. The Lyceum contains an interesting collection of curiosities, geological and mineralogical cabinets, which have been collected from almost every clime & country, by the naval officers, and presented to the institution. Added to the above, there are portraits of a number of our Presidents and naval and military commanders, who have been conspicuous in the most thrilling & interesting events chronicled in the history of our country. There is also a valuable library of several thousand volumes. Antiquities, such as an idol from the ruins of the temple of the Sun, S. A.; a stone from the house of Herod at Jerusalem; an Egyptian tombstone, supposed to be four thousand years old; Egyptian mummy, partly uncovered; specimens of mosaic pavement from Pompeii; lava from Herculaneum; jar from the tomb of Augustus Cæsar; links of the chain that was placed across the Hudson river in the war of the Revolution; implements of Indian warfare; trophies of war, & various other objects of interest, rendering it a most desirable place for the stranger or citizen to visit. The Naval Hospital is situated at the Wallabout between Brooklyn and Williamsburgh. There are 35 acres of land connected with the institution. The building stands on a commanding eminence, built of white marble, & is a well-arranged edifice. There are 70 churches in the city, belonging to the different denominations, as follows:—6 Baptist, 1 Reformed, 6 Congregational, 6 Dutch Reformed, 11 Episcopal, 1 Friends, 17 Methodist, 8 Presbyterian, 7 Roman Catholic, 1 Swedenborgian, 1 Second Advent, 1 Unitarian, & 1 Universalist. The industrial establishments of Brooklyn are many & extensive. In 1850 the capital employed in manufactures amounted to $3,422,396; value of manufactured articles, $8,810,875. There were in 1853, 5 banks, with an aggregate capital of $1,500,000.

Brooklyn was incorporated as a village in 1816, and as a city with greatly extended limits in 1834. It is divided into eleven wards, & is governed by a Mayor & a board of twenty-two Aldermen, two from each ward, elected by the people. It was first settled in 1636, but it did not choose regular magistrates until 1646, though some kind of authority was previously established. The first house for public worship, which was a Dutch church, was erected 1666, which stood one mile from Fulton ferry, in the centre of what was afterwards the Trempetse Road. Six years previous to this the Rev. Henricus Selywn had been installed in Brooklyn, with a salary of 600 guilders, or $240, one half of which was paid by the inhabitants & the other half by Fatherland or Holland. An Episcopal church was established in 1766, & St. Ann's church, its successor, was first occupied in 1795. The first Methodist church was incorporated in 1794; the first Presbyterian in 1822; the first Baptist in 1822; & the first Roman Catholic in 1822. The first printing-office was established, & the first newspaper printed in 1798; the paper was called the Long Island Courier, & was printed & edited by the late Thomas Kirk. There are now 6 printing offices, issuing 4 daily & 3 weekly newspapers.

Brooklyn was the theatre of many interesting events during the war of the Revolution. It was occupied by the American army before the battle of Flatbush, which occurred Aug. 27, 1776, & there are now to be seen the remains of the American fortifications erected at that period, though most of them have been obliterated by the regulation of streets. Until recently, Fort Green, in the E. part of the city, remained in a great measure entire. After the fatal battle of Flatbush, the Americans retreated from Long Island, leaving it in possession of the British. At the Wallabout, near the Navy Yard, were moored the British prison ships, where the American prisoners were confined. The first prison ship anchored there was the Whitby. She was crowded with the captives taken in the battle of Long Island. She was first moored there toward the close of October, 1776. In May, 1777, two other ships were moored there, and some of the prisoners were removed to them. In October one of these vessels was burned, & in Feb., 1778, the other was also consumed. Some prisoners perished in the flames. In April following, the "Old Jersey" prison ship was moored in the Wallabout, and all the prisoners, except the sick, were transferred to her. The Jersey was the receiving ship, & the Hope & Falmouth, two ships which supplied the place of those burned, were used for hospital ships until the period of the evacuation, November 25th, 1783.

The "Old Jersey" having been abandoned by the British, rotted at her anchorage in the bay until she sunk; & now her remains are covered by one of the docks in the Navy Yard.

Prisoners were brought from various points where the British were successful, but busy death made room for all. Soon the beach of the Wallabout was strewn with graves; & when the war closed, the bones of 11,500 patriots were in the sand upon the shore of the bay. In the year 1808 the bones of these martyrs were collected from the hill sides in the neighborhood, where they had been slightly interred, & placed in a vault, over the entrance of which is the following inscription:—"Portal to the Tomb of 11,500 Patriot Prisoners who died in dungeons & prison ships in and about the city of New York during the Revolution."

The city is now divided into 11 wards, but should the legislature incorporate Williamsburg & Flatbush with it, the entire territory will be divided into 19 wards, each electing 2 aldermen. This addition will much extend the city limits, & it will then comprise an entire population of about 175,000 inhabitants.

BRUNSWICK (Germ. Braunschweig), DUCHY OF, a state of north Germany, situated (exclusive of Thedinghausen), chiefly between lat. 51° 38′ & 52° 28′ N., & lon. 9° 28′ & 11° 30′ E. In 1853 it was divided into the following districts:

Districts.	Area in sq. m.	Pop. in 1852.
Circle of Brunswick	10,61	69,702
" Wolfenbüttel	10,87	52,662
" Helmstädt	14,44	44,312
" Holzminden	14,92	39,400
" Gandersheim	13,04	42,257
" Blankenburg	8,2	22,492
Total	72,08	270,825

of these 245,000 were Protestants, & the remainder R. Catholics & Jews. Besides this, the reigning duke possesses the princip. of Oels in Silesia, with an area of 817 sq. m., & a pop. of 90,000. The state is composed of 3 large & 6 small isolated & irregular portions of territory. The principal part, with the cap. city, lies between Prussia & Hanover; the 2d extends E. to W. along the S. bound. of Hanover; limited on the E. by Prussia, & W. by the Weser; the 3d lies S.W. of the above, between Prussia, Hanover, & Anhalt. The smaller portions lie partly in Hanover, & partly in Prussia; but, with the exception of Thedinghausen, they are not far distant from the capital. The whole territory has an area of 1,730 sq. m. The country is mountainous in the 2 S. portions, which are partly traversed by the ramifications of the Harz mntns.; the Worm-Berg, 3,230 feet in elevation is the highest point in the Duchy. It is not abundantly watered; the Oeker flows N. past Brunswick; the Leine at Gandersheim, & the Weser on the extreme W. limits of the territory; there are several small lakes in the Harz, & mineral springs at Helmstädt & Seesen. The climate is rigorous in the Harz, where harvest is a month later than in the rest of the territory. Agriculture is the chief source of the wealth of the duchy. The valleys are in general fertile, & the principal products are estim. as follows:—grass, including rye, barley & oats, 575,000 qrs.; seed-oil 1,200 tons, flax, 4,500 tons annually, & tobacco, chicory, hops, & fruits, are raised extensively for export. Cattle-breeding is important; great care is bestowed in the improvement of horses, for which there is a stud in Harzburg, & the sheep are of improved breeds. Timber forms a considerable article of export. Mining is extensively carried on in the Harz mountains; its chf. products are gold, silver, lead, litharge, copper, sulphur, vitriol, & alum. The iron-works employ 9 smelting-houses & 10 furnaces; marble & alabaster are also procured. The manufs. of Brunswick are not important, & are limited chiefly to tobacco, paper, soap, sal-ammoniac, & madder, linen and woollen weaving and spinning, & the manufacture of lacquered wares, glass, & beer. Trade is active, & is much facilitated by the 2 annual fairs at Brunswick, and by railr. to Hanover, Magdeburg, & Neustadt. There are few learned institutions in the duchy, the university of Helmstädt is long since given up, but there are 2 seminaries, 5 gymnasia, 2 normal schools, 21 Latin, & 369 common schools. The library of Wolfenbüttel is celebrated. Brunswick belongs with Hanover, to the German commercial union. The gov. is exercised by an hereditary duke, & based on the constitution of 1832, with a single legislative chamber, composed of 8 deputies of the nobility, 12 from the towns, 10 from the rural districts, & 13 from the general pop. The court of appeal at Wolfenbüttel is the highest legal tribunal. Public revenue for the 3 years, 1852–54, estim. at $4,052,500, besides 170,000 florins from the mediatised principality of Oels. Public debt, 6,444,349 thalers, of which 3,725,000 was on account of railroads, besides the debt of the chamber of finances, amounting to 3,025,108 thalers. Military force in time of peace, 2,476, in war, 4,857 men. The reigning house is the elder branch of the Guelph family, of which the house of Hanover is the younger branch.

BRUNSWICK (Germ. Braunschweig), a city of N. Germany, cap. of the duchy of Brunswick, on the Oeker r., and the Hanover and Brunswick railroad, 113 from Bremen. Lat. (spire of St. Andrea's Church) 52° 16′ 6″ N., lon. 10° 3′ 40″ E. Pop. 42,000, of whom 1,000 were Rom. Catholics, & 500 Jews. It is in general old-fashioned, but has many new streets, and is well-paved and lighted, and the former fortifications are converted into gardens and promenades. Chief edifices, the new palace, a handsome edifice, with fine parks, built on the site of the former ducal residence, which was burned in 1830, opera-house, mint, armory, with a museum & picture-gallery, college, 12 churches, including the cathedral and St. Andrea's church, with a spire 318 feet in elev.; several fountains and monuments, one of which, 60 feet high, commemorates the late duke who was killed at Quatre-Bras. Brunswick has many educational & charitable institutions. a considerable trade, and manufactures of woollen cloths, lacquered wares, & sealing-wax. Its 2 annual fairs, which were formerly resorted to by many thousand merchants, are now much less important. It is the birthplace of the historian Meibom, the theologian Henke, and the poet Lafontaine. In the environs is the ducal palace of Richmond. Brunswick is connected by railroad with Hanover on the W., Hamburg on the N., Magdeburg on the E., and Neustadt on the S. Pop. of the circle 1852, 69,702.

Pop. probably 60,000, including about 7,000 Armenians, 3,000 Greeks, and 1,800 Jews. It is beautifully situated on a declivity, in a very fertile neighborhood, & has a magnificent external appearance, with numerous minarets. Its houses are built mostly of earth or wood, & its streets narrow, but it is kept very clean by an abundance of streams, & it is, upon the whole, one of the most agreeable cities in the East. It has between 200 and 300 mosques, some very handsome; large bazaars, numerous khans and colleges, several churches & synagogues, Armenian and other schools, and extensive suburbs. Its mineral baths have been famous in all ages; they are of various kinds & temperatures, and mostly under cover of fine buildings. N.W. of the city are large swimming pools. The citadel, on a rock, near the centre of the town, is mostly of Genoese construction; and the city contains various remains of antiquity. Brusa is one of the most flourishing commerc. emporiums in the Turkish dom. Its principal trade is in raw silk, of which article its dist., in 1841, produced 66,970 okes; and it has also manufs. of satin, cotton cloths, carpets, tapestry, gauze, & cotton twist, with a large traffic in corn, opium, & meerschaum clay. Princip. imports, cotton cloths and yarn, muslins, figured woollen dresses, dyed sarsanets, Paisley shawls, from Great Britain, other woollens, with nankeens & cotton prints from Germany, France, Switzerland, glass wares from Bohemia, red caps and gold thread, from S. Europe, & cordage, butter, caviare, & iron from Russia. The trade with the interior is facilitated by caravans from Constantinople & Smyrna; that by the sea is carried on from the port of Moudania, on the sea of Marmora. Brusa was anciently the cap. of Bithynia, & after the capture by Orchan in 1356, it continued to be the capital and the burial place of the Turkish sultans, until Amurath removed his seat of empire to Adrianople. Some newly constructed gov. silk factories at Brusa, were destroyed by fire in 1846; the loss was estimated as high as $1,500,000.

Mean temp. of year 49°.6; winter 38°; summer 64°. Fahr. It is the most important city in the kingdom, & the chief seat of public instruction & industry, the resid. of the courts, the seat of the legislative assemblies, courts of appeal, & chamber of commerce. Brussels is remarkable for the number & richness of its anc. buildings; & from the elegance of its new quarters, it ranks among the finest cities of Europe. It consists of an upper or new, & a lower or old town, the former of which is the fashionable quarter, & contains the royal palace, the gov. offices, & the finest streets & hotels; it is well supplied with water, & has many richly sculptured fountains. Its princip. squares are the Place Royale, Place de la Monnaie, with the mint, theatre, & exchange, the Place des Martyres, where the victims of the revolution of 1830 are interred, the Grand Place in the lower town, in which is the Hotel de Ville, a noble gothic edifice, in the grand hall of which, the abdication of Charles V. took place in 1,555. The present modern edifices are the palace of the chambers, the king's palace, the palace of the fine arts, formerly resid. of the dukes of Brabant, & of the govs.-general of Austria, rebuilt in 1746, & now occupied by the public library & museum; the former palace of the Prince of Orange, remarkable for its interior decorations; the church of Notre-dame-de-Bon-Secours, & that of Grand-Béguinage, both of the 17th cent., & the theatre. The anc. buildings comprise the Hôtel de Ville, one of the noblest buildings of the kind in Europe, with a spire of open stone work 364 feet in height, sev. churches, in general decorated with rich sculptures & paintings, the finest of which is the cathed. of St. Gudule, built 1273, & celeb. for its painted glass, numerous statues, and a finely carved pulpit; the church of Notre-dame-de-la-Chapelle, commenced 1134, & that of Notre-dame-des-Victoires of the 13th cent., the Broed-Huys, or old Hotel de Ville, & sev. gates of its anc. walls. The finest promenades are the Allée-Verte, along the canal from Brussels to the Scheldt, & the park, an extens. enclosure, near the royal palace, laid out with avenues of trees, & ornamented with statues. This was the scene of the chief struggle in the revolution of 1830. A statue to Godefroid de Bouillon was inaugurated in 1...; 3 m. N. is the country palace of Laeken. Brussels has nums. & excellent estabs. of public instruction, a free university founded 1834, a primary normal school, polytechnic school, an acad. of painting, sculpture, & engraving, a royal school of music, a school of deaf, dumb, & blind, estab. 1...4, & numerous primary schools & schools of industry. Among its many scientific & literary estabs. is the astronomical observatory, one of the finest in Europe, & a magnet. observ.. the depot gen.. for the archives of the kgdm.; the public library containing 100,000 vols., & the royal library (founded 1837) 70,000 vols., & 2,000 MSS. The museum of painting, nat. history, & antiquities, & an excellent botanic garden. It has an academy of belles-lettres, an exhibition of paintings, and another for the productions of natural industry. Among the private collections are the library of the Bollandists, 6,000 vols., & that of the geographical estab. of M. Ph. Vandermaelen, founded 1850, containing 20,000 vols., & a rich collection of maps, in connexion with a school of geography, and a museum of nat. history. Brussels is the seat of the princip. banks, & of the only mint of the kingdom, & has a savings bank, & many worthy & charitable institutions; it is one of the great centres of Belgian industry, and it is still celeb. for its lace, considered the finest in the world: its other chief manufs. are of fine linens, damask, silk & cotton ribbons, gold & silver embroidery, hats, paper, machinery, jewelry, & mathematical & musical instruments. It has also estabs. for coach building & cabinet making, manufs. of chemical products, soap, porcelain, & crystal, extens. sugar refineries & breweries. It has many extens. typographical & lithographic estabs., which are chiefly employed in reprints of works published in France. The commerce of Brussels is facilitated by a canal, which connects it with Antwerp, & admits vessels of 300 tons burden, by excellent roads, & by railws., which radiate from it in every direction. Brussels is a very anc. city; it is believed to have been founded in the 7th cent.; it was fortfd. in the 11th cent., and was the resid. of the Dukes of Brabant, & afterwards of the Spanish & Austrian govs.-general of the Netherls.; its fortifs. were dismantled by Joseph II. It was, under the French empire, cap. of the dep. of the Dyle; previous to 1830, it was one of the caps. of the kingdom of the Netherlands, and alternately with the Hague, the seat of the court and of the states-general; it is the birth-place of the physicians Vesalius & Van Helmont, and one of the two painters Champaigne.

BUENA VISTA, a rancho 1 m. N.E. of Augostura, on the road to Saltillo, in the state of Coahuila, Mex. Encantada is the southern opening of a pass that is here about 5 m. wide, and narrows at Augostura to about 2 m. On the E. side of the pass, a steep and rough wall of limestone rises to an elevation of 1,000 feet above the level of the valley. And on the W. a chain of hills connecting with more distant mountains, forms a barrier. A wagon road leads through the valley, and between this road and the western chain of hills, runs a small stream that comes from Encantada, and nearer the battle field, a deep, dry ravine. In the immediate vicinity of the battle field, and at the base of the mural precipice on the east, is a small table-land, terminating in many gullies towards the road, or west. On this table-land, from a half-mile to a mile in width, was fought the battle of BUENA VISTA, and in the narrow gullies and precipitous ravines, the most sanguinary melées took place. Here, on the 22d & 23d Feb., 1847, the American army, commanded by Gen. Taylor, (force, 5,000 men; Mexican, 20,000,) completely defeated and routed the Mexican forces under Santa Anna. The Mexicans call the place Augostura.

BUEN AYRE, or BON AIR, one of the Dutch W. I. isls., off the coast of Columbia, 30 m. E. Curaçao. Lat. 12° 20′ N., lon. 68° 27′ W. Length 20 m.; average breadth 4 m. Principal products cattle & salt. Pop. 1847, 1,955, of whom 673 were slaves. It has a vill. with a tolerable harbor.

BUENOS AYRES, a state of the Argentine repub. It extends from the Rio Negro or Cusu on the S. (Lat. 41° S.) along the Atlantic Ocean to the mouth of the Rio de la Plata, and along the whole southern shores of its estuary, and the S. banks of the Parana, as far as the Arroyo del Medio riv., which separates it from Santa Fé (about lat. 38° S.). The W. boundary extends from the mouth of the Neposta riv. in a N.E. direction, to the W. extremity of the Sierra del Vulcan. Area, estimated at about 75,000 sq. m. Pop. 200,000. The N. part includes a portion of the eastern Pampas, & is flat, with lakes and swamps. The S. part comprehends the Sierra del Vulcan, the S.E. the Sierra Ventana. Principal rivs. the Saldana, Salta, Quequin. Climate of N. part mild: ice seldom occurs; mean summer heat 90°. The N. winds prevailing here have the disagreeable character of the Sirocco of Italy; the S. W. winds or pamperos, are hurricanes accompanied with thunder. In S. dist. the climate is colder, but healthy. There is sufficient rain in general throughout both districts, but occasionally there are years of excessive and destructive droughts. The soil is fertile in many places, but there is not a thousandth part under cultiv. Cattle and their produce are the chief sources of wealth. Number of black cattle on pampas said to exceed 1 mill. Hides, hair, horns, tallow, and jerked beef are the exports. Horses, mules, and asses are also exported, & of late the breed of sheep has been improved, & wool has formed an article of export. Formerly the cultivation of the soil was so neglected, that grain was required from abroad; now, wheat is exported to some extent. Buenos Ayres became independent of the Spanish government in 1810, & along with the neighboring states, joined in a confederated republic (the Argentine or La Plata), which was, after a few years, dissolved, and each state had a separate and independent administration, until the revolution of 1852, when the governors of the different states formed a new confederation. The executive is vested in a governor or capt.-general elected for five years, aided by a council of ministers chosen by the governor. The junta or legislative assembly consists of 44 deputies, one-half renewed annually by popular election. A chain of forts has been established along the W. boundary to overawe the Indian population.

BUENOS AYRES ("good air"), the cap. city of the Argentine Republic, is situated on the S. side of the Plata estuary, about 150 m. from the sea, opposite the town Colonia. Lat. 34° 35′ 5″ S., lon. 58° 22′ W. Pop. in 1852, 120,000, of whom 20,000 are foreigners. It covers a surface of about 2 m. in length by 1¼ m. in greatest breadth, & is regularly laid out, all its streets crossing each other at right angles, & now mostly paved with granite. Almost all the houses are but one story in ht., flat-roofed, and built around courtyards. Most of the better sort have gardens attached, and the city is ornamented by cotton, olive, and other plantations. It is ill provided with water, which is wholly brought by carriers from the river. Principal publ. edifices are its churches, most of which are, however, unfinished. The cathed. is a domed building in the great square, in which are also the city hall, a double range of shops fronted by a colonnade, & an obelisk commem. the declaration of independence. In the Franciscan church is a good painting by a native artist, Buenos Ayres has sev. convents, a protestant church, a presbyterian chapel, a foundling hospital, orphan asylum, all built of a fine white stone quarried near the city. The resid. of the dictator & the government offices are in a fort near the river. The university occupies an extensive building, & has a library of 25,000 vols.; besides which there are a superior academy, a military college, various publ. schools, several printing establishments, & manufs. of cigars, carpets, furniture, boots & shoes. The navigation of the Plata, here 36 m. broad, is difficult; & ships drawing 16 feet water are obliged to anchor in the Amarradero, a roadstead 7 or 8 m. distant, to & from which merchandise has to be conveyed by lighters & rude ox-carts. Trade consid'ble and increasing. In 1851 its Exports amounted in value to $10,630,000, includ. calf, deer, goat, nutria, & sheep skins, with the prec. metals, jerked beef, sheep's wool, ox-hides, skins, tallow, horse hair, &c. Total val. of imports in the same year, $30,000,000; those from the U. S. consist principally of unbleached cottons, spirits, soap, sperm candles, dried & other provisions, tobacco, furniture, lumber, &c.; cotton, linen, woollen & other manuf. goods & produce from G. Britain; jewelry, perfumery, & articles of luxury from France; various goods from the other European states. The trade with Chili & Peru is comparatively insignificant. The export of wool has latterly much increased; that of Paraguay tea has declined, with the progressive increase in the import of tea with other goods from China. Buenos Ayres was founded in 1534; in 1776 it became the seat of a vice-royalty. In 1806 it was taken by the English, but it was retaken by the Spaniards in the same year.

BUET (LE), one of the Alps of Savoy, prov. Faucigny, between Chamouni & Sixt, N. Mt. Blanc. Height above the sea, 10,128 feet.

BUFFALO, city, port of entry, & capital Erie co. N. Y., is situated at the entrance of Buffalo creek into Lake Erie: it is at the N.W. extremity of the lake, & near the commencement of its outlet, Niagara riv. Lat. 42° 53′ N., & 78° 56′ W. lon. from Greenwich, Engl. 298 m. W. from Albany, 391 N.W. New York, 183 E. Cleveland, O., 327 from Detroit, & 310 W. Pop. 1810, 1,508; 1820, 2,095; 1830, 8,653; 1840, 18,213; 1845, 29,773; & in 1850, 42,261; & 1854, with the addition of Black Rock, annexed to it in 1853, 75,000.

The city of Buffalo occupies a very important & commanding position at the western terminus of the Erie Canal & the central line of railroad from Albany & Boston, & also the northern termination of the Erie & other railroads, & has communication with the principal cities of the western states, & also with western Canada. It is the eastern port of transhipment of the great lakes Erie, Huron, Michigan, & Superior. Its commerce is immense, employing a vast number of steamers, brigs & sloops, which convey from the several lake ports a large amount of produce, & which from hence is transported to eastern markets by canal & r. r. The ground on which the city is built rises gradually from Buffalo creek on the S., & within a short distance from the lake on the W. it becomes an extended plain, 50 ft. above the surface of Lake Erie. From this elevation is obtained a very picturesque view of the Canadian shore, Niagara riv. & the lake. The streets are broad & straight, crossing each other mostly at right angles. Main st. is 100 ft. in breadth, & extends for a distance of four miles, & is built very compactly with stores, hotels, & expensive private dwellings. The houses generally are constructed with neatness & taste.

The city is extensively lighted with gas, & abundantly supplied with water from Niagara riv. There are three public squares, planted with trees & shrubbery. The harbor of Buffalo is sufficiently capacious for the accommodation of several hundred vessels, & is well protected from winds. A mole & pier constructed of wood & stone by the joint contributions of the citizens & of the U. S. government, which, by confining the channel at its entrance, has increased the depth of water to 10 ft., & a short distance within from the lake the harbor has a depth of from 12 to 14 ft. At the end of the mole is a lighthouse, built in 1828 of dressed limestone, 20 ft. in diameter, showing a light 47 ft. above the surface of the lake, and visible for a distance of eleven nautical miles.

The public buildings, institutions, &c., are 2 court houses, jail, county clerk's office, two markets, a new & commodious city hall, in which are the city offices; 26 churches, viz., 4 Baptist, 1 Bethel, 3 Episcopal, 2 German Evangelical, 2 Lutheran, 5 Methodist, 7 Presbyterian, 8 Rom. Catholic, 1 Unitarian, & 1 Universalist; a large number of hotels, 12 banks, with an aggregate capital of $1,475,000, 2 insurance companies, 2 savings institutions, & 2 theatres. The University of Buffalo, chartered in 1846, the medical department of which has gone into operation; it has 8 professors; lectures commence on the first Wednesday in November, & continue 16 weeks. The Young Men's Association, established in 1836 & incorporated in 1843; an institution of a literary & scientific character; it has a library of over 6,500 vols. of rare & valuable works, a cabinet of minerals, a reading-room, supplied with periodicals, newspapers, &c., and it sustains an able course of literary & scientific lectures during the winter months. The German Young Men's Association; the Buffalo City Hospital, chartered in 1852; the Buffalo Orphan Asylum, organized in 1835; the Hospital of the Sisters of Charity; Female Orphan Asylum, under the direction of the Sisters of Charity; the Convent of the Sacred Heart; the Buffalo Horticultural Society; the Water Works; the Board of Trade; the Buffalo Gas Company, capital $300,000.

The manufactures of Buffalo are very extensive, consisting of engine & boiler factories, furnaces, car works, foundries, &c. The capital employed in 1850 was $1,946,348; value of manufactured articles, $3,674,988; and since which time both the capital employed and value of products have been largely increased. In 1853 there were 6 steam flouring mills, manufacturing during the year 216,296 barrels of flour.

The commerce of Buffalo is immensely large, far surpassing all other ports on the great lakes. The number of arrivals & clearances in 1853 were 8,298 vessels, with an aggregate tonnage of 3,252,978. There are owned in Buffalo 30 steamers, with an agg. ton. of 26,593; 46 propellers, agg. ton., 18,004; brigs & barks 39, agg. ton., 10,376; 115 schrs., agg. ton., 17,999; total ton. of steam & sail ves., 72,917. BURLINGTON, city, port of entry, & cap. of Chittenden co., Vt. 44 miles W.N.W. Montpelier, 80 m. S. S.E. Montreal, L. Can., 22 m. S.E. Plattsburg, N.Y., 75 m. N. Whitehall, at the S. end of Lake Champlain, 161 N. Albany, N. Y., 513 W. Situated in 44° 27′ N. lat. & 73° 10′ W. lon. Pop. 1830, 3,525; 1840, 4,271; in 1850, 6,101; 1854, 8,000. Pop. of t., exclusive of city, 1,484. It is the largest place in the state, & is built on a bay which sets up between two points, on the E. side of lake Champlain, & forms a regular curve. The shore on the S. is low, but towards the N. it rises to an elevated bluff. On the brow of the elevated bank was a powerful battery which once maintained an action of half an hour with a British naval force on the lake. From the S. part of the city the ground rises by a gradual ascent for 1 mile, where it attains the elevation of 281 feet above the surface of the lake. The street runs from W. to E. & is crossed by others at right angles. Near the centre is a public square on which the court-house is situated. The city contains many neat and spacious dwellings, surrounded with shrubbery, and some of the public buildings are spacious & elegant. The Calvinistic Congregational church, completed in 1842, in the place of one which was consumed by fire in 1839, is an elegant edifice, 92 feet long, by 61 wide, built of brick, & cost $20,000. The Unitarian church, erected in 1816, is very spacious, & the Episcopal church is a handsome Gothic structure.

The lake here is 10 miles broad, which is its widest part unobstructed by islands, & the view from the cupola of the University, as respects natural scenery, is second to none in the United States. To the west are presented a full view of the city, the broad expanse of the lake, adorned with several islands, & vessels, and steamboats, & beyond the lake rise the Adirondack mountains, to the height of nearly 6,000 ft. To the N. are seen the beautiful windings of Winooski, or Onion river. To the E. is presented an extended country with the range of the Green Mountains, embracing its two most elevated summits.

The harbor of Burlington is the best on the lake, & more vessels navigating the lake are owned here than at any other place. It is easy of access from the N. & S., & to protect it from the W. winds, a breakwater, 900 ft. long was erected. Juniper Island is distant 4 miles from the wharf, & contains 11 acres of ground; a light-house was erected on this isl. in 1826, it is in the form of a truncated cone, 30 feet high, 18 feet in diameter at the base, & 12 at the top, & is kept lighted at night during the season of navigation, from the middle of April to the 1st of December. Burlington has an extensive & fertile back country, & the mercantile business of the place amounts to about $1,000,000 annually. Tonnage, 1853, 5,875 tons. Steamboats stop here daily on their trips from Whitehall, N. Y., to St. Johns' Canada. (See Lake Champlain commerce of.) Burlington contains a court-house, jail, six churches, —1 Congregational, 1 Unitarian, 1 Methodist, 1 Episcopal, 1 Baptist, 1 Roman Catholic,—an academy, a female seminary, 4 banks, ag. cap. $600,000, 49 stores, a rope-walk, a brewery, a tannery, a glass factory, a pottery, a grist m., 3 saw m., 3 printing-offices, issuing 3 weekly newspapers, & 17 schools. A steam ferry-boat crosses from this place to Port Kent on the opposite side of the lake, & thence to Plattsburg. The University of Vermont occupies an elevated situation on the border of the city, 281 ft. above the level of the lake, & has four spacious edifices. It was founded in 1791, & endowed by the Legislature with 29,000 acres of land, which yield an income of $2,500 annually. It has a president, & 5 professors or other instructors, 241 alumni, 101 students, & 14,000 vols. in its libraries. The commencement is on the 1st Wednesday in August. About a mile & a half N.E. of the court-house, is the flourishing manufacturing village of Winooski, on Winooski r., partly in this town & partly in Colchester, & connected by a fine covered bridge over the river. The river has a fall of about 20 feet, nearly perpendicular, which affords a great water power, easily available on the Colchester side. The vill. contains a church, an extensive woollen fac., & various mechanical & manufacturing establishments, which are chiefly included in Colchester.

The first permanent settlement in Burlington was made in 1783. It was first organized in 1787. The first store was opened in 1789. The first Congregational church was formed in 1795. Burlington contained a garrison & hospital during the last war. A great mortality prevailed among the soldiers in the winter of 1813, & out of 4,000 men, from 12 to 20 died daily, for several weeks in succession.

BURMAH, or BIRMAH, the Burmese Empire, or kingdom of Ava, a state of Further India, & formerly the most extensive & powerful in that penins.; but, since the war of the Burmese with the British, in 1824–6, its territories have been comprised within lat. 16° and 27° N., & lon. 93° & 99 E., having W. Aracan and Munipoor, N. the Nagas territory and Upp. Assam, E. the Chinese prov. Yun-nan, the indep. Laos country, and the British prov. Martaban (from which last it is separated by the Sa-luen or Than-lweng riv.), and S. the Gulf of Martabau, a portion of the Bay of Bengal. Estimated area, 200,000 sq. m., and pop. from 2 to 3 millions. It is composed of the kingdoms of Burmah, Pegu, & Pong, with portions of the countries inhabited by the Khyen, and the Shang countries, and the Kubo valley (Munipoor), re-annexed to it by treaty with the British in 1834; it is enclosed on most sides by mntn. ranges, in elev. from 2,000 to 5,000 ft. above the sea, its central part consisting of the basin of the Irrawadi. Lagoons are numerous in low beds of the S., & in the centre, a little N. of Ava, is a lake 30 m. in length by 10 m. across. The country is reckoned salubrious. From May till the middle of Sept. is the rainy season. From Sept. till March the weather is delightful, the temp. seldom exceeding 75°, in April and May the heat becomes very great, but is soon mitigated by the commencement of rain. Annual fall of rain 150 to 200 inches. The soil is of very high fertility; but except near the towns the most of it lies waste, or is only irregularly tilled; and agriculture is generally in the most backward condition. Rice is the chief crop, especially in the S., pulses, Indian millet, and maize, are raised in the N., and sessamum is universally cultiv. for cattle. Other products are, cotton of short staple, indigo (though this product is so badly managed as to be unfit for export), yams, sweet potatoes, tobacco, capsicums in great quantities, gourds, oil plants, bananas, and other fruits, betel nut and leaf, sugar cane, onions, garlic, and in the N. a kind of tea. Teak, of a quality inferior to that of both Malabar and Java, oak & other valuable woods, abound on the mntn. ranges, & palm & bamboo are also plentiful. Oxen, buffaloes, and goats, are the princip. domestic animals, used for draught, and the elephant is domesticated for the same purpose; a good breed of horses is also reared. Mineral products are numerous and valuable. The gold and silver obtained in the empire, has been estimated to amount in value to upwards of 200,000*l.*, and the produce of petroleum in pits, along the Irrawadi, to 8 million lbs. annually. Fine marble, serpentine, amber, sapphires, and other gems, iron, copper, tin, lead, antimony, sulphur, nitre, and coal, are also found. In physical form, the Burmese are more allied to the Mongolians of E. Asia than to the Hindoos. Their figure is short, squat, robust, & fleshy, face lozenge-shaped, cheek bones large, and eyes obliquely placed. The hair is black, coarse, and lank, color of the skin, light brown or yellowish. From the difference of the dialects, they may be divided into five tribes or nations. The language is monosyllabic, somewhat allied to the Chinese. They are of a gay disposition, and fond of amusements, but less civilized than the Hindoos or Chinese. They excel in boat-building, and they cast bells, work in gold and silver, and dye silk and other fabrics, weave silk and cotton goods, and manufacture lacquered wares, paper, coarse earthenwares, and some other articles in a respectable manner, but most of their manufactured goods in ordinary use, are imported from foreign countries. China sends silks, porcelain, copper, carpets, metals, drugs, tea, &c.; in return for raw cotton, feathers, ivory, bird's nests, horns, gums, and some British manufactures; this intercourse being chiefly conducted at a large annual fair at Bhamo. From the Shan tribes, the Burmese obtain their best sword-blades, with lac, wax, varnish, in return for salt and dried fish; other articles are mostly imported by sea from British India, and the Asiatic Archipelago, and consist of British cotton goods, areca & cocoa nuts, tobacco, iron, hardwares, copper, lead, and other minerals, opium, sugar, spirits, English glass, earthenwares, fire-arms, and gunpowder, the manufactures of the Burmese in the two last articles, being of the most wretched description. The gov. is hereditary and despotic; the sovereign is assisted by a council of the nobility, over whom he has a kind of feudal jurisdiction, and the titles of the latter are not hereditary. The religion of the mass of the inhabs. is Buddhism; a few Christians and Jews are to be found amongst the pop., & the Khyens & other wild tribes have a special idolatry of their own. Education, in so far as mere reading & writing is concerned, is more diffused than might have been expected. Public rev. is derived from a tithe of the profit of cultiv., duties of 10 per cent. on impts., & 5 per cent. on expts., & on petroleum collected, a royal monopoly of marble, amber, and the precious metals, & gems above a certain size, a poll tax on the unsettled tribes, &c.; and the whole fiscal system is "replete with uncertainty, rapacity, and violence." The armed force in the last war, was all infantry, except a small body of Cassy horse, and a company of artillery, and the war-boats formed the best portion of the armed force. The Burmese empire is divided into 7 provs. Ava and Monchobo have alternately been constituted the capital of the empire. The other principal towns are Amarapure, Sakaing, Rangoon, Bassain, Martaban, Setang, Taungo, Prome, Patango, Yandabo, and Bhamo. In 1823 the Burmese, by encroaching on the East India Co.'s territories, brought on a war with the British, which lasted during the years 1824–5, and terminated in their defeat and the cession of several territories to the English.

BUSHIRE (properly Abu-shehr, "father of cities"), a seaport city of Persia, & its principal entrepôt on the Persian Gulf, at the N. extremity of a sandy peninsula. Lat. 29° N., lon. 50° 52′ E. Pop. variously estimated from 10,000 to 20,000, mostly Persians, Arabs, & Armenians. On the land side it is protected by a wall with round towers, & on the other sides enclosed by the sea, which on the N. forms a harbor lined by some wharfs. Being built of white stone & furnished with hollow turrets for ventilation, it has externally a handsome appearance; but its streets are narrow & unpaved; it is ill supplied with water; good houses are very few; & its public buildings comprise only a few inferior mosques, the sheikh's palace, a depôt of the E. India Company, a large bazaar, some poor coffee houses, & a solitary bath. Ships of 300 tons are obliged to lie in a roadstead 6 m. from the city. Bushire has, however, a large trade with British India, importing thence rice, indigo, sugar, English cotton goods, & other manufs., with steel, spices, porcelain, &c., from China & the Malay archip. Coffee is imported from Mocha; bullion, & European manufs. of various kinds come from Bassorah. Principal exports, raw silk, Kirman wool, shawls, horses (to India for cavalry service), carpets, silk goods, dried fruits, grain, Shiraz wine, turquoises, pearls, assafœtida, & gall nuts. The E. India Co. has a resident here who superintends all its affairs in the Persian Gulf.

BUTTE, county, Cal. Situated in the N.E. part of the state, & contains 25,000 sq. ms. Drained centrally by Feather river (Rio de la Plumas), & its western part by branches of Sacramento r., which forms its western boundary. These streams furnish many fine mill sites. Surface mountainous, with many beautiful & fertile valleys susceptible of agricultural improvement, & well adapted to stock raising; abounding with timber & the finest of grass—water in plenty & irrigation easy. The Butte mountains, from which the county takes its name, are high peaks situated in the south part of the original county, but now in Sutter county. They are in the valley of the Sacramento, & are visible at an immense distance. These peaks were named by a detachment of hunters, headed by Michael Lafrombeau (of the Hudson Bay Company), who visited this country in search of beaver in the year 1829; nine years previous to this period they were denominated peaks (picachos), by Capt. Luis A. Arguello, who headed an expedition to the Columbia river by order of the governor of this province. Table mountain, situated near Feather r. is very peculiarly formed, reminding one of some ancient castle with its high walls and frowning battlements.—Mount Hood, situated in the north part of the county, towers far above its surrounding peaks, & presents an apex covered with perpetual snows, and is visible at a great distance. The mountainous region abounds with immense pines & cedars, furnishing an almost inexhaustible supply of lumber. Gold is found in large quantities; platina & iron abound in all the mining districts, but not in sufficient quantities to justify machinery. Lead in a pure state on the head waters of Middle Fork; quicksilver in abundance; silver in small quantities. There were in this county in 1852, 1,560 horses, 736 mules, 441 cows, 4,536 beef cattle, 898 working oxen, 498 sheep, 614 hogs, & 990 chickens;—there were produced 32,940 bush. of barley; 315 oats; 3,355 wheat, & 3,000 of potatoes. Acres of land in cultivation, 2,144;—3 steam saw mills, 11 saw m. moved by water, 15 quartz mills, capital employed in quartz mining, $340,764; in Placer mining, $22,350; in other mines, $55,650; and employed for other purposes, $380,150. CABOOL, or CAUBUL, a fortified city & the cap. of N. Afghanistan, on the Cabool river, here crossed by 3 bridges, 6,396 ft. above the sea, & 82 m. E.N.E. Ghuznee. Lat. 34° 30′ N., lon. 69° 6′ E. Pop. about 60,000. It is enclosed on the N.W. & S. sides by hills, along which run some weak ramparts; & at its E. end is the Balar Hissar ("palace of the kings"). This citadel comprises the residences of the chief, various government offices, royal gardens, an inner fort, & a small t. with 5,000 inhabitants. The outer town, about 3 m. in circ., is entered by 4 gates, & has 2 principal thoroughfares running parallel to each other, & the N. of which led to the magnificent bazar, destroyed by the British on their evacuation of Cabool, in 1842. The city is subdivided into districts, each enclosed with walls, & capable of being shut off from the rest so as to form a separate fortress; & in the S.W. district is a pretty strongly fortified quarter, inhabited by Persians or Kuzzilbashes, of whom there are from 10,000 to 12,000 in the city. Streets intricate, often too narrow for two horsemen to pass each other, & very badly paved. Houses in general 2 or 3 stories high, built of sun-dried bricks & wood, & with flat roofs; those of the wealthy inhabitants have extensive courts & gardens. Outside of the city are the tombs of the emperor Baber, who made Cabool his cap., & of Timour-Shah, the latter being an octagon of brick, surmounted by a cupola. Cabool has an active trade; it imports the precious metals, fire-arms, paper, tea, cotton goods, broad cloths, velvets, kermes, & other dyes, iron wares, cutlery, needles, raw silk to the value of $200,000 yearly, mostly brought from the Russian & the Chinese doms., & Independent Turkestan; & which goods are mostly expedited southward into Hindostan, &c. It has considerable markets for corn, cattle, & fuel, & is famous in the E. for its excellent supply of vegetables & fruits. From its elevation, the winter in Cabool is long & severe, the summer is delightful; average temp. from 75° to 85°. The inhabitants are tall, well made, not very dark, & have Jewish features. They are Mohammedans of the Sonnee sect. The higher classes speak Persian, the common people the Pushtoo dialect. Cabool was taken by Sebuctaghi in 977, by Tamerlane at the end of the 14th century, & in 1738 by Nadir Shah. It was the scene, in 1842, of the treacherous outbreak of the chiefs, the murders of Sir W. Macnaughton & Sir A. Burnes, & the massacre of 3,800 soldiers, & 12,000 camp-followers; it was retaken in the same year by the British troops under Sir R. Sale, the bazars & the public buildings burned, & finally relinquished. Its chiefship is considered to extend from the S. of Ghuznee to the Hindoo Koosh, & from Bamain to the Khyber mountains, comprising an area of about 10,000 sq. m., with the cities of Cabool, Istalif, Ghuznee, & Jelalabad. Dost Mahomed's army amounted to 2,500 infantry, and 12,000 to 13,000 horse. His annual revenue is said to be $750,000. Cabool River, or Jui-shir, the only large tributary of the Indus from the W., rises near lat. 34° 21′ N., & lon. 68° 20′ E., at an elevation of 8,400 ft., & after an eastward course of 320 miles, & the addition of many tributaries, joins the Indus nearly opposite Attock. CAIRO, p-v., Alexander co., Ill., 233 S. by E. Springfield, 867 W. It is situated on the point of land formed by the junction of the Ohio with the Mississippi r., extending from river to river. A levee has been constructed along the Mississippi & Ohio rivers, enclosing an area of 4,000 acres, which entirely prevents the overflow. Here commences the Great Central railroad, extending northwardly through the state, with lateral branches. The company's workshops, dwellings, hotel, saw mills, & foundry are located here, & the place is fast increasing in population; a weekly newspaper has been established, and when the railroads of Illinois shall have been completed, Cairo will become the shipping point of an immense width of fertile country. On the opposite shore will be the terminus of the Mobile & Ohio r. r.

CAIRO, El Masr, "the capital" of the Egyptians, El Kahireh, "the victorious" of the Arabs, the capital city of Egypt, the residence of the viceroy & seat of government, near the rt. b. of the Nile, & 5 m. from the origin of its Delta. Lat. (tower of the Janissaries), 30° 2′ 4″ N., lon. 31° 15′ 36″ E.. elev. 40 ft. above the level of the sea. Pop., including the suburbs of Boulac & Old Cairo, estim. at 250,000, comprising about 125,000 Mahommedans, 60,000 Copts, 3,000 to 4,000 Jews, and numerous foreigners. Climate healthy and little variable; the heat is great in summer and even winter. Mean temp. of the year 72°.2, of winter 58°.5, of summer 85°.1 Fahr. It never snows & very seldom rains, but dew is abundant. The city proper is built on a slope at the foot of one of the lowest ridges of the chain of Jabel Mokkatam, & occupies an area of about 3 sq. m.; it is surrounded by old walls, & the highest part of the ridge is occupied by a citadel, which contains the palace of the viceroy, the arsenal, mint, and public offices. The citadel is commanded by forts placed on the extremity of the chain of Mokkatam. The city is separated from its suburbs Boulac and Misr-el-Aatik, improperly called Old Cairo, by a series of gardens & plantations.

Cairo is divided into several distinct quarters according to the religion & race of its inhabs., as the Coptic quarter, Jew's quarter, & Frank quarter, which are separated by gates. The streets are narrow, crooked, ill paved, & unfit for the passage of carriages, but they are less filthy than formerly; the houses are substantial, & often lofty; there are many squares surrounded by good private houses, but few modern edifices of importance except the palace of Ibrahim Pacha, with extensive gardens on the Nile, between Boulac & Old Cairo, and the handsome residence of the viceroy at Shoubra. The city is traversed by a canal of irrigation, which commences at Old Cairo. The remarkable edifices of Cairo, which comprise many of the finest remains of Arabian architecture, all date from the reign of the Arabs & the ancient sultans of Egypt. Among these are from 300 to 400 mosques, many of which, as those of Sultan Hassan, have lofty & graceful minarets; several of the ancient gates, an aqueduct for conveying water from the Nile to the citadel, the tombs of the Mamelukes, the ancient works of the citadel, and the palace & well of Joseph. At Old Cairo are the seven towers still called "the granary of Joseph," & serving their ancient purpose. In the isl. of Rodah is the celebrated Nilometer, a graduated column for indicating the height of the water during an inundation of the riv.; numerous ancient cisterns & baths still ornament the city; on the S., outside the walls, are the celeb. tombs of the Mamelukes, & on the N.E. the obelisk of Heliopolis. There are 4 prim. schools in Cairo, each having about 200 pupils, & 1 preparatory school with about 1,500 pupils, a museum of Egyptian antiquities, a magnetic observatory, a European theatre, several hospitals, & a lunatic asylum. Cairo was long the chief entrepôt for the commerce of Egypt, but its trade has much declined; 3 caravans arrive annually from Mourzouk, Sennaar, & Darfur, & their princip. imports still are slaves. [BOULAC.] [EGYPT.] Cairo was founded by the Arabs about A. D. 970; its citadel was built by Saladin in 1176; it was the cap. of the Sultans of Egypt till the time of the Turkish conquest in 1507, since that time it has been the residence of the Pachas, governors of the province; it was taken by the French in 1798, and held by them for 3½ years.

Surface mountainous in the W. and S.; elsewhere flat or undulating, & consisting of extens. moors. Extens. horizontal beds of sandstone cover the level plains, above which is a deep till clay, surmounted by a deep fertile loam. Fossil fish & traces of vegetable remains are abundant in the shale and sandstone, and lead ore has been found. Climate damp & chill. Farms mostly small. Agriculture & cattle have greatly improved within the present century. The fishery is the princip. branch of trade; & from 150,000 to 200,000 barrels of fish are annually cured for expt. to the Engl. & Irish mkts. Some kelp & oats are also exported. Imports are chfly. manufac. goods & colonial produce. Princip. tns., Wick & Thurso. In the middle ages this part of Scotl. belonged for some time to the kings of Norway; most of its inhabs. are of Scandinavian or Gothic descent, & use the Engl. to the exclusion of the Gaelic language.

CALAVERAS, r., Cal. (Cal-a-vé-ras), an affl. of the San Joaquin, rises in the Sierra Nevada, and after a course of 100 ms. enters the San Joaquin, a few m. below Stockton. The gold washings on this stream have been extremely productive.

CALAVERAS, county, Cal., centrally situated, on the E. border of the state, and contains 4,100 sq. miles. Drained by Calaveras, Moquelumne & Stanislaus rivs., on the western slope, & Walker's r. on the eastern slope. The Sierra Nevada passes nearly centrally through it. Surface, on its western boundary is a beautiful undulating plain, and extends 8 miles easterly the whole breadth of the county, thence a hilly country, gradually becoming a mountainous region until it finally terminates in the snow capped Sierra Nevada; soil, exceedingly fertile, although a large portion will require artificial irrigation to bring forth all its capabilities. Capital, Double Springs. Calaveras signifies skulls, & the stream which gives its name to the county, derives its name from the fact of an immense number of skulls having been found lying in its vicinity. Captain Moraga, who commanded the party who first traversed this region, relates the following tradition. The chiefs of the tribes occupying the lands bordering the San Joaquin and its tributary streams made war upon the tribes of the Sierra, who came down to fish for salmon, with which these rivers abound. This was considered by the tribes residing along the rivers a trespass on their rights, and war was in consequence declared between the tribes of the valley and those of the Sierra, during which a sanguinary battle was fought near the Calaveras river. The tribes of the valley were victorious, and more than three thousand killed on both sides remained on the field. Hence the name of the stream, as given by Capt. Moraga. Cap. emp'd in quartz mining in 1852, $472,955; in placer mining, $38,260; other mining, $93,988; cap. of Moquelumne canal & mining Co., $175,000; cap. emp'd in saw ms., $60,000; an iron foundry, cap. $5,000. CALCUTTA, a city of British India, presid. & prov. Bengal, and the cap. of the British dom. in the east, on the lt. b. of the Hooghly riv., an arm of the Ganges, & 100 m. from the Bay of Bengal. Lat. of Fort William, 22° 33′ 5″ N., lon. 88° 17′ E. Pop. 230,000; besides whom about 177,000 were supposed daily to frequent the city from the suburbs & vicinity. It extends for 6 m. along the river, is enclosed on the land side by a mound & a canal, termed the Mahratta ditch, and is divided into the native quarter or "Black town," on the N.; & the European quarter or "Chowringhee," on the S. It presents externally a fine appearance, with its numerous spires, temples, villas, & about 30 ghauts or flights of steps, ascending from the water's edge to a long & handsome quay. In Chowringhee are many good houses belonging to Europeans and wealthy native merchants; & here, also, are the esplanade (an Indian Hyde Park), & the large citadel, Fort William, constructed at an expense of 2,000,000*l*., and usually garrisoned by a European regiment, two native regiments, and a detachment of artillery. The government house, which cost 40,000*l*., is a showy palace. The town-hall, custom house, mint, St. John's cathed., & another English church, the Scotch, Portug., Greek, & Armenian churches, La-Martiniere, Metcalfe hall, the bishop's college, courts of Justice, barracks, jail, hospitals, & some small but handsome mosques, are the chief edifices in this quarter. The native town is a filthy place, with narrow streets, an abundance of pagodas, and numerous pools; in its principal square is a large tank 60 feet in depth, Calcutta is the seat of the superior civil & criminal courts for the Bengal presid.; of Hindoo, Mohammedan, Sanscrit, & Anglo-Indian colleges; grammar, free, & various other schools; military & orphan asylums, the Asiatic Society of Bengal, a lyceum, public library, medical, agricultural, commercial, bible, missionary, & other associations, & many private seminaries. The Hooghly here about 1 m. across at high water, is usually crowded with shipping; & Calcutta is, next to Canton, the greatest emporium of the East. Principal exports consist of indigo, rice, opium, sugar, raw & manufd. silks & cottons, nitre, hides, gunny bags, rum, borax, castor oil, lac, seeds, &c.; & in 1851-2, the whole amounted in value to 110,409,706 rupees; the exports to China of opium being valued at 27,134,689 rupees. The remaining produce is exported chiefly to Great Britain, France & the French colonies, the U. States, the other Indian presids., Singapore, Arabia, Persia, & the Mauritius; & in the same year the exports of indigo reached 117,004 manuds. Imports consisting of cotton cloths & twist, copper & other metals, woollens, hardwares and cutlery, wines & spirits, coffee, spices, coal, coral, glass, plate, jewellery, European articles of luxury in general, &c., amounted to 67,514.750 rupees. In 1851-2 886 ships, aggregate burden, 425,553 tons, entered the port of Calcutta. Total customs duties collected at Calcutta 1851 2, 1,139,685*l*. Calcutta is the seat of the chief bishop of the Church of England in India, & of a vicar-apostolic of the Romish Church, of the supreme courts of justice, and one of the courts of justice and appeal for the presidency of Bengal, & the head-quarters of the government & governor-general. The great bulk of the pop. consists of native Hindoos & Mohammedans, of about 3,000 English & 5,000 half-castes, about 3,000 Portuguese, & the remainder French, Armenians, Jews, Persians, Chinese. The lower part of the town being hollow, damp, & dirty, with much stagnant water, is very unhealthy. In the hot season, from middle of March to middle of June, the thermometer ranges from 85° to 89° Fahr. The mean temp. of the year is 82.4, of winter 72°.2, & of summer 86°.7 Fahr.

European society in Calcutta exhibits much pomp & gaiety, with an over-abundance of formality & stiffness. Equipages are abundant, the public evening drive being esteemed an indispensable luxury. The rich native families who now assimilate in the splendor of their houses & equipages to the English, are of very recent origin, & owe their wealth & consequence to the commercial facilities which the city affords.

In 1698, the seat of the East India Company's factory was removed from Hooghly to Calcutta, previously to which Calcutta was an inconsiderable village surrounded with jungle. In 1756, an attack was made on the English factory by the natives, and 146 Englishmen were shut up in the black hole, of whom 118 died before morning. In 1757, the fort was retaken, and has ever since remained in possession of the English.

CALIFORNIA, the westernmost state of the republic, is bounded on the N. by Oregon, on the E. by Utah & New Mexico, & W. by the Pacific Ocean. The constitution of the state thus describes its limits. Commencing at the point of intersection of the 42 degree of north latitude, with the 120th degree of longitude W. from Greenwich, & running south on the line of said 120th degree of west longitude until it intersects the 39th degree of north latitude, thence running in a straight line in a south-easterly direction to the River Colorado, at a point where it intersects the 35th degree of N. latitude, thence down the middle of the channel of said river to the boundary line between the United States & Mexico, as established by the treaty of May 30th, 1848, thence running west & along said boundary line to the Pacific Ocean, & extending thereon three English miles, thence running in a northwesterly direction, & following the direction of the Pacific coast to the 42d degree of north latitude, thence on a line of said 42d degree of north latitude to the place of beginning. Also all the islands, harbors, & bays along & adjacent to the Pacific coast. Area, 188,982 sq. m. Pop. in 1852 (Humboldt), 16,882, consisting of 15,562 converted Indians, & 1,300 of other classes; in 1813 the population was estimated by Forbes to be 23,025. Emigrants from the United States began to enter the country before 1835, & so numerous had become the settlers that when the war commenced with Mexico, Col. Fremont had little difficulty in raising a regiment of 500 men. At the close of the war the population, exclusive of Indians, amounted to about 12,000.

The number of wild Indians scattered through the mountains is unknown, but is very considerable. The native Californians are like the Mexicans & S. Americans, chiefly of Spanish descent, but generally with a very large mixture of Indian blood, so that in complexion & features they are of all shades & degrees, from the pure Indian to the pure Castilian.

The population of the state, according to the census of the U. S. in 1850 was 92,569; & by the state census, in 1852, it was 264,435, distributed as follows:—

Almada county, from Contra Costa, Humboldt county from Trinity, San Bernardo from Los Angelos, are counties erected since 1852.

The seat of gov. is at Sacramento City, on left bank of the Sacramento, just below the entrance of American Fork. The prin. places are San Francisco, Stockton, Monterey, Santa Barbara, San Diego, Humboldt, &c.

Surface.—The greater part of the state is hilly or mountainous. The most prominent range of mountains is the Sierra Nevada, lying nearly parallel with the coast, & from 100 to 200 miles distant. On the western slope of this range are the principal gold mines extending 400 or 500 m. in length, & 50 or 60 in width. This slope of the Sierra is broken by the numerous tributaries of the Sacramento & San Joaquin into deep gorges & ravines, & the surface of the region is extremely rugged & uneven. West of the Sierra Nevada range of mountains, spreads out the great valley of the Sacramento & San Joaquin, 500 miles in length, & 50 or 60 in width. This is very level, contains but little timber, & though fertile in some portions, is extensively covered with an arid unproductive soil back from the streams, & by an immense tube or bulrush marshes in the vicinity of the rivers. The annual freshets in this valley occur in the winter & spring, & the streams are often at their maximum height as late as June, in consequence of the melting snows of the Sierra. This great valley is bounded on the W. by the coast range of hills & mountains, which rise sometimes to the height of 3,000 ft. & upwards, & lie from 30 to 80 m. back from the coast. These hills are interspersed with numerous valleys, some of them of great beauty and fertility.

Soil & Productions.—The best agricultural lands are found in the great basins of the Sacramento & San Joaquin, and these valleys in spring and summer, are covered with a luxuriant vegetation, consisting of various grasses, wild oats, &c. The hills are generally covered with wild oats, & furnish excellent pasturage, though, for the most part, too dry for cultivation. Further north, the valley of the Mendocino or Eel river, is represented by recent explorers as well adapted to agriculture. The lands in the vicinity of Humboldt harbor are also said to be very fertile, & in consequence of occasional showers through the dry season, they stand in no need of irrigation, which though not essential to the success of most crops in other parts of the country, is nevertheless, occasionally desirable.

The grape flourishes all over the state, & wine has long been manufactured at Los Angelos & other places. The various vegetables & fruits of the temperate zone, flourish finely, & in the southern counties many tropical productions may be successfully cultivated. California seems by nature peculiarly adapted for grazing; but under a judicious cultivation, its agricultural resources are very great.

There were in this state in 1850, 62,324 acres of land improved, & 3,831,571 of unimproved land in farms; cash value of farms, $3,874,041, & the value of implements & machinery $103,483; live stock, horses, 21,719; asses & mules, 1,666; milch cows, 4,280; working oxen, 4,780; other cattle, 253,599; sheep, 17,574; swine, 2,776; value of live stock, $3,351,058. Agricultural products.—Wheat, 17,628 bushels; Indian corn, 12,236; barley, 9,712; peas & beans, 2,292; potatoes, 9,292; sweet potatoes, 1,000; value of products of the orchards, $17,700; produce of market gardens, $75,275; pounds of butter made, 705; of cheese, 150; pounds of wool produced, 5,520; tobacco, 1,000; hay, tons of, 2,038; & were made 58,055 gallons of wine; value of home-made manufactures, $7,000; of slaughtered animals, $100,173. The state census of 1852, shows an increase of improved lands to 110,748 ac.; of live stock —horses, 64,778; mules, 16,578; milch cows, 104,359; beef cattle, 315,392; working oxen, 29,065;—agricultural products, wheat, 271,763 bushels; Indian corn, 62,532; oats, 100,497; potatoes, 1,393,170; barley, 2,973,734.

The state as a whole, cannot be described as well timbered. The plains & valleys are, in the main, destitute of forests, though in many of them is an extensive growth of scattered oaks. Among the coast range of mountains, are many forests of red wood, a species of cedar, growing to an immense size, & furnishing an extremely durable material for building. In the northern part of the state, and among the snowy mountains, are forests of gigantic pines, firs, cedars, & other valuable forest trees, ranging from 100 to 200 feet in height, & from 5 to 15 feet in diameter. In the central part of the valley of the Sacramento & San Joaquin, near the junction of these rivers with the bay of Suisun, is an extensive tract of low, marsh land called the Tulares, or Tule lands, from the Tule or bulrush with which they are thickly covered. These lands are estimated to cover an area of at least 600,000 acres, & are drained by a network of sloughs which generally afford navigable channels from two to six fathoms in depth. Should these lands be reclaimed, their fine alluvial soil will doubtless prove well adapted to the cultivation of rice. The coast range of mountains & the valleys of the Sacramento & San Joaquin, abound in deer, elk, antelopes, & other wild game, & the plains are traversed by immense herds of wild horses. The formidable grizzly bear is found in nearly all parts of the state. The cattle of the country are fine, and are owned by the native Californians, often in herds of many thousands. These were formerly killed in great numbers for their hides and tallow, which constituted the principal exports of the country, and the chief source of wealth to the inhabitants.

Mines.—Silver, lead, copper, platinum, and other mines, have been discovered in California (though not yet worked), but the great mineral wealth of the State consists in its mines of quicksilver & gold, particularly the latter. The Quicksilver mine of New Almaden, discovered in 1845, 13 miles south of San José, is probably the richest in the world, & if properly worked, would yield a million of dollars a year. Gold is liberally scattered over a large portion of the state. From its first discovery in February, 1848, to the present time, new deposits have been successively opened in various directions, & the whole extent and richness of the mines still remains a matter to be developed hereafter. The first gold discovered was on the American Fork, about 50 miles east of Sutter's Fort (now Sacramento City). About three months afterwards it began to be found on the Yuba and Feather rivers to the northward, & on the Cosumnes to the southward. Subsequently it was discovered on all the principal eastern tributaries of the Sacramento & San Joaquin, and still later extensive deposits have been opened among the coast range of mountains in the northern part of the state, particularly on the Trinity & Klamath, & their tributaries.

There were in 1852, 108 quartz mills, with a capital of $5,871,405, & other mining operations employing capital of $8,026,042.

Position of the Gold.—The gold is found under two principal forms—interspersed in irregular veins through beds of quartz rock, & in the form of grains & irregular water-worn lumps of all sizes, mingled with the beds of drift or gravel, which cover the face of the country, but most abundantly in the bottoms of the mountain ravines. These grains & lumps were once parts of veins traversing quartz rock, & have been dislodged from their original matrix & reduced to the form in which we now behold them, by those aqueous & elemental agencies which have everywhere disintegrated & broken down the surface rocks, & of their ruins formed the present sand & gravel beds that cover the face of the earth. Their origin, or rather the origin of the forms in which we see them, was the same as that of all our sand & gravels. They are, in fact, nothing more nor less than golden pebbles—metallic gravel & sand. The idea so prevalent that the gold has been thrown out from volcanoes in a melted state, is entirely unscientific, & a great mistake. The gold region is not volcanic, & all search for the "blowholes," or "fountains," from which the gold is supposed to have been thrown, must always be, as it heretofore has been, entirely fruitless. In general, the loose gold is found in the immediate vicinity of the parent veins of which it once formed a part; or, at least, at no great distance down the slopes of the valleys & ravines which have in process of time been excavated by the elements.

The vein gold found in place in the quartz rocks occurs in various parts of the mines, but chiefly in the southern districts—in the neighborhood of the Cosumne, Moquelumne, Tuolumne, & Mariposa rivers, and elsewhere. The working of these veins requires machinery, & has not yet been fairly tested. Some trials have been made with flattering success.

The scale & lump gold is found most abundantly in the bottoms of ravines, & in the banks & beds of the rivers, particularly in the bars of sand and gravel thrown up in the streams by the rush of the mountain torrents. The gravel bed containing the gold lies generally not over two or three feet below the surface; but occasionally it is covered to the depth of 10, 20, & even 50 feet. Most of the gold hitherto obtained has been taken from such localities. The banks & beds of the rivers yield most abundantly at the lowest stage of water in the autumn & latter part of summer. The side "gulches" or ravines, are usually destitute of water in the dry season, & hence the explorations in them are denominated "Dry Diggings," and are conducted most successfully during the winter, spring, & early part of summer, particularly the two latter.

It is impossible to say which portion of the mines is the richest. All parts of them have yielded immense quantities of gold. The southern mines have turned out the greatest number of large lumps, & more of the coarse or lump gold is generally found in that region. But for this very reason, perhaps, digging in them is somewhat more precarious & lottery-like than elsewhere. In the northern mines the chances of finding large specimens may be less, but the prospect of making fair daily wages has been considered rather more certain there than in the southern mines. The recently-discovered deposits in the coast range on the Klamath & Trinity, & their affluents, are reported to be unusually rich, and many have hastened to give them a trial.

The implements needed for procuring the alluvial or loose gold are picks, shovels, & washers. The washers are either simple pans or wooden bowls, or machines, generally in the form of a cradle, & hence called cradles or rockers. These are sometimes more expensively constructed, & furnished with cells for quicksilver; by means of which the gold may be more completely & economically extracted.

It is well known that comparatively but a small portion of the products of the mines is entered at the San Francisco custom-house. Large sums are taken by passengers leaving the country among their baggage. An immense amount has also been taken out over land by the Sonoranians & other Mexicans who have returned from the mines to their homes. It may be estimated, therefore, that not much less than three hundred and twenty millions of dollars have been dug from the gold region of California since its discovery.

The productiveness of the mines has rendered lucrative almost every branch of industry. One of the most profitable employments in California is agriculture. So rapid has been the increase of population, that agricultural products of every kind have been in constant demand, & have commanded remunerating prices. If the large pop. suddenly gathered in California should not all meet with the success they may have anticipated in mining, there is little doubt that the state possesses natural resources enough of various kinds to furnish ample & profitable employment for all the enterprise & industry that have been gathered within her borders. California is not an enchanted land, where gold can be had for the wishing, & where men can grow rich without toil, or while wasting their energies in idleness & vice. To the prudent, industrious, & enterprising, it offers every reasonable facility, not only for obtaining a livelihood, but ultimately a competence. The land titles, which are now to a certain extent in an unsettled state, will, before long, be adjusted on a firm basis. The heterogeneous population, gathered from all parts of the world, will become assimilated. Trade & business will gradually find their appropriate & healthful channels; & the general condition of society may be expected to assume gradually a higher character, and compare favorably in refinement & cultivation with that of other & older states of our great Republic.

Education.—The fund applicable to this object, of which the interest is annually appropriated for schools, amounts to $200,000; and the residue of school lands, when sold, will produce about $1,000,000. The tax of 5 cents on every hundred of valuation, has made funds available to the amount of $10,700, which, together with the amount of interest due on the school land fund, made a total of over $16,000 in the treasury on the first day of January, 1853.

Government consists of a Senate and Assembly, and convenes annually on the 1st Monday of January. The arrangement of Senatorial and Representative districts shall be made after the enumerations provided for Assemblymen, not less than 30 nor more than 80 are chosen for one year. Senators in number not less than one-third nor more than one-half of that of the Assemblymen for two years, and both must have resided in the state for 1 year, and in their district 6 months next preceding election. One half of the Senate is chosen annually. The Governor's veto to any bill of the Legislature is negatived by a subsequent two-thirds' vote in each house in favor of the bill. Every law enacted by the Legislature shall embrace but one object, and that expressed in its title, and every law amended shall be enacted at length. In all elections by the Legislature the members shall vote viva voce, and their votes are to be entered on the journal.

The Judiciary consists of a Supreme Court, District Courts, County Courts, and Justices of the Peace, with such municipal and other inferior courts as the Legislature may establish. The Supreme Court consists of a chief-justice and two associate justices, who are elected at the general election for six years, from 1st January succeeding election. It has appellate jurisdiction in all cases exceeding $200, and in all criminal cases amounting to felony or questions of law alone. District Courts are regulated in their number by the Legislature (in 1853 there were 10), and each consists of one judge, elected in his respective district for six years. They have original jurisdiction in law and equity in all civil cases exceeding $200, exclusive of interest, and unlimited jurisdiction in all criminal cases not otherwise provided for, and in all issues of fact joined in the Probate Courts. County Courts consist of one judge, elected for four years, who performs the duties of surrogate, and has such jurisdiction as the Legislature may prescribe. The county judge, with two justices of the peace, shall hold courts of sessions with such criminal jurisdiction as the Legislature may prescribe. Tribunals for conciliation may be established—Justices of the peace are elected as the Legislature may direct.

The Governor is elected by a plurality of votes for two years. He must be a citizen of the United States, resident of the state for two years next preceding the election, and 25 years of age. In case of no election by the people, the Legislature elect one of the two persons having an equal and highest number of votes. A Lieutenant-Governor is elected at the same time as the Governor, with the same qualifications, who is President of the Senate, and in case of the disability or death of the Governor, receives the office. The Administrative officers, each chosen for the same term as the Governor, are the Secretary of State, appointed by the Governor, the Senate consenting, and the Controller, Treasurer, Attorney-General, and Surveyor-General, who are elected at the same time, and in the same manner as the Governor.

The right to vote is granted to every white male citizen of the United States, & every white male citizen of Mexico who shall have elected to become a citizen of the United States under the treaty ratified at Queretaro, May 30th, 1848, 21 years old, resident of the state six months, & of the county or district 30 days preceding the election. Indians & their descendants may be permitted to vote in special cases, by a two-thirds concurrent vote of the Legislature. All elections by the people shall be by ballot, & the general elections, until otherwise ordered, shall be on the Tuesday next after 1st Monday in November.

History.—The coast of Upper California was first explored by an expedition fitted out from a port of Mexico, under Cabrillo, in 1542. Lower California & the Gulf had been discovered & explored by the Spaniards some years earlier. Sir Francis Drake landed in Upper California in 1596, & named the country New Albion. The bay to which his name is attached on some maps, is the small harbor now called Bodega; not the great Bay of San Francisco, the entrance of which is fifty miles further south. The Spaniards first colonized the country in 1602. In 1697, the colonists having been expelled by the ill-used natives, the country was granted by Charles II. of Spain to the Jesuits, who established missions in different parts of the country for the conversion of the Indians. In 1760, sixteen different missions had been founded, into which were gathered many thousand natives, by whose labor the wealth of these establishments, in herds & crops, became very great. Presidios, or military posts in the neighborhood of the missions, began to be established in 1769; & towards the close of the century flourishing villages, inhabited chiefly by herdsmen, began to spring up in the fertile parts of the country, generally in the vicinity of the missions. In 1822 California became a province of the new republic of Mexico. In 1833 the missions were virtually broken up, by the acts of the Mexican government. The Indians were scattered abroad, & many of them joining the wild tribes of the mountains, became, from their superior knowledge, the worst thieves & robbers with which the settlements had to contend. Until within a few years past, indeed, bands of Indians from the valley of the San Joaquin & the flanks of the Sierra Nevada were accustomed to make predatory incursions into the inhabited valleys near the coast, & drive off hundreds of horses & cattle, especially the former. Sola was Governor in 1822, when the Mexican flag was hoisted, & remained until 1823. In that year he returned to Mexico, & delivered over the command to Don Luis A. Arguillo, who remained in authority till 1825, when General Echeandia arrived, & received the command; & he & Arguillo continued till the arrival of Victoria, in 1831 or 1832. In the latter end of 1832 the Californians revolted, & sent Victoria back to Mexico. By this event, Don Pio Pico, being senior member of the Territorial Deputation, became by law Governor pro tempore, till the arrival, in 1833, of Figueroa, who continued in office till he was obliged to resign on account of ill health, in 1835, in favor of Don Jose Castro, who also received the office by virtue of being senior member of the Deputation, & held it until the arrival of Chico from Mexico, in 1836. The spirit of independence had now become somewhat strong in California, & the policy of the government in Mexico was very much disliked. At this time a system was adopted utterly destructive of state rights, & all the powers of government were placed in the hands of Congress & the Executive. This central system was so strenuously opposed in California that the people rose & expelled the Mexican officers, & declared the country independent until the federal constitution should be restored. Chico, therefore, had command but a few months, & was sent away by the Territorial Deputation. Previous to his departure, he delivered over his power to Gutierrez. On the 6th of November, 1836, the Californians, with a few Mexicans, revolted against him, & he was embarked with all his officers. Juan B. Alvarado succeeded him, & continued in the office until the arrival of Micheltoreno in 1842, who maintained himself in office until 1845, when the Californians revolutionized & sent him away, & also Don Jose Castro, who at this time had the military command; & Pio Pico, being again senior member of the Junta Departmental, became Civil Governor, & so continued until the United States flag was hoisted in Monterey on the 7th day of July, 1846, & the country was soon subjugated by the forces under Stockton, Fremont, & Kearny. By the treaty with Mexico, of Feb. 2d, 1848, California was secured to the United States, & remained under a sort of half-military, half-civil government, administered by Colonel Mason & Gen. Riley, till the latter part of 1849. An election was held for the purpose of choosing delegates to frame a state constitution, August 1st, 1849; & the convention assembled at Monterey on the 1st of September following. The state constitution was completed & signed October 13th; & on the 13th of November following, when meetings of the citizens were held, the constitution was adopted by the popular vote, & a governor & lieutenant-governor elected, together with two delegates to Congress, & members of the State Legislature. The first legislature assembled at San José, December 15th, 1849, elected two United States senators, & remained in session several months. California was finally admitted the 31st State of the American Union, in August, 1850.

Gold & Silver.—Comparative table, showing the annual produce in value of fine gold & silver for 1846 & 1850, the first being two years before the discovery of the rich deposits of gold in California; the latter two years after the discovery.—[Prepared in May, 1852, by Wm. Birkmyre, Gumley-Lodge, Little Ealing, England.]—The quantities in the annexed table are probably less than the actual production. The duties on gold in Russia on the produce of the private mines are heavy, varying from 12 to 24 per cent.; in Austria they amount to 10 per cent.; in Brazil to 5 per cent., & are understood to lead to a great deal of smuggling. In other countries, such as the United States, where there are no duties, the gold & silver stated in the table are only the quantities brought to the mints to be coined, there being no means of determining the quantity used in jewellery & other arts & manufactures.

* Exclusive of China and Japan, which produce large quantities of gold and silver, the amount of which is quite unknown to Europeans.

[NOTE.—At the beginning of the 19th century Baron Humboldt's estimate (Essai Politique, tome 2, page 633) of the annual produce of North and South America was 17,291 kilogrammes—46,331 lb. Troy of gold, and 795,581 kilogrammes—2,131,770 lb. of silver. Value of both metals in dollars 43,500,000, equal to £9,243,750; the produce of Europe and Northern Asia at the same time was 4,916 lb. gold, £250,593; and 199,298 lb, £657,683. Total value of the precious metals raised in America, Europe, and Northern Asia, £10,152,026.]

These tables, imperfect though they be, will suffice to show that the produce of gold in the world has greatly increased in the last few years. It would appear that it has risen from 114,674 lb. in 1846, to 365,-950 lb. in 1850. In those five years the increase has been at the rate of 219 per cent., while silver has only increased from 1,979,084 lb. in 1846, to 2,663,386 lb. in 1850, or 34¼ (34.5) per cent. The former metal is, therefore, apparently increasing at the rate of 44 (43.8) per cent. per annum, & the latter at 7 (6.9) per cent. The greater part of the increase in silver is in Mexico, which is doubtless owing to a variety of circumstances, such as restored tranquillity, richer mines, & greater skill. It would not, therefore, be safe to count upon such an increase every year, but we are certainly not exaggerating in saying that silver is now regularly increasing throughout the world. It may be estimated at an average of 2½ per cent. per annum.

It is a remarkable fact, however, & worth recalling, that in the country where the greatest increase of silver has taken place there was concurrently a loss of thousands of pounds of English cap. by the various English silver mining companies; so much so, that none of all the silver mining companies projected to work mines in Mexico between 1824 & 1830 have been successful. Some of them were being wound up during the very time when mining was prosperously conducted by the Mexicans. This seems to have been owing to a want of knowledge, or of control, or to the mischief of share jobbing in the English companies; but whatever may have been the cause, the natives of that country have found silver mining to be profitable. The enormous profit of £240,000 a year obtained by the old Spaniards from the Valencianna mine, a profit larger than all the tin & copper mines of England put together, is generally looked upon more as a fable than a reality by those who have heard casually of silver mining as conducted by English mining companies. The English gold mining companies have done better, & probably had they some 20 years ago the skill & knowledge of the present day, they would have been highly successful.

The quantity of gold produced in America at the beginning of this century was, according to Humboldt, 46,331 lb. Troy, & that of silver, 2,131,779 lb. In 1846, the produce of gold in America had fallen to 25,503 lb. Compared with the silver then produced, viz.: 1,594,431 lb., the gold was therefore 62 times less than the silver. In 1850, the yield of gold, in consequence of the great discoveries in California in 1848, had risen to 261,731 lb., being in weight only eight times less than the weight of the silver.

The annual produce of gold in the whole world (excepting Africa & some parts of Asia) at the commencement of the century was in a somewhat greater ratio, being 1 lb. of gold to 45 lb. of silver; in the year 1846 the produce of gold (including Africa, but excepting China & Japan) was at the rate of 1 to 17. In 1850 the produce had risen to 1 of gold to 7 of silver.

As regards the produce of gold in 1851 in California, it would appear that it must have amounted to about $82,118,500, equal to £17,339,514. The yield of the newly-discovered gold mining region at Bathurst, New South Wales, & at Mount Alexander & Bunniyong, Victoria, may be stated at fully £1,000,000. Hence there is an increase to the production of 1850 of 124,382 lb. Troy of fine gold, the total produce of gold in 1851 being therefore, 490,382 lb.; at £5 19s. 5½d. per lb. pure gold, equal to £24,994,066. There is much reason to believe (vide the comparative table) that the annual produce of silver is now steadily increasing, say at the very low rate of 2½ per cent. The yield of silver in 1851 will thus be 2,729,970 lb. Troy, equal to £9,005,900. Consequently the total value of the produce of gold & silver in 1851 is £34,002,966.*

The following table is similar to the preceding, substituting quantities for values:—

Total	$44,000,000	$204,400,000	$248,400,000

Annual product of the precious metals at different periods:

1492	$250,000	1700	$23,000,000	1848	$86,661,060
1500	3,000,000	1800	52,529,867	1851	174,000,000
1600	11,000,000	1843	73,678,743	1852	248,400,000

The average yearly coinage of gold during the first 30 years of this century was—in Great Britain, £1,700,000; France, £1,300,000; in the United States, £55,000; total, £3,055,000. The following is a statement of the recent gold coinage in the same countries, beginning with the year in which the gold discovery was made in California:—

	G. Britain. £	France. £	U. S. £	Total. £
1848	2,451,999	1,234,472	786,565	4,473,036
1849	2,177,000	1,084,382	1,875,158	5,136,540
1850	1,491,000	3,107,691	6,662,854	11,561,545
1851 (10 months)	10,077,252	12,919,695	—

The gold coinage last year in the United States exceeded by £3,398,927 the largest coinage of the same metal ever made in the united kingdom. And the coinage in France during the first 10 months exceeded by £556,494 the memorable gold coinage in this country of £9,520,758 in the year 1821.

The annual consumption of the precious metals (exclusive of coinage) in Europe & America is supposed to be about £4,840,000, to which there may be added for the other quarters of the globe £1,660,000. Total, £6,500,000. It is important, but difficult to determine how much of this sum consists of gold. M. Jacob, about 20 years ago, estimated the annual consumption of gold in Great Britain at £1,636,000. The other countries of the globe would at least consume half as much more, making £2,454,000, to which the annual gold coinage has to be added; comparing this total with the quantity of gold produced at the beginning of the century, or even for many years after, it then appears that gold from the mines was not raised in amount equal to the entire consumption; besides which, it seems to have been used relatively in a greater proportion than silver, & accounts for the premium in France of 12 francs per mil over silver, which gold not unfrequently commanded till the recent discoveries; for a pound Troy of gold in France in 1802 was found to be exactly equal to 15 lb. 6 oz. of silver, but afterwards became equal to 15 lb. 8 oz. Now, however, the premium is likely to be reversed most materially, for, deducting the £2,454,000 of gold consumed in the arts from the supposed yield of the gold mines in the present year, viz., £33,696,188, leaves £31,242,188 to be converted into coin; being a larger sum by £5,239,053, than the total circulation of gold coin in Great Britain in the year 1780. The general inference that specie must be accumulating is further borne out by the fact, notwithstanding discounts are unusually low in the three principal cities of the world, yet there is in each city a notable increase of bullion, compared with 1848, as the following table will show:

Banks.
England, week ending May 6, 1848,	£12,826,108
France, week ending May 4, 1848,	3,534,165
New York, quarter ending March, 1848,	1,404,125
England, week ending May 8, 1852,	20,231,037
France, (last return,) April 8, 1852,	23,566,204
New York, quarter ending March, 1852,	2,029,448

Summary of the quantity of bullion in the abovenamed banks in 1848, & the nearest corresponding period in 1852:—

	Bank of England. £	Bank of France. £	Banks of N. York. £	Total. £
1848	12,826,108	3,534,165	1,404,225	17,764,398
1852	20,231,037	23,506,204	2,029,448	45,766,689
Increase of bullion in 1852,				£28,002,291

By the last return of the Bank of England, the specie appears to the value of £20,231,037, being the largest amount she has ever held, & £3,592,722 above her highest accumulation previous to the development of the wealth of California.

It may be stated generally that there was, in 1850, five times as much gold produced in North & South America as in any of the most productive years of the American mines under the Spanish government. At the same time the silver mines of America were yielding quite as much silver as at the beginning of the century, when they were nearly as productive as at any former or later period under Spanish dominion.

Yet, notwithstanding the great increase in the produce of gold relative to silver, it is a curious fact that the price of silver has not risen; on the contrary, it has fallen in value. In the course of the week ending April 17th, 1852, £580,000 worth of silver was sold at 5s. an oz., British standard, which is only equivalent to 64s. 6d. per lb. Troy, for pure silver. At that rate, 1 lb. of pure gold is worth 15¾ (19.74) pounds of pure silver. In January, 1851, gold was only 15½ (15.3) times more valuable than silver.

The following is the estimated produce of the precious metals, in tons, in 1801, 1846, 1850, 1851, & the probable amount of 1852:—

Year.	Gold. Tons.	Silver. Tons.
1801	19	856, or 1 lb. of gold to 45 lb. of silver.
1846	42	727, "	17 "
1850	134	978, "	7 "
1851	180	1,002, "	5 "
1852	242	1,027, "	4 "

Although the 242 tons is an increase of no less than 12 times the quantity produced at the beginning of the century—a quantity of the glittering treasure that is fraught with the mightiest consequence to society—yet, as respects bulk, it sinks into perfect insignificance, for if it were melted into bars, a closet 9 feet high, 8 long, & 8 broad, would hold it all. It would require 21,713 times as much space to hold all the iron that is now smelted in Great Britain.

In 1801 the quantity of pure gold produced in America was 46,331 lb.; in Europe & Northern Asia (exclusive of China & Japan), 4,916 lb.; total produce, 51,247 lb.; =55,910 lb. British standard gold=£2,612,200.

In 1846 the quantity of pure gold produced in America was 25,503 lb.; in Europe, Africa, & Asia (exclusive of China & Japan), 89,191 lb.; total produce, 114,674 lb.;=125,108 lb. British standard gold=£5,846,772.

In 1850 the quantity of pure gold produced in America was 261,731 lb.; in Europe, Africa, & Asia (exclusive of China & Japan), 104,219 lb.; total produce, 365,950 lb.;=399,247 lb. British standard gold=£18,654,322.

CALIFORNIA LOWER, (Spanish, Baja, or Vieja,) a territory of Mexico, on the W. coast of N. America, formed of a peninsula lying N.W. to S.E., about 750 m. long by 30 to 120 m. broad, & extending from Cape San Lucas, its most S. point, lat. 22° 52′ N., lon. 109° 53′ W., to lat. 32° 30′ N. Bounded N. by the State of California, U. S., E. by the Gulf of California, & S. & W. by the Pacific Ocean. Area, 694,875 sq. leagues. Pop. 1850, 12,000. The peninsula is volcanic, & is traversed throughout its whole length by a continuation of the Sierra Nevada 1,000 to nearly 5,000 feet high, the culminating peak, Cerro de la Giganta, being 4,900 feet; it has two extinct volcanoes, hot springs of water & bitumen; much of it is heated by subterranean fires; & earthquakes are frequent. This mountain range is almost bare of verdure, being only sprinkled here & there with a cluster of briars, small shrubs, & dwarf trees. Along the mountain foot the ground is sandy or stony, & covered with cylindrical cactuses of extraordinary height. Among the ridges & protected hollows are a few spots with soil formed generally of decomposed lava. Springs of water, few in number, are ordinarily found on the bare rock, for water & soil are seldom met with at the same place. Where, however, this happens to be the case, the fertility is immense. The want of water is the bane of Lower California. Only two streams fall from its mountains into the Gulf of California, both near the middle of the peninsula, & only three into the Pacific, & none of them are large. In the interior are several copious springs, sending forth abundant streams, which unfortunately run along a rocky course, & are absorbed ultimately in the porous arid soil, or are lost in subterranean channels. For about 80 m. N. from Cape San Lucas the air is mild, being tempered by the sea breeze; from this section N. to Loretto, lat. 26° 16′ N., the heat is excessive, but thence N. the air is cooler. The temperature of summer on the coast of the Pacific ranges from 58° to 71°; the sky is peculiarly clear, of a deep blue, & perfectly cloudless, excepting sometimes at sunset, when streaks of the most beautiful shades of violet, purple, & green appear. In winter the rains are severe, but of short duration, & accompanied by tremendous tornadoes of wind sweeping the soil from every exposed position into the sea, & causing the tiller of the soil to seek a new place in which to ply his vocation. During the rains the thermometer falls as low as 50°. The variety of climate however is great, for when near Cape San Lucas, the thermometer stands between 60° & 70°; at the head of the Gulf it is down to the freezing point. The few fertile spots of Lower California yield maize, manioc, wheat, beans, peas, & all manner of esculent roots; excellent grapes, from which wine is made similar to that of the Canaries; oranges, lemons, limes, citrons, prunes, dates, plantains, pine apples, &c. The mountains feed a few wild sheep & goats, & to a small extent horses, black cattle, mules, goats, & pigs are reared. If the land is barren, the sea is stored with fish in incredible abundance & variety; among them may be named halibut, salmon, turbot, skate, pilchard, large oyster, thornback, mackerel, barbel, bonitos, soles, lobsters, sardines, cod, tunnies, anchovies, & pearl oysters. The pearl oyster is obtained in the Gulf, near the S. parts of California, & it was formerly much more extensively fished than at present; in fact, the fishing or diving for it has almost been abandoned. The pearls obtained are of a fine water & large, but rather irregular in shape, & not very pleasing to the eye. The quantity obtained in 1831 by 15 boats amounted in value to about $35,000. Gold is supposed to abound in Lower California, & a mine wrought near La Paz is said to be rich. The limited exports of the country consist of pearls, gold, dates, wines, grapes, soap, figs, spirits, salt from an inland lake on the island of Carmen, a few goats & hides. The chief towns are Loretto, the capital, lat. 26° 16′ N., lon. 112° 5′ W., with a population of 500, though it formerly had 2,000, & La Paz, about 150 m. S.E. the former, with a population of about 2,000. The present population of the country consists chiefly of mongrel breeds of Indians, whites, & negroes.

Lower California was discovered by Hernando de Grixalva, in 1534. In 1642 the Jesuits formed establishments in it; they taught the natives the art of cultivating the ground, & raised them greatly in the scale of civilization. In the reign of Philip V., more especially subsequent to 1744, the Spanish establishments in California increased & became very considerable. In a very few years the Jesuits built 16 villages in the interior of the peninsula, but in 1767 they were expelled, & the administration of California was committed to monks of the Dominican convents of the city of Mexico, who have maintained the same career of usefulness as their predecessors.

It contains three parts: Old Cambridge, the seat of the University; Cambridge Port, about half way between the university & the bridge leading to Boston; & East Cambridge, formerly Lechmeres point, opposite to the N. part of Boston, the seat of the court house & of a large crown glass factory. Cambridge is one of the oldest towns in New England, having been incorporated by the name of Newtown in 1630, but took the name of Cambridge in 1638.

It is the seat of Cambridge University, the oldest & best endowed institution in the Union. It was founded in 1638 by a grant of £400 sterling, & increased by the donation of £800 by the Rev. John Harvard, of Charlestown, from which circumstance it was called Harvard College, in honor of the donor—& the name of the town was changed from Newton to that of Cambridge, from the name of the seat of a principal university in England. Its funds have been increased from time to time by private donations, & now amounts to over eight hundred thousand dollars. It has a president, thirty-four professors or other instructors, has had 6,342 alumni, has 649 students, of whom 320 are undergraduates, & 92,000 volumes in its libraries, constituting together the largest library in the United States. The commencement is on the third Wednesday in July. The buildings consist of University Hall, an edifice of stone, 140 by 50 feet, & 42 feet high, containing a chapel, nine lecture rooms, cabinets for philosophical apparatus, &c. Harvard Hall, a brick edifice 108 by 40 feet, containing a large gallery for paintings, lecture rooms, & mineralogical cabinet. The college buildings occupy an enclosed plain of 14 acres. It has a botanical garden of 8 acres, containing an extensive collection of trees, plants, & shrubs, both native & foreign. The Medical Institution was founded in 1782, & has seven professors. The lectures commence in Boston on the first Wednesday in November, annually. It has a library of over 5,000 volumes. In the Lawrence Scientific School, instructions are given in the various branches of science by separate professors, particularly in Chemistry, Engineering, Geology, & Natural History. The theological school has a course of three years, and the students are divided into three classes,—junior, middle, & senior. Pecuniary assistance is granted to students when necessary. Graduates of other colleges are admitted. The law school was founded in 1817. For admission it is necessary to be a graduate of some college, or to be qualified for law students according to the rules of court. The course occupies three years. It is furnished with able professors. The Observatory is a spacious structure, containing the great refracting telescope recently imported from Europe, other astronomical instruments, an astronomical library, & is endowed by the Phillips' fund of one hundred thousand dollars. Old Cambridge, in which the colleges are situated, contains an athenæum, bank, & five places of public worship,—1 Baptist, 1 Congregational, 1 Episcopal, 1 Roman Catholic, 1 Unitarian,—& a service is held every Sabbath in the college chapel. Cambridge Port comprises seven churches,—1 Baptist, 2 Congregational, 1 Episcopal, 1 Methodist, & 1 Unitarian,—an Athenæum, a bank, insurance office, &c. Also the town-house, & the several public offices for the transaction of municipal affairs. This section of Cambridge is about midway between Old Cambridge & Boston, & is in a high state of prosperity. East Cambridge is a very busy part of the city, & has risen into consequence within a few years. It contains six places of worship, —1 Baptist, 1 Congregational, 1 Methodist, 2 Unitarian, & 1 Roman Catholic,—a court house, jail, house of correction, & extensive glass-works. This part of Cambridge is immediately connected with Boston by two bridges over Charles river.

Cambridge was a place of importance in the early history of the country, & intimately connected with Boston. The first printing press in America was established here in 1639 by Stephen Day, & the first work printed was the Freeman's Oath. It was long the literary centre, around which the affections of the colonists clustered. Immediately after the battle of Lexington, at the commencement of the Revolutionary war, 20,000 militia were collected here; & July 2d, 1775, General Washington arrived here & took the command of the American army. CAMBRIDGE (anc. Granta), a parl. & munic. bor., & mkt.-town of Engl., cap. co. Cambridge, & seat of one of the great English universities, on both sides the Cam, & on the E. Counties r. r., 49 m. N.N.E. London. Area, which includes 14 pas., & extra-parochial dist. of the university, 3,470 ac. Pop. 1851, 27,815. The town, in an extensive flat, embosomed amongst lofty trees, has, with few exceptions only, narrow, winding, & irregularly built streets; but its colleges are noble edifices. Principal buildings connected with the town, St. Mary's & Trinity churches, both fine structures; St. Sepulchre's, built in the reign of Henry I., on the model of the Holy Sepulchre at Jerusalem; a grammar school, founded in 1516, rev. 180*l.*; a national school with 600 pupils; numerous alms-houses, a general hospital, theatre in the suburb of Barnwell: the shire-hall, town-hall, & goal, enclosing remains of the ancient castle; a union work-house, & a house of correction & industry, founded in 1628, by Hobson, the eccentric carrier,—25 churches, 3 Baptist, 16 Episcopal, 1 Independent, 1 Jews' Synagogue, 2 Methodist, 1 Mormon, & 1 Roman Catholic. Cambridge has no manufs. but it carries on a considerable trade by the river with Lynn, in corn, coals, &c., & it is the depôt for corn, butter, rape oil, forwarded by land to the London markets. It is divided into 4 wards, & governed by a mayor, 10 aldermen, & 30 councillors. It is the seat of co. assizes, bor. & co. quarter sessions, & petty sessions, weekly on Friday. Market, Saturday. Fairs, for a week, from June 23d; & for a fortnight, from Sept. 18th; the latter, called Stourbridge fair (Barnwell), though it has declined, is still one of the most important in the kingdom for horses, wool, hops, butter, & cheese. Cambridge, (indep. of its univ.) sends 2 mems. to H. of C. It gave the title of Duke to the youngest son of George III. Bishop Jeremy Taylor, & the dramatist Cumberland, were natives of the town. The University of Cambridge, supposed to have been founded in the 7th cent., by Sigebert, King of E. Anglia, consists now of 13 colleges & 4 halls, as follows:—St. Peter's College, or Peterhouse, founded in 1257; Clare Hall, dating from 1326, & having a fine avenue & grounds, with a handsome stone bridge across the Cam; Pembroke Hall, 1347, possessing an elegant chapel designed by Sir C. Wren; Caius College, founded in 1348; Trinity Hall, 1350, having a remarkable library; Corpus Christi College, founded in 1351, & the buildings of which are most magnificent; King's College, 1441, possessing peculiar privileges, & having a chapel which is one of the finest specimens of later English architecture; Queen's College, founded 1446, by Margaret of Anjou, & refounded by the consort of Edward IV., & to which are attached some beautiful grounds; Catherine Hall, 1475; Jesus College, 1496; Christ's College, dating from 1505; St. John's College, 1511, the buildings of which are of brick, & which has an extensive library; Magdalen College, 1519; Trinity College, 1546, the largest, & one of the most magnificent establishments in the kingdom, possessing buildings of a highly imposing character; Emanuel College, 1584; Sidney Sussex College, 1596; and Downing College, founded in 1800. Principal edifices, also connected with the university, are the senate-house, an elegant Grecian structure, finished 1766; the public schools, library, observatory, Pitt press or university printing-office, & Fitzwilliam museum. Each college or hall is internally governed by its own statutes; but the government of the colleges, as a confederation, rests with a senate composed of two houses, & the members of which, having the degree of Dr. or M.A., amount to nearly 2,800. The executive government is vested in the chancellor, the vice-chancellor, high steward, commissary, proctors, & other officers; & two courts, of which the vice chancellor & the commissary are the head, determine most of the legal cases occurring within the university precincts. As in Oxford, candidates for university honors rely more on the teaching of private tutors for instruction than on that of the professors. Mathematics (though not to the exclusion of classical & other learning) form an important branch of study at Cambridge. Newton, Bacon, & many of the greatest divines & poets of Britain, conferred lustre on this school. The prizes open to the university at large amount annually to 1,200*l.*, & at different colleges to not less than 300*l.* The general income of the university is said not to exceed 5,500*l.* a year. The total rev. of colleges & halls, &c., was, in 1835, estimated at 133,268*l.* annually. The university sends 2 members to the H. of C., who are chosen by the senate.

The following is returned as the gross produce in other crops, &c.:—Clover and all hay seeds, 18,921 bush.; carrots, 82,338; mangold wurtzel, 103,399; beans, 23,602; hops, 111,158 lbs.; hay, 965,653 tons; flax or hemp, 1,867,016 lbs.; tobacco, 488,672; wool, 1,430,967; maple sugar, 6,190,694; cider, 53,327 galls.; fulled cloth, 780,891 yds.; linen, 889,528; flannel, 850,850.

The following is the census of cattle, viz.:—Bulls, oxen, or steers, 111,819; milch cows, 294,514; calves or heifers, 180,317; horses, 236,077; sheep, 629,825; pigs, 256,219.

Produce of cattle, viz.:—Butter, 9,637,152 lbs.; cheese, 511,014 lbs.; beef, 68,747 bbls.; fish, cured, 48,363 bbls.

The grain crops in Lower Canada are taken in the minot and not in the bushel, excepting in the t'nships. In like manner the acres are taken in arpents. An arpent is about one-seventh less than acre, and a minot about one-eighth more than a bushel. The fish in L. C. is exclusive of the Gaspé & Bonaventure fisheries.

Education.—Great efforts are now making in Canada to promote the education of the people. There were in 1852, in Canada W., 8 universities, with 732 students;

70 [illegible] & country grammar schools, 6,059 pupils; 136 [illegible] schools, 3,948 scholars; 1 normal and 1 model school, which together have 380 pupils; 3,001 common schools, 170,234 scholars. Amount available for [illegible] of teachers of common schools, £102,050; amount levied or subscribed for the erection & repairs of [illegible] houses, £19,334. In Canada E. there are 11 [illegible], several academies & high schools; & there were [illegible] schools open the first six months of 1850, & 78,341 children attending. Amount granted them from Parliamentary fund, £12,693; support of teachers, and building and repairing school houses from 1842 to 1850, £24[illegible].

Religion.—The prevailing religion in Eastern Canada is that of the Roman Catholic Church. In Western or Upper Canada the Church of England predominates. In the following table will be found an enumeration of the various religious bodies in the United Provinces, according to the census of 1852:—

Government.—The two provinces of Canada were united under one legislature in 1840. The executive power is wielded by the Governor General, who is appointed by the Sovereign of Great Britain, & is assisted in the administration of affairs by an executive council, the members of which are appointed by the Governor, & the tenure of their offices depends upon their receiving the support of the Provincial Parliament of United Canada. The members of the executive council hold seats in either branch of the Provincial Parliament. The Provincial House is called the legislative council, the members of which are summoned by the Sovereign, & hold their seats for life, unless forfeited by crime. The Legislative House consists of 130 members, elected by the people. In counties a 40s. sterling freehold confers a vote, & in cities & towns the payment of a yearly rent of £10 sterling. Bills passed by both houses of the Provincial Parliament must receive the Sovereign's assent before they acquire the force of law, & this the Governor is authorized to grant, or to reserve the bills for the signification of the Sovereign's pleasure thereon.

History.—Canada has its name from the Iroquois word Kanata, signifying a collection of huts, & which the early European discoverers mistook for the name of the country. It is said to have been first discovered by Sebastian Cabot in 1497, but the first settlement made by Europeans was in 1541, at St. Croix's harbor, by Jacques Cartier, a French navigator, who sailed up the St. Lawrence, to which he gave its present name. In 1608 a permanent settlement was made by the French upon the present site of Quebec, Canada being then called New France. From this period till 1759, the French continued to occupy the country, though much harassed by various tribes of Indians, particularly the Mohawks; but in the year just named, an English army under Gen. Wolfe captured Quebec, & by Sept. 8th, 1760, all other places within the government of Canada were surrendered to the British, & the French power in that quarter of the world entirely annihilated. In 1774, by an Act of the British parliament, a legislative council of 23 members was appointed to assist the governor. Seventeen years after, Canada was divided into two separate provinces, to be called the provinces of Upper & Lower Canada, & the first parliament of the former met at Niagara, on Sept. 17th 1792. In 1820, dissentions, chiefly of a political & financial character, began to arise between the House of Assembly & the Executive Government in Lower Canada, which went on from year to year increasing in intensity, till a crisis arrived. The spirit of discontent extended to Upper Canada, where it began to manifest itself in 1834, the causes being substantially the same with those of Lower Canada. At length matters were brought to an issue in the latter country, by the arrest in 1837 of two popular leaders, who were rescued. Warrants were issued for the arrest of others. The people in the districts of Chambly & of Grand Brulé rose in arms, & were defeated by the military. Similar scenes were enacted at the same time in Upper Canada, where considerable exasperation prevailed against the Government. The insurrection here, however, was also suppressed, but not before martial law had been proclaimed. The result of these proceedings was the reuniting of the provinces, which took place in 1840, under the name of the United Provinces of Canada, & the changing their respective designations from Upper & Lower Canada to Canada East & Canada West.

Upper Canada, or Canada West, lies along the north bank of the St. Lawrence & the shores of the Great Lakes, & extends almost to the N. boundary of the basin of the St. Lawrence. It is between the parallels of 41° 47′ & 49° N. lat., & 74° 30′ & 89° 32′ W. long. Area, 147,832 sq. m. It is divided into 42 counties, & these are subdivided into townships. The townships are mostly laid out in square blocks, & are subdivided into concessions, which are set off into lots of 200 acres each.

Canada West, or Upper Canada, contains 42 counties, as follows :—

General Physical Features.—The whole province is inland territory, but, by means of the great lakes & the rivers St. Lawrence & Ottawa, which have been made navigable, it derives many of the advantages of a sea board; & by the Rideau canal the navigation of Lake Ontario is connected with that of the Ottawa, & the Welland canal connects the lakes Erie with Ontario. Upper Canada is not a mountainous country; a ridge of table land divides the basin of the Ottawa from that of the St. Lawrence, & the tract between that part of Lake Huron called the Georgian bay and the Upper part of the Ottawa is still a more elevated region of table land. Another ridge commences at the S. extremity of Georgian bay, takes a S. course to the W. extremity of Lake Ontario, continues along the S. shore of Ontario, & extends into New York, crossing the Niagara river at Queenstown. Its highest elevation, however, does not exceed 350 feet above Lake Huron.

Rivers and Lakes.—The great rivers of Upper Canada are the St. Lawrence & the Ottawa. The former is called the Cataraqui until it reaches Montreal, & may be considered as rising in Lake Superior, & issuing from thence in the St. Mary's river, which enters Lake Huron after a course of 40 miles; as emerging from Lake Huron in the river St. Clair, which has a course of 30 miles; as issuing from the latter lake in the Detroit, which has a course of 29 miles to Lake Erie; as descending from Lake Erie to Lake Ontario in the Niagara; & as expanding after its issue from the latter lake under the name of the Cataraqui into the lake of the Thousand isles, Lake St. Francis, & Lake St. Louis. The streams flowing into all these lakes may be regarded as so many tributaries of the St. Lawrence. The Ottawa receives the Montreal, the Little river flowing from Turtle lake, the Neswabie flowing from Cedar lake, the Muskrat, the Bonne Chaire, the Madawaska, the Mississippi, the Rideau, & the Petite Nation on its right bank. Besides the great lakes of the North American continent, which are described in this work under their respective names, it possesses several extensive lakes which lie wholly within its own territories. The largest of these is Lake Nipissing, an irregularly formed sheet of water, exceeding 50 miles in breadth in some parts, & elevated 106 feet above Lake Huron. Next to it in point of size is Lake Simcoe, which is about 30 miles in length, is elevated 109 feet above Lake Huron, & discharges itself by the Severn into the S. part of Georgian bay. To the E. of Simcoe lake is a chain of irregularly formed bodies of water, among which are Balsam lake, Pigeon lake, Sturgeon lake, Trout lake, & Rice lake, their waters are discharged by the Trent river into Lake Ontario. The lakes Les Allumetes are an expansion of the Ottawa, & are connected by the Neswabie river with a chain of lakes in the interior, among which are Trout lake, Cedar lake, Otter lake, & Lake Missisaque, while to the S.W. of these another chain, of which the principal are Trading lake & Muskoka lake, find an outlet by the Muskoka river into Georgian bay of Lake Huron. Immense sums have been spent by the British government in improving the navigation of the St. Lawrence and the Ottawa. Of these, one of the most important works is the Welland canal, formed to overcome the obstruction in the navigation between lakes Erie & Ontario, caused by the falls of Niagara. It was projected in 1818, & commenced in 1824. It is 52 miles in length. Its summit level is 6¾ feet above Lake Erie, & 336¾ feet above Lake Ontario. The descent to the former is overcome by one lock at Port Colborne, & to Lake Ontario by 38 locks. When completed on its amended scale, it will be navigable throughout for vessels of 450 tons. The Rideau canal commences near Kingston on the Cataraqui or St. Lawrence, after its issue from Lake Ontario, & enters the Ottawa at Bytown, at the foot of the Chaudiere falls. It is 150 miles in length, & is navigable by steamboats drawing 5 feet water. Rideau lake, through which it passes, is 154 feet above Lake Ontario, & 283 feet above the surface of the Ottawa at Bytown, & there are seventeen locks between Kingston & Lake Rideau, & 30 locks between that lake & Bytown.

Geology & Soil.—The whole extent of Canada is mostly a granitic country, occasionally accompanied with calcareous rocks of a soft texture, & in horizontal strata. The calcareous region seems to extend in a line N.W. beyond Lake Michigan as far as the sources of the Mississippi, & thence to those of the Saskatchawine, joining at length the great range of the Rocky or Chipewyan mountains. All the great lakes of Upper Canada are placed in the line of contact between two vast chains of granite & limestone. At the narrowest part of Lake Winnipeg, where it is not more than two m. broad, the W. shore is skirted by calcareous rocks about 30 feet high, while on the opposite shore there are still higher rocks of a dull gray granite. In the lower province particularly the granite predominates. A calcareous stratum, at the fall of Niagara, forms the bed of that stream, & seems to proceed along the bed of the St. Lawrence as far as Quebec. The isle on which the city of Montreal is built, is of a calcareous nature; the immediate bed of the fall of Montmorency is a horizontal shelf of a black gray limestone, of the kind called primitive or crystallized; & the banks of the St. Lawrence, as also of the other rivers in Lower Canada, are chiefly composed of a schistous substance generally in a state of decay. But still in every quarter, even among these other substances, the granite is found in strata, more or less inclined to the horizon, but never parallel with it. The soil is generally fertile, & consists principally of a yellow loam on a substratum of lime limestone. From Montreal the soil gradually improves through Upper Canada, where it is much surpasses that of Montreal as Montreal surpasses Quebec. The climate, too, is more mild than that of the lower province. When in an uncultivated state, the quality of the soil is known by the timber which it produces. The larger & heavier the species of timber produced the more fertile the soil. All parts of the country which are not under cultivation are covered with timber. The uncleared lands are covered chiefly with white & red oak, white pine, beech, birch, ash, cedar, maple, poplar & elm.

Climate.—In the settled parts of Upper Canada the climate is milder, & the winter of shorter duration, than that of Lower Canada. Neither Lake Ontario, Lake Erie, Lake Huron, nor Lake Michigan, are subject to be frozen to any great distance from their coasts, but Lake Superior, from its more northerly situation, is usually covered with a solid body of ice for an extent of 50 m. from land. In the upper province, & especially towards the W., the climate is mild & equable. The chain of shallow lakes which are distributed over the Newcastle & Colborne districts, are seldom frozen over hard enough to bear a man with a heavy burden before Christmas, & they are generally open again before the middle of April. Lake Simcoe is seldom ventured upon with sleighs before the end of January. The earth is not usually frozen to a greater depth than 12 to 18 inches, & the snow does not generally lie deeper than 18 inches to 2 feet. The length of the winter & the depth of the snow vary very much according to the locality; for instance, to the south of the western district there are at least six weeks less winter than in Montreal, & while the snow at Sandwich is seldom more than one foot in depth, at Penetanguishine it is frequently 4 feet deep. E. or N. of London there is generally sufficient snow for sleighing by about the third week in December, & this usually lasts for two or three weeks, when a thaw, called from its regular periodical appearance the January thaw, takes place, which continues a few days, & is succeeded by a fresh fall of snow; the sleighing then continues good till the end of February or the beginning of March, when it breaks up altogether. In Upper Canada the occurrence of winter with scarcely any snow at all is not unfrequent. Such seasons are generally found to be injurious to the fall crops of wheat, & are, besides, considered to be a great misfortune, as they are a serious hinderance both to business & pleasure travelling. Generally as soon as snow disappears, warm weather sets in, & vegetation is exceedingly rapid. It occasionally happens that frosts occur in May, which do a great deal of mischief, but these are only occasional, and the farmer may always reckon on fine weather for the harvest. From the warmth of the seasons, & the absence of summer frosts, many fruits, such as melons, are grown in great perfection in the open ground. In the southern portion of the province fruit, such as the apple, the peach, & the pear, are grown in profusion. Pumpkins & squashes grow in the open fields to an enormous size, & indeed all the various vegetable productions of America thrive well.

There were in Canada West in 1852, 17,199,943 acres of land improved, & 6,130,654 of unimproved land. Live Stock—horses, 201,700; milch cows, 296,613; working oxen, &c., 193,982; sheep, 969,222; swine, 579,287. Agricultural Products—wheat, 12,692,582 bushels produced in 1851; rye, 479,651; Ind. corn, 1,696,513; oats, 11,193,844; barley, 625,875; buckwheat, 659,384; peas & beans, 2,873,394; potatoes, 4,389,475; pounds of butter made, 15,976,315; cheese, 2,226,776; maple sugar, 3,581,505; pounds wool produced, 2,699,964; flax & hemp, 50,650; hops, 113,064; tobacco, 764,476; hay, tons of, 681,762; clover & other grass seeds, 42,460 bushels.

Manufactures.—There were in this province in 1852, 1 cotton fac., 700 spindles; 98 woollen fac., producing 527,446 yards of fulled cloth & 1,169,301 yards flannel; 14,958 yards of linen was also manufactured;—97 iron foundries, 610 grist mills, 42 oatmeal mills, 1,618 saw m., & 268 tanneries.

Lower Canada, or Canada East, comprises the country on the N. bank of the St. Lawrence, from the Gulf of St. Lawrence, & E. from a line drawn from Anse au Sablon, on the Labrador coast, due N. to the parallel of 52° to the Ottawa river on the W., & a small tract to the W. of the Ottawa, & between that river & the St. Lawrence, with the country lying to the south of St. Lawrence, & bounded on the E. by Gulf of St. Lawrence, & on the S. by New Brunswick & the United States of America, according to the boundary line established by the treaty of Washington, & on the W. by Upper Canada. Its superficial area is 201,989 sq. ms., of which about 3,200 sq. ms. are covered with lakes, rivers, & streams. It is divided according to the representative act of 1852, into 61 counties: its minor subdivisions consisting of seigniories, fiefs, & townships.

Canada East, or Lower Canada, contained at the time of taking the census in 1852, 36 counties, as follows:—

General features.—The surface is agreeably diversified by hill, plain, & valley, but a great part of it is yet in its primitive state. The grand feature of Lower Canada is the Valley of the St. Lawrence. The river flows in a little N. of an E. course; & the valley is bounded on its upper part by a low range of mountains which extends from the Ottawa to Cape Tourment, a massive granite mountain on the St. Lawrence (alt. 1,890 ft.), 30 m. below Quebec, leaving a plain of from 12 to 40 m. in width, betwixt the highlands & the river. About 30 m. above Quebec the shores of the St. Lawrence assumes a bold & rugged character, which they maintain with increasing elevation to the gulf. The water-shed which divides the basin of Hudson bay from that of the St. Lawrence, attains to an elevation of about 3,000 ft. On the S. the valley is bounded by a range of highlands connected with the Green Mountains of Vermont, & separating the waters which flow into the Atlantic from those which flow into the basin of the St. Lawrence. One range of these highlands near the sources of the St. John river, diverges northwards & extends along the St. Lawrence to its mouth, with a distance of from 13 to 30 m. between it & the river, & at one point in Rimouski co., it rises to an elevation (Mount Logan) of 3,768 feet. The prevailing rocks on the S. side are granite in vast strata, but sometimes in boulders between the mountains & the shore; graywacke & clay slate also occur with limestone occasionally. The lower islands of the St. Lawrence are mere protuberances of the vast granite strata passing under the river. On the N. coast of the St. Lawrence, trap clay, slate, detached rocks, & granite, appear; but the latter is the prevalent rock in the interior. The coast & interior for a distance of 100 miles inland, exhibits with but few exceptions its primeval wildness.

Above this, traces of cultivation appear more frequently, & lofty mountains, extensive valleys, luxuriant forests, cultivated fields, villages & settlements, constitute with the noble river & its numerous islands an imposing landscape. The W. portion of Lower Canada, lying along the Ottawa, is an undulating or rolling country, thickly covered with forests, excepting a strip of flat lands, bordering the river, which has been laid out in townships. Below the township of Chatham the French seigniories commence. At the confluence of the Ottawa & the St. Lawrence is the island of Montreal, 32 m. long by 10½ m. broad. Its surface is mostly level, & its soil highly productive. Between the Saguenay & the St. Maurice rivers, a distance of 190 m., on the N. bank of the St. Lawrence, the country is generally well settled towards the river, & particularly in the neighborhood of Quebec. The country to the N. of the cleared districts in Canada is generally covered by forests, swamps, lakes, & low irregular ridges of primitive granite. From the Saguenay to the Anse au Sablon, on the Labrador coast, the interior of the country consists of rocky cliffs, rugged hills, barren plains, & thick forests. The country on the S. side of the St. Lawrence, to the W. of the Chaudiere river, is highly picturesque, & mostly under cultivation. From the Chaudiere to the E. boundary of the district of Gaspe, the face of the country is hilly, & the land rises in irregular ridges from the borders of the St. Lawrence towards the S., until they attain the edge of the table land in which the St. John's river has its sources. The district of Gaspe is a peninsulated tract of about 9 m. in width from N. to S., bounded by the St. Lawrence on the N., the gulf to the E., & the bay of Chalmers on the S. It rises in the centre into an elevated table land, and its surface is generally mountainous and wooded.

Rivers.—The rivers of Lower Canada next in importance to the St. Lawrence & the Ottawa, are the Rivière aux Lievres, an affluent of the Ottawa, the St. Maurice, the Saguenay, & the Manicowagon, entering the St. Lawrence from the N., the Richelieu & Chaudiere from the S., & the Restigouche river, which flows E. into the bay of Chaleurs. The St. John's river belongs in its upper part to the State of Maine, & has the lower part of its course in the territory of New Brunswick.

Climate.—Canada is a cold country compared with its distance from the equator, & the temperature is lower than that of any part of Europe under the same parallel. Thus, while the mean temperature of Quebec in 45° 49′ N. is 41.74°, that of Nantes, in France, in 47° 13′ N. lat. is 54.68°; & while the medium temp. of Nantes is about 40.46°, that of Quebec is only 14.18°; but their mean summer temp. is nearly identical, that of Nantes being 68.54°, of Quebec 68.00°. The climate of Canada East, however, has been observed to be rapidly ameliorating, & it has been ascertained that the medium cold of its winter has lost 8° of its former severity in the neighborhood of Quebec. The St. Lawrence also is nearly a month later in being shut up than when the country was first settled. All the birds common in summer make their appearance early in May, & enliven the woods with their melody. Vegetation proceeds with surprising quickness; wheat & oats are sown; the fields & deciduous trees assume their verdure; various indigenous & exotic flowers blow; & summer seems to have been ushered into existence by the first breath of spring. In June, July, & August, the weather is excessively hot; the mercury rises to 90°, & sometimes as high as 100°. Showers from the S.W., accompanied with thunder & lightning, occur during these months, about every ten days, or oftener, after which the winds generally blow from the N.W., & produce for a short time an agreeable coolness. The winter, although very severe, is not without its enjoyments. By means of carioles or sledges, the Canadians glide over the snow in a most agreeable manner, & with a degree of swiftness that appears almost incredible. Colds are much less frequent in winter than in summer. The winter markets are very curious; everything is frozen. Masses of beef, pork, sheep, deer, quantities of the various fowls, & also of fishes, abound in the stalls. The farmers have a great advantage in this country, in being able to fatten their stock during the abundance of the summer; & by killing them at the first cold weather, they keep frozen, to be disposed of at pleasure during the winter.

Soil and Cultivation.—The northern parts of Lower Canada are too barren to be cultivated with success, & even in the neighborhood of Quebec the crops of grain are light. The settlements of this province are chiefly bordering the banks of the St. Lawrence, the soil of which gradually improves on ascending the river. Wheat is sown early in May, & is generally ripe by the end of August. Maize is also grown, & tobacco. The grass land is good as low as Quebec. When the French commenced their settlements in Canada, the country presented the appearance of one vast unbounded forest, & great privileges were bestowed on the colonists, to encourage them to attempt its improvement. The land on each side of the St. Lawrence, & of the rivers which fall into its channel for a space of nearly 300 m. in length, extending from 90 m. below Quebec to 30 m. above Montreal, were granted in extensive lots called seigneuries, to officers in the army, & such other individuals as possessed interest to procure them, & who thus became seigneurs or lords of the territory. These tenures were entirely of a feudal nature, held immediately of the King, & upon every transfer of the property the purchaser paid a fifth part of the value to the receiver general, who gave a receipt upon the title, & by this act invested him with the possession. Each of these seigneuries occupied from 100 to 500 sq. ms., & the proprietors were bound to concede them in small lots to settlers upon certain conditions. These lots were very narrow in front, seldom extending along the course of the river for more than three acres; but they stretched a considerable way—generally 80 acres—into the country. After the conquest, those parts of the lower prov. which had not been previously granted as seigneuries, were surveyed, divided into townships, & granted to individuals, to be held by the English tenure of free & common soccage. These townships are in general divided into lots of above 2,000 acres each. With the exception of a few cases, the French Canadians are very deficient in agricultural skill. In consequence of the peculiar tenures before mentioned, their farms are mostly small, & their capitals limited. They are also generally ignorant of recent improvements, & strongly adverse to any innovations. It is only of late years that they have begun to adopt the application of manures, the rotation of crops, & the use of artificial grasses, or to employ the marl which is found in considerable quantities on the shores of the St. Lawrence. There were in Canada East in 1852, 15,322,749 acres of improved land, & 4,508,398 of unimproved land. Live Stock—Horses, 236,077; milch cows, 294,514; working oxen, &c., 111,881; sheep, 629,825; swine, 256,219. Agricultural products—Wheat, 3,045,600 bushels produced; rye, 345,290; Indian corn, 419,017; oats, 8,984,123; barley, 456,344; buckwheat, 588,280; peas & beans, 1,473,628; potatoes, 4,533,461; pounds of butter made, 9,637,152; cheese, 511,014; maple sugar, 6,190,964; pounds of wool produced, 1,442,874; flax & hemp, 1,867,016; hops, 111,158; tobacco, 488,762; hay, tons of, 965,653; clover & other grass seeds, 18,971 bushels.

Manufactures.—There were in Canada East in 1852, 17 woollen fac., producing 780,891 yds. of fulled cloth, & 850,850 yds. flannel; 889,528 yds. linen was also manufactured; 27 iron foundries, 536 grist mills, 14 oatmeal m., 1,079 saw m., & 178 tanneries.

In order to present the sea trade of Canada, it is necessary to treat Quebec & Montreal as one port. The exports of Quebec are more than double those of Montreal, & the imports vice versâ. Ships of the largest burden ascend to Quebec; the approach to Montreal is limited by the shallowness of the water in Lake St. Peter to 13 feet, but this impediment is overcome so that ships drawing 15 feet may ascend to Montreal. Statement of the trade of 1851:—

Quebec	$4,091,204	Quebec	$5,623,988
Montreal	9,177,164	Montreal	2,503,916
Inland ports	3,144,316	Inland ports	4,512
Total Imports	$16,412,684	Total Exports	$8,132,416

There are in Quebec about 25 ship-building estabs., & 8 or 10 floating docks capable of receiving the largest class vessels. The class of vessels built range from 500 to 1,500 tons. The average cost complete for sea is from $32 to $40 per ton. In 1851, 40 square-rigged vessels were built, with an aggregate of 38,909 tons, & smaller craft, making in all 40,567 tons. The export of white pine timber, &c., 1851, in 1,394 vessels, aggregate tonnage, 586,093, was 15,941,600 cubic feet.

Lower Canada is now divided into 61 counties, according to the new representative act of 1852-3.

CANANDAIGUA LAKE, N. Y., is 14 miles long, & from 1 to 1½ miles wide, & with its highly-cultivated shores, presents many fine views. The water is remarkably clear, & abounds with excellent fish. Its outlet flows into Flint creek, then into Clyde river, & thence into Seneca r., the common outlet of a cluster of lakes.

CANANEA, a maritime town of Brazil, prov. S. Paulo, on a small isl. in the bay of Tarapande. Lat. 25° S. Pop. 2,000, suburbs included.

CANANORE, Canura, a seaport town of British India, presid. Madras, dist. Malabar, at the head of a small bay, 53 m. N.N.W. Calicut. It has, with its suburbs, about 11,000 houses, & is the capital of a territory long governed by female sovereigns, & comprising most of the Laccadive islands. It has an active trade with Bengal, Arabia, Sumatra, &c.: imports horses, piece goods, almonds, sugar, opium, silk, benzoin, & camphor: exports pepper, cardamoms, sandalwood, coir, & shark-fins.

CANARA, the most W. district of the Madras presid., British India, extending along the Malabar coast, between lat. 12° & 15° N., & lon. 74° & 75° E., having landward the British dists. Malabar, Coorg, & Dharwar, with Mysore, & the Portuguese territory of Goa. Area, 7,477 sq. m. Pop. 759,776. Surface uneven, & the Ghauts form its E. boundary. Rice is exported hence in large quantities to Arabia, Goa, and Bombay. Forests of teak & other timber trees are extensive. Principal towns, Mangalore & Barcelore. In S. Canara (as in Malabar) all inheritance descends in the female line, & instead of a man's own children, those of his sister or aunt are his heirs. It is curious that 50,000 of the population are Roman Catholics. The prov. was transferred to Britain in 1799.

CANARIES, or CANARY ISLANDS. Fortunatæ Insulæ, an archipelago, Atlantic ocean, about 60 m. from the W. coast of N. Africa, between lat. 27° 40′, and 29° 25′ N., & lon. 13° 25′, & 18° 16′ W. They consist of 7 principal islands & several islets, arranged in the following order from East to West:—Lanzarote & Fuerteventura, with the islets Graciosa, Sta. Clara, Alegranza, & Lobos: Gran Canaria, Teneriffe, Gomera, Palma, & Hierro (Ferro). Area of the whole estimated at 4,000 sq. m. Pop. 1849, 257,719. The coasts of these islands are rocky & abrupt, & they are covered with mountains, some of which attain a great elevation, the Pico de Teyde in Teneriffe being 12,182 feet. Their geological formation is most singular & interesting; it consists of a continuous series of volcanic mountains, which rise in a circular form from the coast around a principal crater, which serves as axis; the greater part of them are deeply indended, & in the form of a cone reversed. The surf. is volcanic, presenting a succession of mountains and plains, extinct craters & fertile valleys. There are no rivers, but numerous torrents. The tropical heat is moderated by the Atlantic breezes, & the climate is equable. Winter is almost unknown on the coasts. In Oct., the warmest month, the temp. varies from 78° to 87° Fahr.; & in Jan., the coldest, it is from 60° to 66° Fahr. near the sea; decreasing with the elevation. The rainy season commences in November & continues till February; during the dry season, from April to October, the weather is uniformly fine, and the trade winds blow steadily. E. & S.E. winds are the scourge of these islands; blowing over the burning plains of Africa, they carry an intensely hot and dry air, which destroys vegetation & induces disease. In 1704 the Canaries suffered severely from this cause. Fresh water is so scarce, especially in the S. parts of the islands, as in some seasons to induce many of the inhabitants to emigrate. The vegetation of these islands is not less interesting than their geological formation. The chief productions are wine, oil, grain, the sugar-cane, & exquisite fruits of all kinds; and the surrounding seas abound in fish. The principal foreign trade is carried on with the United States, England, & Hamburg, & there is considerable commerce between the different islands. The annual produce is estimated at 170 qrs. of grain, 54,000 pipes of wine, 300,000 quintals barilla, & 500,000 barrels of potatoes. The goat is among the most valuable animals; dogs are numerous, & all the domestic animals of Europe are easily naturalized. The camel & the ass are used as beasts of burden. Among birds are the vulture, bustard, pheasant, wood-pigeon, red partridge, blackbird, linnet, & the thistle finch or canary bird. The inhabitants are of European origin, mostly Spaniards. Since 1493 these islands have belonged to Spain, of which kingdom they form a prov., governed by the same laws as the peninsular portion; the cap. of the whole archipelago is Santa Cruz de Teneriffe.

Pop. variously stated from 25,000 to 100,000, mostly Afghans, but including many Persians, Uzbeks, Beloochees, Jews, & Hindoos, which last almost monopolize the commerce. It is enclosed by bastioned mud walls, 3¾ m. in circumference, & by a ditch; & it has a citadel on its N. side. Two principal streets, about 50 yards broad, & lined with shops, traverse the interior in opposite directions, intersected at its centre, where is a kind of circus, & a domed market-place. Houses, mostly ill built, of wood, & with domed or flat roofs; thoroughfares filthy, though the place is well supplied with water from canals & wells. The mosques are mean, & almost the only public building worthy of notice is the tomb of Ahmed Shah (the founder of the modern town),—an octagonal edifice, 40 feet in diameter by 70 ft. in height, & mounted on a platform. Various manufs. are carried on in Candahar; & its transit trade is considerable. Its vicinity is well watered by canals from the Urghundaub river, 4 m. W.ward, & produces the finest fruits, with corn, tobacco, madder, &c. Candahar is supposed to have been originally founded by Alexander the Great. It was taken by Tamerlane in 1384, & by Shah Abbas, of Persia, in 1620, & was held by British troops from 1839 to 1842, when it was finally evacuated.

CANTERBURY, a city, bor., and county of itself, Engl., and its metropolitan see, within co. Kent, on the Stour, 58 m. E.S.E. London, with which it communicates by r. r. Lat. 51° 16′ 48″ N., lon. 1° 4′ 31″ E. Area, 121 ac. Inhab. houses, 3,654. Pop. 1841, 1,545; 1851, 18,398. The parliamentary and municipal boundaries include the whole of the city and suburbs, with exception of a few houses in Thanington pa., Ashford Road. It is situated in a rich vale watered by the Stour, and has 4 main streets, branching from a centre at right angles, and each terminating in a suburb beyond the anc. walls, considerable remains of which still exist. Its cathedral, erected in 12th and two following centuries, on the site of the first Christian church built in Saxon Engl., is in the form of a double cross, with a central and 2 W. towers, and presents a magnificent union of almost every style of Christian architecture. The choir is the largest and one of the finest in the kingdom, and the pavement of the chapel of the Holy Trinity is worn into hollows by the knees of the innumerable pilgrims who here worshipped at the shrine of Thomas a Becket. Amongst other interesting tombs here, is that of the Black Prince. A fine chapter-ho., & a valuable library are attached to the cathed., under which is a spacious crypt, used as a French Protestant church since the reign of Elizabeth. The num. pa. churches are mostly anc., but possess little interest. The gr. school founded by Henry VIII. for 50 scholars, has sev. exhibitions and scholarships at Cambridge. There are numerous other endowed schools; an hospital for poor brethren, founded by Archbp. Lanfranc, present annual rev. 411*l.*; Jesus hospital, founded in 1595, rev. 584*l.*; another hospital, with a rev. of 306*l.*; an infirmary, an anc. guild-hall, a session-ho., gaol, and ho. of correction, work-ho., and exchange. Large barracks, a theatre, ball-room, and philos. institution, with a library and museum. A fine ancient gateway, and some remains of St. Augustine's abbey, and of a Norman castle, the old Chequers' Inn, immortalized by Chaucer, and the Donjon or Dungeon field (now formed, with its mound of supposed Danish origin, into a beautiful planted walk), may be specified as objects of interest. In the immediate vicinity are several woollen mills, but the chief business is the export of agricultural produce, especially of the hops extensively grown in the neighbourhood, and of brawn, for which the city has some repute. Chief mkts., Wed. (for hops) and Sat. Fairs for 10 or 12 days, begin Oct. 10. Petty-sessions, Thursdays. Quarter-sessions for capital offences are also held. It sends 2 m. to H. of C. Canterbury was, previous to the Roman invasion, a place of note as a religious institution. It was made a princip. station by the Romans, & in the 2d century Christianity was introduced. It subsequently became the cap. of the Saxon kingdom of Kent, under the name of Caer-Cant, hence Cantuaria & Canterbury. The archb'pric, founded A.D. 597, has had 93 archb'ps, including the present primate, the most famous of whom have been St. Augustine, the founder of the see, St. Dunstan, Stigand, Lanfranc, Anselm, Becket, Cardinal Pole, Cranmer, Laud, and Tillotson. The archb'p of Canterbury is "primate of all Engl.," and the first peer of the realm, next to the royal family. He crowns the sovereign in Westminster Abbey, and amongst other privileges has that of conferring degrees in divinity, law, and physic. His province comprises 20 suffragan b'prics, and his diocese 258 pas., besides 100 pas., called "peculiars," in other sees.

CANTON, (Chinese, Sang-Ching, the "provincial city,") a city & seaport of China, & the greatest commercial emporium of Asia, cap. prov. Quangtong, on lt. b. of the Canton or Pearl (Choo-keang) river, about 70 m. from its mouth, in the China Sea. Lat. 23° 6′ 9″ N., lon. 113° 15′ E. M. T. of year, 69° .9; winter, 54° .8; summer, 82° Fahr. Pop. has been estimated at upwards of 1,000,000, but this is probably far too high a calculation. With its suburbs it occupies the N. bank of the river, extending inland nearly to a row of heights commanding it on the N. & N.E., but between which & the city is a broken ravine; to the S. is an alluvial plain, formed by the delta of the river. The city is enclosed by a wall of brick, on a foundation of red sandstone, 6 or 7 m. in circ., & entered by 12 gates; & it is unequally divided by another wall with 4 gates, into the old & new town, in the former of which are the residences of most of the high officers, the public arsenal, &c. The walls are in some places mounted with cannon. On the N. heights are 4 strong forts, & on some islands in the river are other forts, termed the "Dutch" & the "French folly." Various detached batteries also guard the approach to the city by the river. The suburbs are nearly as large as the city itself; on the S. they stretch all along the river side; & at their S.W. corner are the hongs or European quarter—a range of buildings about 1¼ furlong in length, built upon a flat raised on piles, & separated from the river by a quay 100 yards in breadth, called Respondentia Walk. There are 13 hongs, including those of the British, Dutch, American, French, Austrian, Swedish, Danish, Parsee, & other merchants, & which merely consist of 4 or 5 brick or stone houses, ranged around a closed court: 2 of them are partly occupied by good European hotels. The English hong far surpasses the rest in elegance & extent. Near the quay is another small space, about 50 or 60 yards sq., walled in & laid out as a garden; & the above narrow limits comprise all the territory assigned to foreigners. Contiguous to the hongs are Old & New China Streets, & Hog Lane; the 2 former are among the best streets in the suburbs; the last is a filthy narrow lane, well known to foreign seamen, & where many disturbances between them & the Chinese have arisen. The city & the suburbs are laid out & built after one fashion. Streets narrow & crooked, varying from 2 to 16 feet, but averaging 7 or 8 feet in width, paved & flagged, each closed by gates guarded at night, & each of the trading thoroughfares appropriated to one trade. Several canals intersect the city, & are crossed by stone bridges. Houses mostly of brick, but also of stone, mud, & wood, seldom more than one story in height, with flat roofs & terraces, floored with hardened mud, stone or tiles, & the place of window-glass commonly supplied by paper, mica, or thin shell. The residences of the wealthy inhabs. are built within a walled court, & are richly furnished; those of the middle classes, in which about one-third of the pop. resides, have no courts; & those of the lower orders, which are numerous, along the banks of the canals & in the suburbs, are wretched mud hovels, in which from 10 to 20 persons are sometimes crowded in one apartment. A large part of the pop. resides on the water; & for 4 or 5 miles opposite the city, & both above & below, the river is crowded with vessels & rafts of all kinds, on many of which large numbers of poultry are reared. Upwards of 120 temples are enumerated in & adjacent to Canton, the principal being the remarkable Buddhist temple of Honan, on an adjacent large island. [Ho-nan.] Within the old city are two other considerable temples, & a Mohammedan mosque, with a dome & minaret 160 ft. in height; & outside of the walls, on the N. side, is a lofty pagoda. Canton has several hospitals, a grand hall for examination of candidates for literary honors, 14 high schools, & about 30 colleges, 3 of which have each 200 students. Manufs. various & extensive, & the shops are filled with articles of Chinese workmanship. 17,000 persons are said to be employed in silk-weaving, 50,000 in the manuf. of all kinds of cloth, & upwards of 4,000 in shoemaking. Great numbers of individuals work in wood, stone, iron, & brass, & the book trade is considerable. The markets abound with all kinds of live stock for food, including dogs, cats, owls, &c., suitable only for Chinese consumers; but provisions of all kinds are abundant & tolerably cheap. Canton is well supplied with water from reservoirs & springs. Burglaries are rare; but loss by fire is frequent, & in 1822, above 10,000 houses were burnt, besides the E. India Company's factory. The city is also subject to inundations.

Until 1843, all the legitimate foreign trade of China was conducted at Canton; & its amount before the breaking out of the late war, was estimated (inclusive of the trade by junks with adjacent countries) at 80,000,000 dolls. annually. Tea is the great article of export to Europe, &c.; next to which come silk & silk piece goods, the precious metals, cassia, sugar, porcelain, & many other inferior articles. The exports to America & Europe amount annually to the value of $40,000,000. Imports comprise woollen & cotton goods, raw cotton, cotton yarn, ginseng, wrought iron, tin, lead, rattans, wood, spices, skins, ivory, &c. The exports of teas to the U. S., A., in the year ending June 30th, 1852, were in 68 vessels, of black tea, 13,361,513 lbs; green, 20,965,915; together, 34,327,428 lbs. The importation of opium into Canton & other ports, is totally permitted, though not legalized. In 1848, 261 American & European ships, of an aggregate burden of 116,248 tons, entered; & 257 do., aggregate burden 108,401 tons, cleared out of the port of Canton. The exports in 1848 amounted in value to $8,000,000, & the imports to $6,500,000.

On the 26th of May 1841, the Chinese troops were totally defeated, & both the river defences & the hill forts above Canton captured by the British forces, who, however, did not enter the city, a truce having been forthwith agreed to. In 1847, in consequence of various insults & grievances committed by the Chinese government, the Bogue Forts were again captured by the British, & a new convention agreed to.

CAPE BRETON, an insular colony of British N. America, at the E. extremity of Nova Scotia, mostly between lat. 45° & 47° N., & lon. 60° & 61° 30′ W. Extreme length from N. to S., 100 m.; extreme breadth 85 m. Area, 3,120 sq. ms. Pop. 1851, 54,878. It is divided into 4 counties, viz., Cape Breton, Inverness, Richmond, & Victoria. It is very irregularly shaped, & greatly indented with bays; almost intersected by an arm of the sea called the Bras d' Or. Surface uneven. Granite, limestone, & prim. slates prevail; & gypsum, salt, & coal are found. The land to the N. has an elev. of 1,800 ft. There are several fresh water lakes, & numerous rivers, but none navigable. Salt springs are found on the coast. The climate is varied, but not so rigorous as that on the adjoining continent. Vegetation is very rapid. In 1831, about 85,000 acres of land were estimated to be under culture. Maize & other grains are raised; but the corn produced is insufficient for home consumption. Principal exports are pine, oak, birch, & maple timber to Great Britain; fish & coal to the U. States & W. Indies. The pop. is mostly of French, Scotch, or Irish descent. This isl. forms part of the government of Nova Scotia, & sends 6 mems. to the H. of Assembly. Princip. towns, Sydney & Louisborg. Cape Breton was first colonized by the French in 1712, & was taken by the British in 1758.

St. Vincent's College, a Roman Catholic institution, has a president & 4 professors, & 196 students. It was agitated by earthquakes in 1810 and 12, & some chimneys were thrown down. It has a steam saw m.

CAPE OF GOOD HOPE, an important colony of Great Britain, occupying the S. part of the peninsula of Africa, between lat. 29° 41′ & 34° 51′ S., & lon. 17° 10′ & 27° 32′ E.; bounded S. & E. by the Indian, & W. by the Atlantic Ocean, N. by the countries of the Namaquas, Griquas, & other Hottentot tribes, & N.E. by British Kafraria. Length W. to E. (Cape peninsula to Keiskamma riv.), 550 m.; average breadth 250 m. Area estimated at 110,000 sq. m. Pop. 1850, 261,436, mostly Africans, Dutch, negroes, & a small number of Hottentots. The country is formed of a series of terraces rising in successive stages from S. to N. The chief mountain chains are the Drankensteen, Zwellendam, Zwartenberg, & Sneeuw-Bergen, in which last is the Spitzkop or Compass-berg, the culminating point of the whole, estimated at 10,250 feet in elevation. Table mountain, at the S.W. extremity of the colony, is an insulated flat-topped mass, 3,582 feet in height, the S. point of which forms the promontory of the Cape of Good Hope, 1,000 feet in elevation, in lat. 34° 22′ S., lon. 18° 29′ E. It was discovered by Diaz, a Portuguese admiral, in 1486, & called by him "Cape of Storms." Cape Agulhas, the next remarkable promontory, is the southmost point of Africa, in lat. 34° 51′ S., lon. 20° 2′ E.; it gives its name to an extensive sand bank, and to an important current which flows from the Indian to the Atlantic Ocean. The most extensive plain is the Great Karoo, an arid tract upwards of 200 m. in length, & 50 m. in breadth, between the Zwarteveld, and the Nieuwveld mountains. The only passage from one terrace to another is through the Kloofs, narrow & difficult mountain gorges; some of these have been made passable for wheeled carriages, but the roads in general are very bad. The principal bays are (from W. to E.) St. Helena, Table, False (the W. part of which forms Simon's bay), St. Sebastian, Mossel, Plettenberg, and Algoa. Streams are numerous but rapid, mostly dry in summer & unfit for navigation; the chief are, on the E. & S. coast, Keiskamma, Great Fish, Bushman, Sunday, Camtoos & Breede; on the W., Berg & Elephant or Oliphant; & on the N., several small streams tributary to the Orange. Climate mild & healthy, but very dry; rains irregular, often falling in torrents on the coast, but rare in the plains of the interior. Snow falls only in the mountains, & is not permanent, even on the most elevated. December & January are the warmest, & June & July the coldest months. Mean temp. at Cape Town—in summer 58°.3; in winter 76°.6, Fahr. The greater number of diseases are unknown at the Cape; the most common are consumption & apoplexy. Few of the inhabitants attain an advanced age. Soil fertile where sufficiently watered, but the general appearance of the country is sterile & monotonous. The arid steppes or Karoos of the interior are destitute of trees, & covered with an ephemeral vegetation only after heavy rains. The flora of the colony is of a peculiar character, & is calculated to comprise 1,200 species, which, however, are more remarkable for the variety & beauty of their flowers than for their uses. The most valuable is the aloe, the produce of which has been exported in one year to the amount of $12,000; a species of soda, found in the Karoo, is employed by the inhabitants in the manufacture of soap, & candles are made from the covering of the wax-berry. European grains, & the fruits of temperate and tropical regions, have been successfully introduced. Corn is raised more than requisite for consumption, & the cultivation of the vine is an important source of wealth; a good white wine is produced in the interior, but only the small vineyard at the foot of Table mountain produces the celebrated liqueur called Constantia. Cattle rearing is the chief branch of rural industry; & the introduction of the Merino sheep has rendered the rural trade of the colony important. The value of produce of the colony exported in 1840 amounted to £359,517. The coasts abound with mackerel & herrings, & in 1842, the whale & seal fishery employed 144 boats. Some of the wild animals of Africa are still met with, but the larger species decrease in proportion as colonization extends. The lion, hyena, buffalo, hippopotamus, & zebra, are occasionally seen; the rhinoceros is rare, and the elephant is driven beyond the boundary. The ostrich & eagle are found in the mountains, & snakes are numerous. The commerce of the colony is extensive; the ports are Cape Town & Simon's town in the W., & fort Elizabeth in the E. Total value of exports in 1844, £350,735, of which £246,217 were to the United Kingdom. Imports same year, £1,123,061. In 1845, 35 ships (3,713 tons), & 307 men belonged to the colony; & in 1847, 791 ships (209,426 tons), entered, & 782 ships (205,618 tons), cleared from its ports. The colony consists of an E. & a W. prov., & these are divided into 14 districts, viz., Cape Division & Stellenbosch in the S.W., Zwellendam, George, Uitenhage, & Albany on the S. coast, Clanwilliam on the N.W., Worcester & Beaufort, Graaf Reynet, & Somerset in the interior, Colesberg on the N.E., Cradock & Victoria on the E. The capitals have the same names as the dists., except Graham's Town, which is the cap. of Albany, &

Fredericksburg of Victoria dist. Stellenbosch is the chief wine, & Zwellendam the principal corn growing dists., the others are mostly appropriated to grazing. Government is administered by a parliament, composed of the Governor, Legislative Council of 16 members, & a House of Assembly of 46 members, elected for a term of 5 years. (Salary of Gov. & Com.-in-Chief, £5,000.) The Dutch founded a colony at the Cape in 1648, which was taken by the British in 1795. [CAPE TOWN.]

The boers or farmers of the Cape colony, descendants of the original Dutch settlers, have lost much of their ancestral industry & cleanliness; they are affectionate in their family relations, & strict in religious observances, but prejudiced & illiterate. Education has been long neglected in the colony; the only institutions of importance were, till lately, the S. African college, & the S. African institution at Cape town; but a comprehensive system, embracing primary & classical schools, was instituted by the government in 1839. In many of the dists. are missionary schools supported by different protestant societies. In 1842, there were 46 public, & 102 private schools, attended by 2,700 children. The colonial grants in the same year were, for educational purposes, 6,021*l.*, & for religious purposes, distributed among the different sects, 10,481*l.* Slavery was abolished in 1833. The English language is alone used in the courts of law, but the Dutch is also taught in the government schools. The money in use is exclus. British; & Dutch weights and measures are nearly superseded by the English. The peace of the colony is frequently interrupted by incursions of the Kaffers, & other savage tribes on the frontier.

CAPE HATTERAS, a headland, N. C. Lat. 35° 15′ 12″ N., lon. 75° 30′ 54″ W. The light-house was built in 1798 of brown sand-stone. CAPE TOWN, a fortifd. seaport town of S. Africa, cap. of the Cape colony on its W. coast at the N. declivity of Table mntn., & on the S.W. shore of Table bay. Lat. of observatory 33° 56′ 55″ S., lon. 18° 28′ 7″ E., 32 m. N. "the Capes." Mean temp. of year 67° .3 S. winter 76° .6; sum. 58° .3, Fahr. Pop. 22,543, of whom one-third were blacks. The town, which is situated in a plain, is defended by a castle & several forts: it is regularly laid out in the Dutch style, with canals in the principal streets; the streets are broad & cross at right angles, but unpaved; the houses are flat roofed & painted or white-washed, with terraces in front. From its situation, facing the noon-day sun, & backed by naked mountains, the town is exposed to excessive heat, & is often intolerable from dust; it is also exposed to violent gales from the S.E. The only public building of importance is the governor's house, a plain but spacious edifice. There are numerous villas. in the environs; & the Wynberg, a pretty hill, is a favorite resort of the wealthy inhabitants. It has a royal marine observatory, & a magnetic observatory. The educational establishments are the S. African college & the S. African institution, a good public library, & a valuable private botanic garden. There are 2 banks with an aggregate capital of £130,000. Cape town was constituted a bishopric in 1847. Table bay is capacious enough to contain any number of vessels, but is exposed to W. winds, which from June to Aug. produce heavy swells; its N.W. points is marked by a light-house. In 1848 560 vessels entered the port, ag. tonnage 164,417. Cape town was founded by the Dutch in 1650, & with its subject territory was taken by the British in 1795. It was restored to the Dutch by the treaty of Amiens; recaptured by the British in 1806, & finally ceded to Britain in 1815. The Cape of Good Hope was discovered by Diaz in 1486, & called by him the "Cape of Storms."

CAPE VERD, the most W. Cape of Africa, in the Atlantic Ocean, between the rivers Senegal & Gambia. Lat. 14° 43′ N., lon. 17° 34′ W. Its name is derived from a group of enormous baobab trees which crowns its summit.

CAPE VERD ISLANDS are situated 329 m. W. of the Cape, between lat. 14° 45′ & 17° 13′ N., and lon. 22° 45′ & 25° 25′ W. The archip. consists of the following 10 islands, Sal, Boavista, Mayo, Santiago (St. James), the largest, Forgo, Brava, Grande, Rombo, S. Nicolão, & S. Luzia, & 4 islets, Branco, Razo, S. Vicente, & S. Antão. Area estimated at 1,680 sq. m. Pop. 1850, 86,738. The white pop., in the whole archip., is to the colored as 1 to 20. The surface of the islands is in general mntnous., & some of their peaks have a considerable elevation. The volcano of Fogo is 9,157 feet in height. The soil is extremely various, but mostly fertile; the absence of trees & the scarcity of water are the causes of frequent & severe distress. Climate very hot, but tempered by the sea breezes; mean temp. of May & August 70° .9, April to September 70°, during the other months 65° F.; the mornings & evenings are cool, & dews abundant. Chief vegetable products, maize, rice, & French beans. Coffee, introduced in 1790, has completely succeeded; the cotton shrub is indigenous; indigo grows wild, & tobacco is cultivated in some of the islands; little sugar is grown, & wine of inferior quality; tropical fruits are abundant. Orchill, the trade in which was formerly monopolized by the government, & yielded an annual revenue of 24,000*l.*, decreased in value so rapidly after the trade was thrown open in 1837, as to require new restrictions, which were put in force in 1844. Cattle are extensively reared, & dried & salted provisions form a considerable article of export. Goats are still numerous, although many are annually killed for the sake of their skins; pigs are abundant in several of the isls. Asses & mules are the only beasts of burden. Fowls are so abundant in most of the islands that they are sold for less than 1d. each; serpents & venomous reptiles are unknown; whales abound in the neighboring seas, & are fished by the English & Americans. Amber is found on all the coasts, which are frequented by immense numbers of turtle. The natives are quiet & docile, but extremely indolent; the Portuguese language is corrupted into a jargon called lingua creoula. Agriculture & the preparation of salt are chief branches of industry; linens, pottery-ware, soap, & leather are manufactured in some of the isls. These islands, together with the Portuguese possessions on the continent of Africa, near C. Roxo, constitute the prov. of Cape Verd, the cap. of which was removed from Porto Praya to Mindello in the island S. Vincent, in 1838. The prov. is under a gov.-general, who exercises both civil & military power. The military force comprised in 1843, 534 men. Previous to 1840, there was only 1 school of public instruction in the archip., since then there are 12. The Roman Catholic is the only form of worship.

CASHER'S VALLEY, p-o., Macon co., N. C., 337 W. by S. Raleigh, 567 W.

CASHGAR, Chinese-Turkestan. [KASHGAR.]

CASHMERE, or KASHMIR, a country of N.W. Hindostan, Punjab dom., consisting of the upper valley of the river Jailum (anc. Hydaspes), between lat. 33° 15′ & 34° 30′ N., & lon. 73° 40′ & 75° 30′ E., enclosed on all sides by ranges of the Himalaya, separating it N. & E. from Tibet, & S. & E. from the Punjab. Estimated area, 4,500 sq. m. Pop. in 1832, estimated at 800,000; but in 1836, owing to earthquakes, cholera, & famine, it had declined to 200,000. The valley of Cashmere has an average elevation of 5,500 or 6,000 feet above the sea. Several mountains around it rise to 15,000 feet, & one in E. Cashmere reaches to 19,650 feet in height. The country well watered by the Jailum river & its numerous tributaries, is highly picturesque. There about a dozen of passes through the mountains, 4 of which are practicable at all times of the year. The Pengal Mntns. are of basalt, and limestone & marble are common, but primary rocks rare, & few metals or important minerals. There are 3 lakes in one valley connected with the river. Snow covers the country for five winter months, but the temp. then is seldom much below the freezing point. Rain falls copiously in spring, & early summer. The summer heat varies from 75° to 85° Fahr. Earthquakes are common; in 1828 1,200 persons perished by one. The soil on the basis of the mountains & valley is a rich loam, with sub-soil of clay. Rice is the principal crop; wheat, maize, millet, barley, melons, cucumbers, & other Europ. fruits & vegetables; tobacco, cotton, oil-seeds, & Indian hemp are also raised; and Cashmere supplies most part of Hindostan with saffron; flowers, & especially roses, are abundant. The water-lily, & water-nut (trapt-bispinosa), grow in great abundance, & are used for food, of the latter 60,000 tons are raised every year; floating gardens constructed in the lakes, raise abundance of vegetables. Bees, kept in hives constructed in the houses, produce excellent honey. The natives are of a tall robust frame of body, with manly features—the women full-formed and handsome, with acquiline nose & features, resembling the Jewish. Dress of both sexes a long loose woollen wrapper & trowsers. The language is a dialect of Sanscrit with a mixture of Persian. The country abounds with monuments of great antiquity. The staple wealth of Cashmere long consisted in its shawls, woven from the inner hair or down of goats, fed on the table-land of Tibet, at from 16,000 to 17,000 feet above the sea, & which article is imported by way of Leh in Little Tibet. Some years ago the annual value of the shawls manufactured in Cashmere was estimated at $1,500,000, but the amount has since greatly diminished, without the manufacture itself having at all deteriorated. Other manufactures are lacquered wares in great variety, excellent leather & saddlery, paper, attar of roses, cutlery, glass-wares & articles in rock-crystal, chalcedony. Exports valued at $2,000,000 a-year, the principal articles being woollen fabrics. Imports valued at $250,000, of which amount, about 3-5ths were paid for shawl-wool. Inhabitants mostly Mohammedans. Cashmere contains 10 towns, & upwards of 2,000 vills. Principal towns, Serinagur (or Cashmere), Chapinian, Islamabad, & Pampur. It is considered a holy land by Hindoos; & it has numerous Buddhic antiquities. In 1586 the country was conquered by the Mogul Emperor Akbar. In 1752 it was subjugated by the Afghans, & remained under their sway till it fell into the power of the Sikhs in 1819.

Coast line irregular, especially on the E. side, where are the gulfs of Mertvoi, Mangushlak, Kenderlinsk, Kara-bugos, and Balkan. Opposite the last, the penins. of Apsheron (celebrated for its naphtha), stretches into it on its W. side. The S. coast is almost unbroken, and bounded at a short distance, by lofty mntns.; its N. shores are low and marshy, or composed of sandy flats and broken into countless islets, especially about the mouth of the Volga. The Caspian contains several considerable isls., especially on its E. side. Depth of water along the coast is generally inconsiderable, and even at several miles from the shore it rarely exceeds 12 feet; but in the centre it varies from 120 to 300 feet; and in one place Hanway found no bottom at 480 fathoms. Its surface (supposed to be about 300 ft. lower than during early historical times, when this sea extended much farther E.ward), is now estimated to be 83¼ ft. below the level of the Black Sea; and the difference is supposed to be augmenting by the decrease of the Caspian; a phenomenon, remarkable on account of the vast quantity of water it receives from the Volga, Ural, Terek, Kur, and other rivers, but due, probably, to its extensive evaporating surface. The water of this sea is not nearly so salt as that of the ocean. It has no tides, and in winter its N. part is covered with ice. Sturgeons, salmon, sterlets, and seals, are abundant, and many active fisheries are carried on in this sea, the trade of which is nearly monopolized by Astrakan. Guriev, Krasnoi-yar, Derben, Baku, Reshd, & Balfrush, are the other principal towns on its coasts. The Caspian was known to the Greeks and Romans. Herodotus derives its name from the Caspu, who inhabited its S. coast. It forms the chief means of communication between Russia, Persia, and Cent. Asia. The navigation is difficult. Steam packets have now been estab. on it.

CASSAY, KATHEE, or MUNNIPOOR, an independent country of Further India, mostly between lat. 24° and 26° N., and lon. 93° and 95° E., having N. the Naga territory (Assam), E. and S. the Burmese dom., and W. Cachar. Area, estimated at 8,000 sq. m.; and pop. at 30,000. It consists of a valley about 2,500 feet above the sea, inclosed by mntns., varying from about 3,000 to 8,200 feet in height, and which are covered with dense forests. Surface of the lowlands fertile, but in many parts swampy, and scarcely 1-4th part is under culture. Its rivers are tributary to the Barah or the Irawadi; the princip. is the Imphan-Toorel. Rice, tobacco, indigo, cotton, sugar, opium, mustard, & most of the kitchen vegetables of Europe are raised; in the N. the true tea-plant is abundant. An excellent breed of ponies, greatly prized by the Burmese as cavalry horses, is reared, and many are exported into Yunnan, with wax, cotton, and ivory, the tribute of the hill-tribes. Cotton cloths, muslins, silk stuffs, and some iron wares are manufactured, and exchanged for other goods with the inhabitants of the neighbouring countries. The people are more nearly allied to the Hindoos than the Burmese. The upper classes profess the Hindoo faith, and Cassay may be considered the extreme E. limit of Brahminism. Government vested in an hereditary rajah, assisted by a numerous divan; and the political condition of the people appears to present a favorable contrast to that of their E. neighbours. Armed force about 3,200 men. Public revenue, mostly paid in kind, is valued at 8,330*l*. Principal town Munnipoor, under which name also the whole dist. is generally understood. Cassay belonged to the Burmese before 1826, but it was rendered independent by the treaty of Yandaboo.

CASTILE, p. o., Clinton co., Mo.

CASTILE, (Span. Castilla,) a former kingdom of Spain, which occupied the great cent. table land of the peninsula, composed chiefly of tertiary formation, & elevated 2,300 feet above the level of the sea. In the 10th cent. this region was a country, of which Burgos was the cap.; at the commencement of the 11th cent. it was erected into a kingdom, & was successively extended by the addition of the kingdoms of Leon, Estremadura, & Andalucia. The marriage of Ferdinand, king of Aragon, with Isabella of Castile, in 1474, united under one sceptre all the Christian states of Spain, & the conquest of Granada, in 1492, led to the establishment of the kingdom of Spain. From the great importance of Castile, as the centre of the kingdom, the name of Castilians is often used to indicate Spaniards in general.

CASTILLE (NEW), Span. Castilla-la-Neuve, an old prov. of Spain, forming the S. portion of the anc. kingdom of Castile; its cap. was Madrid. Pop. 1849, 119,-206. It is now divided into the provs. of Madrid, Toledo, Ciudad-Real, Cuença, & Guadalaxara. This region forms part of the central table land of Spain, bounded N. by the mntns. of the Sierra Guadarrama, & S. by those of the Sierra Morena, & traversed by several minor chains, which separate broad plains or valleys. Its rivers comprise the upper courses of the Tagus, Guadiana, Guadalquiver, the Segura, & the Xucar. Climate extremely dry & healthy. On account of the elevation of the surface, the winters are excessively cold. In summer the heat is great in the valleys. Winds are violent & very dry; & in summer the air is loaded with dust. Soil is generally fertile, but suffers much from drought; water is very scarce, often for several months in succession it does not rain, & the average annual fall for the table land is only 10 inches. Agriculture is in a very neglected state, yet grain is raised sufficient for consumption. Castile is nearly destitute of trees. Excellent pasture is obtained in the mountains in summer, & in the valleys in winter. Oil & wine abound in many parts of the prov. of the latter, the most celeb. is that of Val-de Penas, in the prov. Ciudad Real. Saffron, madder, lint, hemp, & fruit, are cultivated to a small extent. The rearing of cattle is an important branch of industry; horses are of an excellent quality, but not numerous: the sheep of the Serranias Cuenca & Molina supply the celebrated merino wool. The mntns. of the Sierra Morena afford the richest supply of minerals in the kingdom. The chief mines are those of Almaden. The prov. affords excellent marble & rock-salt, & contains numerous mineral springs. The principal manufs. are those of cloth, silk, cotton & paper. The chief industrial estabs. are in Madrid, & its environs. Grain & wool are the most important articles of export.

CASTILE (OLD), Span. CASTILLA-LA-VIEJA, a late old prov. of Spain, comprising the N. portion of the ancient kingdom of Castile, & forming the new provs. of Burgos, Valladolid, Palencia, Avila, Segovia, Soria, Logrono, & Santander. Pop. 1849, 1,417,477. The S. portion of the territory is traversed by the Sierra Guadarama, & the North by the mntns. of Asturias, while in the centre the Sierra Occa separates the basins of the Ebro & the Douro. The climate is more moist than in New Castile, & is very mild in the plains. Timber is rare, except on the mountains; the soil is fertile and yields abundance of grain in the plains, & wine, madder, oil, lint, & fruits are produced. Pasturage is excellent & cattle & sheep are extensively reared. The merino wool of Segovia is considered next in quality to that of Leon. The mountains afford a rich supply of useful minerals, and there are many mineral springs. Manufs. are unimportant, cloth is still the principal, next to which are leather, paper, glass & stoneware. Corn, madder, & wool are the principal articles of export.

The principal manufs. are woollens, cotton, silk, and leather, paper, cordage, and fire-arms. Catalonia was not long under the dominion of the Moors. It was conquered by Charlemagne, and after his death divided into numerous fiefs, which were finally absorbed in the county of Barcelona. It was united to the crown of Aragon in 1137. The Catalans speak a peculiar language, distinct from the Castilian; they have frequently attempted to free themselves from the government of Spain.

CATANIA, Catana, a celebrated city and seaport of Sicily, cap. prov., on its E. coast, near the foot of Mount Etna, 31 m. N.N.W. Syracuse. Pop. 54,167. It has been repeatedly ruined by earthquakes and eruptions of Etna, but always subsequently rebuilt in a superior style. It has a noble appearance from the sea, and is internally very handsome, with regular and spacious streets paved with lava, of which material the numerous public buildings are constructed, the latter being faced with magnesian limestone and enriched with marbles. A natural mole of lava encloses the harbor. Principal edifices, the cathedral, rebuilt after the great earthquake of 1693, the senate-house, government pawn-bank, a benedictine convent of vast extent, and with a superb church, a large museum, &c., about 30 other convents and 50 churches, some of which are very magnificent, several charitable establishments, foundling and lying-in hospitals, and a Magdalen asylum. In a fine square, near the cathedral, is a statue of an elephant bearing an obelisk, believed to be a genuine antique. The university, founded in 1445, has library and museums open on holidays to the public. Catania has a college of arts and numerous private museums; it is a bishop's see, the seat of one of the 3 high civil and criminal courts in Sicily, and of inferior courts, and it is invested with various high privileges. It has extens. manufs. of silk fabrics, and of wares in lava and amber; besides which goods, it exports corn, macaroni, potatoes, olives, figs, raw-silk, wine, soda, manna, cantharides, & snow from Mount Etna. The harbor is not adequate to the importance of the city, but it is generally full of small craft. The remains of anc. Catana comprise an amphitheatre, hippodrome, theatre, odeon, naumachia, gymnasium, and various traces of temples, tombs, aqueducts, and baths; but much of its site and the vicinity of the city has been buried under successive streams of lava. Pop. of the prov. 1851, 879,301.

On the E. front the mountain is precipitous; but on the W. side, the descent is comparatively gentle. In these mountains the bear, the wolf, the wildcat, and the deer, are still to be found.

CATSKILL, p. t., capital of Greene co., N. Y., 34 S. Albany, 336 W. Surface mountainous on the W., but level toward the Hudson r., which washes its East border. The soil is clay, sand, & loam, underlaid with slate, limestone, & graywacke. Drained by Catskill cr. & its tributaries. The v. is pleasantly situated on both sides of Catskill cr., near its junction with the Hudson river. Incorporated in 1806. It has a court-house, a jail, 6 churches,—1 Baptist, 1 Dutch Reformed, 1 Episcopal, 2 Methodist, & 1 Presbyterian,—2 banks with an aggregate cap. of $225,000, 2 printing-offices issuing weekly newspapers, a woollen fac., 2 tanneries, a paper fac., a gun & pistol fac., an iron foundry, a flouring m., 2 carriage fac., &c. Pop. of the t. in 1840, 5,339; in 1850, 5,454. There are owned here several steamboats, barges, & sloops, employed between this place & the city of New York. A ferry here crosses the Hudson. Pine Orchard, a favorite summer resort, is situated on the brow of the Catskill mountains, in the S. W. part of the town, where is a large & commodious hotel, called the "Mountain House," elevated 2,212 ft. above the Hudson r., & commanding a very extensive & beautiful view of the Hudson river, & the country to the E., extending to the Green mountain range, in Massachusetts & Vermont. Nowhere can more wild & romantic scenery be found than at this spot. A little to the W. of the hotel are 2 ponds, the outlets of which unite, and proceed by falls & rapids, in a deep ravine, to the plain below. The first fall is 180 feet perpendicular, & within a short distance is a second fall of about 80 feet. By a circuitous path the traveller can pass down and go under the rock, and behind the water of the first fall, which presents a singular & interesting view. The spectator in this mountain eyrie often sees thunder storms discharging themselves on the valley beneath him, while he enjoys a clear sky. A road is constructed from the steamboat landing on the Hudson on which stages constantly run for the transportation of travellers, to & from the Mountain House, which is 12 ms. distant from Catskill village.

CAUCASUS, an extensive mntn. chain in Russia, between Europe & Asia, of which it forms the boundary by closing the isthmus which separates the Black from the Caspian Sea. It commences in a tongue of land called the peninsula of Taman, which separates the E. part of the Sea of Azov from the Black Sea, in lat. 45° 10′ N., lon. 36° 45′ E., & runs S.E. in the direction of the coast to lat. 43° N., where it turns first E., & then S.E., till it terminates in the peninsula of Apsheron in the Caspian Sea. Lat. 40° 20′ N., lon. 49° 20′ E. Extreme length 750 m.; breadth 65 to 150 m. The culminating point of the chain, Mt. Elburz, in lat. 43° 20′ N., lon. 42° 30′ E., rises between the sources of the rivers Kuban & Terek, to an elevation of 17,796 ft. The next in elevation is Mt. Kuzbek, in lat. 42° 50′ N., lon. 44° 20′ E., 16,000 ft., but the mean elevation of the other peaks is much less. With few exceptions, the mntns. are covered with perpetual ice and snow. W. of Elburz the chain decreases rapidly in height, & on the shores of the Black Sea it is only about 200 ft. in elevation. E. of the central mass it maintains a considerable elevation till it approaches the Caspian Sea. A contrefort, which leaves the central mass in lon. 44° E., runs S. between the rivers Kur & Rion, & connects the Caucasus with the mntns. of Armenia. On the S. the Caucasus descends gradually by a succession of terraces, while on the N. it is more abrupt & precipitous. The mntns. are not peaked, as in the Alps, but are either flat or cup-shaped. The existence of glaciers in the Caucasus is uncertain, & there are no lakes of importance; hence the region in general is not well watered. The chief rivers are, on the N. of the chain, the Terek & Kuban, the former of which flows E. to the Caspian, & the latter W. to the Black Sea; & on the S. the Rion, a tributary of the Black, & the Kur of the Caspian Sea. The climate is healthy, although tempests are frequent, & the higher plateaux are exposed to burning heats in summer. The soil is remarkably fertile in the valleys, & the mntns. are covered with valuable timber; every species of grain is abundant, & is cultivated to a height of 8,300 ft., while the lower valleys produce cotton, rice, lint, tobacco, indigo, & wine. The auroch, a species of domestic ox, is still found in the mntns;—the forests are full of fur-bearing animals, & all the rivers abound in fish. Formerly numerous herds of cattle were reared in the valleys. The greater part of the chain is of secondary formation, interspersed with volcanic rocks. The chain contains no active volcanoes, but is frequently visited by earthquakes. Minerals comprise copper, lead, iron, sulphur, & coal. All the passes between Europe and Asia are guarded by Russian fortresses; but the only one which has been rendered practicable for carriages is that from Mozdok to Tiflis by the valley of the Terek. The principal pass on the E. is that of Derbend. The Caucasus mntns. have been celebrated from the highest antiquity; the people who inhabit them have almost always maintained their independence, & though nominally subject to Russia, many of the tribes still maintain a constant struggle against her authority. The principal tribes are the Circassians, Ossetes, Lesghians, Abasians, Georgians, Misheges, & Mingrelians. The Circassians & Georgians are considered the finest types of the human family, & the Caucasian race is the name by which the white population distributed over Europe, America, and part of Asia and Africa, is distinguished.

CAUCASUS, or the CAUCASIAN REGION, is the name given to those portions of the Russian empire situated near the Caucasus mntns. These are in Europe Cis-Caucasia, comprising the provs. of Caucasus, Circassia, & Daghestan; & in Asia Trans-Caucasia, or the countries situated between Turkey, Persia, the Caspian & the Black Seas, & the range of the Caucasus mntns., comprising the provs. of Abasia, Mingrelia, Imeretia, Georgia, Shirvan, & Russian Armenia. The pop. of this region was estimated in 1846 at 3,164,400.

CAUCASUS, a prov. of European Russia, at the S.E. declivity of the Caucasian mntns., cap. Stavropol. It is bounded N. by the gov. of Astrakan, & the country of the Don Cossacks, E. by Kizliar & the region of the Caspian Sea, & S. by Kabarda, Tchetchenetzi, & Daghestan, & W. by the Cossacks of the Black Sea. Lat. of lighthouse, 43° 23′ 48″ N., lon. 3° 42′ 16″ E. Pop. 16,613. It is a fortress of the first class, defended by a citadel; principal edifices, church of St. Louis, public baths, & library. Its harbor is spacious & secure, from 16 to 19 feet in depth, formed by two piers with a breakwater in front, defended by two forts, one on either pier. A broad & deep canal, bordered with quays & warehouses, connects the port with the lagoon of Thau, & accordingly with the canal-du-Midi, & canals leading to the Rhone, by which means Cette has an extensive traffic with the interior. Imports comprise Benicarlo wine from Spain, for mixing with French wines for the English & other markets. It has a large establishment, where is manufactured sulphate of soda, magnesia, & potash, from sea-water. Exports consist of about 36,000 tuns of wine, & 4,000 do. of brandy annually, with almonds, Montpelier verdigris, salt from adjacent salt-works, & syrups, liqueurs, soap, perfumery, & glass wares, the products of its own factories. Cette is the entrepôt for an extensive coasting trade, & possesses much foreign commerce. It has ship-building yards, & an active oyster & anchovy fishery, & is the residence of various European consuls. It is wholly of modern origin, having been founded by Louis XIV. at the base of the anc. Mons Setius (whence its name). Steamboats to Marseilles daily.

CEUTA, Septa, a seaport town of Africa, belonging to Spain, in Morocco, opposite & 17 m. S.S.E. Gibraltar. Lat. (Mt. Acho) 35° 54′ 4″ N., lon. 5° 16′ 6″ W. Pop. 8,200. The castle occupies the highest point of a neck, the anc. Abyla, & one of the Pillars of Hercules – the rock of Gibraltar being the other) at the extremity of a peninsula. On the narrow isthmus at the opposite extremity, is another strong citadel; & between the two is the town, with a cathedral, several convents, a hospital, a convict establishment, & schools. Ceuta has many points of resemblance to Gibraltar; it is well supplied with water, and, if properly garrisoned, would be all but impregnable. It is the chief of the Spanish presidios on the African coast, the seat of a royal court, & the residence of a military governor, & financial intendant. It was taken from the Moors by John, king of Portugal, in 1415, & has permanently belonged to Spain ever since 1640.

CEVA, Ceba, a town, Sardinian sta., Piedmont, div. & 26 m. E. Coni, prov. Mondovi, cap. mand., on the Tanaro. Pop. 3,802. It stands at the foot of a rock on which is a dismantled citadel. Manufs. of silk twist, & trade in cheese.

CEVENNES, Cebennæ Montes, a range of mntns. in the S. of France, commencing at the canal du Midi, W. of Carcassonne, & running N.N.E. to the Canal du Centre. They are divided into the S. & N. Cevennes; the former, under the names of the Montagnes Noires, Espinouse, Garrigues, & Lozère, extend over 120 m. to Mt. Lozère, where the chain forms a group called Monts du Gévaudan, which sends several contreforts to the N. & S. The N. Cevennes take the name of Mts. Vivarais, Lyonnais, Forez, & Charolais. The Loire, Allier, Lot, Aveyron, Tarn, Hérault, Gard, & other rivers, have their sources in these mntns., the S. portion of which contain many extinct volcanoes, & present many deep fissures in the higher valleys. The highest points are Mezin, 5,794 feet, & Lozère, 4,884 feet above the level of the sea. The Cevennes served as a retreat for numerous Protestant families after the revocation of the edict of Nantes.

CEVENNES, an old country of France which formed the N.E. part of the government of Languedoc, cap. Mende. It was divided into Gévaudan, Velay, Vivarais, & Cevennes proper. The Cevennes proper is now included partly in the dep. Gard, and partly in Aveyron.

CEYLON (Singala, anc. Taprobana), an island of British India, separated from the S. entrance of Hindostan by the Gulf of Manaar; between lat. 5° 55′ and 9° 48′ N., and lon. 79° 55′ and 82° E. Shape pyriform, with apex to the N. Extreme length from N. to S., 270 m.; greatest breadth 145 m. Area, 24,664 m. Pop. 1842, 1,329,529 colored, 35,010 white; total, 1,364,539; 1848, 1,500,000. The southern and central part of the island is elevated and mntnous., Adam's Peak rising to the height of 7,420 feet, & Pedro Tallagalla to 8,400 feet. The E. shore is bold & rocky, with deep water. The W. shore is uniformly low, & indented with bays and inlets. The N.W. part of the island is almost joined to the neighboring peninsula by the small island of Manaar, from the W. point of which a sand-bank, only covered at high water, stretches to the island of Rameserum, a distance of about 30 miles. [ADAM'S BRIDGE], leaving open only two navigable passages, that between Manaar and Ceylon, which has not more than 4 feet water at ebb-tide, and the narrow passage of Paumbum between Rameserum and the mainland, which is 6 feet in depth at high water. The isl. is chiefly formed of granite & gneiss, especially in its southern portions, while limestone and sandstone prevail in the more level parts of the northern plains. Dolomite is found in the interior, and hornblende rock forms the summit of Adam's Peak. Among the minerals are iron, manganese, plumbago, nitre, alum, & salt. The climate is hot and moist, though the temp. is not so high as on the neighboring continent. The N.E. monsoon prevails from November to February, modified and interrupted by local circumstances; the S.W. monsoon from April to September. The E. part of the island is hot & dry, the W. temperate & humid; much rain falls, & rivers & streams abound. The largest river is Mahavelli Gunga, which has its origin in the highlands in the S., & flowing N.E. enters the Ocean at Trincomalé. In the highlands in the S., & on the central range stretching northwards, the temperature is much milder than in the valleys. The soil is chiefly a ferruginous quartzose and clayey mixture in the S., & sandy & calcareous in the N., with a small proportion of vegetable matter; yet vegetation is most luxuriant, & irrigation appears to have been anciently practised, from artificial tanks & lakes still existing. Rice, cotton, tobacco, indigo, pepper, coffee, & various vegetables are raised. The cocoa palm, Palmyra palm, talipot, tamarind, bread fruit, & cinnamon, are among the most useful trees; the last is cultivated to a great extent, but some recent attempts to cultivate extensively the sugar-cane appear to have failed. The zoology of the island is much the same as the neighboring continent. Snakes & reptiles abound. Elephants are very numerous, especially in the N. and E. prov.; an European officer in two years killed 400. An extensive pearl bank of 30 m. length at Condachy, yields excellent pearls, & employs 2,000 divers for three weeks in spring. Little is known of the aboriginal inhabitants of Ceylon; at present they are similar in all repects to the Hindoos of the neighboring continent, & consist of Singalese, inhabiting the interior & parts of the coast, Malabars, Mohammedans, Europeans, & negroes. Ceylon was known to the Greeks in the time of Alexander, as also to the Romans. It was visited by traders in 6th cen., by Marco Polo in 13th cent., & by Sir J. Mandeville in 14th. The Singalese annals contain historical records for 24 cents. The Portuguese formed a settlement at Colombo in 1520. They were superseded by the Dutch in 17th cent.; & at the close of the 18th, the British after various encounters with the Dutch and French, obtained possession of the stations on the coast; & finally, in 1815, at the invitation of the native chiefs, took possession of the whole island. The government consists of a governor, & an executive council of 5 members, & legislative council of 10 members, & 6 unofficial members, natives or naturalized subjects, & proprietors or principal merchants of the island. (Salary of gov. and Com. in chief £7,000.) The island is divided into 5 provinces & these into districts, each with an agent and assistant. There are a supreme court, provincial courts, & magistrates. The island was constituted a bishopric in 1846, with bishop & clergy of English church. There are besides clergymen of other denominations. Educational establishments have been formed chiefly by religious & missionary societies. In 1842 there were 39 government schools, with 60 masters & assistants. In the whole schools there were 20,703 scholars. Buddhism was almost the universal creed of the natives, & still remains so. The Singalese spoken language is peculiar to this island, but their written language is either Pali or Sanscrit. The British government have formed, at great expense, many excellent roads throughout the island, & a canal & river communication exists between Colombo & Calpentyn. The trade & commerce of Ceylon is of very ancient date, but it became circumscribed & hampered under the Portuguese & Dutch. The natives are ingenious workers in metals, and in manufs. of cordage, matting, & baskets. 3,663 looms are employed in weaving table-cloths, handkerchiefs, napkins; & there are 13 mines of plumbago, & 4,286 boats & rafts employed in fishing. Of the whole surface of the island, 760,821 acres are cultivated or in pasture, & upwards of four millions uncultivated. Exports in 1850 valued at £1,246,956. Imports, £1,488,678; in the same year vessels with an aggregate tonnage of 242,264 tons, entered the ports, & a tonnage of 24,398 left the ports. Salt manufactured from marshes yields a government revenue of about £32,000. Public revenue in 1845, £450,000. The chief towns are Colombo the capital, Kandy, Trincomalé, Pointe-de-Galle, Jaffna, Calpentyn. Ceylon is now the central point for the oriental mail packets. The mail which leaves Southampton every month, via Alexandria & the Red Sea, touches at Ceylon (aver. voy. 40 days), from whence issue one branch mail to Madras & Calcutta, & one to Penang, Singapore, & Hong Kong; another mail to Australia & New Zealand.

CHAMPLAIN LAKE, lies between the states of New York & Vermont. It extends from Whitehall, N. Y., to the 45° N. lat. 102 miles, & thence about 24 miles to St. John's in Canada, to which point it is navigable, making its whole length 126 miles. Its breadth is from one-fourth of a mile to 13 miles; but, including the expanse which contains its large islands, it is 15 miles wide. Its broadest part, unobstructed by islands, is opposite to Burlington, Vt. Its chief islands are North Hero, South Hero, & La Motte, which, with some smaller islands, & the peninsula of Alburg, constitute Grand Isle county, Vermont. This lake was discovered by Samuel Champlain, a French nobleman, in 1609. It was the theatre of many important military operations, in the French, Revolutionary, & the war of 1812. The scenery along its shores is highly picturesque, & rendered grand by the lofty mountains, at a little distance from it, on both sides. It forms an important medium of commerce, & is navigated by steamboats, & by many sloops, generally from 80 to 100 tons burden. It receives a number of considerable rivers. Its outlet is Sorelle or Richelieu r., the navigation of which has been improved by the works of the Chambly canal (Canada) so as to afford an easy communication for large vessels with the St. Lawrence r. The Champlain canal, 64 m. long, connects it with Hudson riv. on the S., & cost $1,079,872. It abounds with fish, among which are salmon, lake shad, pike, & other fish. It is generally frozen entirely over, and is passed on the ice in winter. The broad lake closes about the first of February, & opens early in March. The narrow parts continue frozen considerably longer. It has 3 lighthouses on its coasts. It comprises the collection districts of Burlington & Champlain. Aggregate tonnage, 1853, 14,617,49. The aggregate shipping in 1851 measured 197,500 tons, & employed 11,850 men. The commerce of the lake in same year amounted to $26,390,895; and the enrolled tonnage was, of steam, 4,157 tons, & 3,983 tons of sailing vessels.

Charleston is on a peninsula, formed by the confluence of Ashley & Cooper rivers, which unite immediately below the city & form a spacious & convenient harbor, communicating with the Ocean at Sullivan's Island, seven miles south-east of the city. The city is defended by Fort Pinckney, two miles below, & Fort Johnson, 4 miles; & by Fort Moultrie on Sullivan's Island. The city is divided into 8 wards, & is built on ground but slightly elevated, being only about 9 feet above the level of the harbor at high tides. It extends from Battery point on the south to the city limits on the north, a distance of 3 miles, & at an average width of one & a quarter miles. Meeting street, the principal street, is 60 feet wide, & extends for a distance of three miles nearly in a direct line north; the cross streets run nearly parallel to each other, & at right angles to Meeting street, & extend from east to west, & from Ashley to Cooper rivers. The houses built within a few years are of brick; none are now allowed to be constructed but of this material or of stone. The wooden houses are generally kept well painted, & most of them have piazzas extending to the roof, tastefully arranged with vines & creepers. Those in the suburbs are surrounded by gardens, planted with orange, peach, & other ornamental & useful trees, & a profusion of vines & shrubbery.

The public buildings &c., are, a city hall, an exchange, court house, jail, an U. S. court house, a custom house, an U. States & a state arsenal, a fire-proof building for the preservation of documents, &c., a college, a medical college, an alms house, an orphan asylum, a work house, a theatre, a market house, Masonic, Odd Fellows, & Temperance Halls, South Carolina Society Hall, Military Hall, gas works, &c.; 7 banks, with an aggregate capital of $9,153,583; several insurance offices, 12 printing offices, issuing 4 daily, 1 tri-weekly, & 4 weekly newspapers, & 3 monthly, 1 bi-monthly, & 1 quarterly publication. There are several extensive cotton presses, machine shops, factories, & mills, moved by steam power. There are in the city 35 churches, viz.,—2 Baptist, 1 Congregational, 7 Episcopal, 1 French Protestant, 2 German Lutheran, 2 Jews Synagogues, 1 Mariners, 5 Methodist, 1 Orphan, 4 Presbyterian, 4 Roman Catholic, 1 Unitarian, & 2 for colored people,—many of the churches are large & elegant buildings. Charleston college was founded in 1785, has a president, & 5 professors or other instructors, 124 alumni, 70 students, & 3,000 volumes in its libraries. The commencement is on the Tuesday after the fourth Monday in March. It has a fine edifice. The Medical College of the State of South Carolina was founded in 1833, has 8 professors, & 160 students. The lectures commence on the second Monday in November annually. The Citadel Academy is a flourishing institution, under the patronage of the state. The High School has a principal & three assistants, the whole under a board of supervisors. The Orphan Asylum accommodates orphans & destitute children; it has an extensive building, & receives for its support $16,000 annually from the city treasury. The Convent of our Lady of Mercy is under the direction of the Roman Catholics, & also a female academy attached to it. The Library & Philosophical Society has a fine collection of objects of natural history. The Apprentices Library contains 100,-000 volumes, & sustains annually a course of scientific lectures. The City Library contains about 1,800 vols. of valuable books.

Charleston is a great mart for cotton, rice, & tobacco, & rice especially, as it is the heart of the rice growing region, forms the great staple, of which it exports 125,000 tierces annually. There is a line of steamers with New York weekly, a line with Baltimore & Philadelphia, & also with Havanna, Cuba. Tonnage of the port 1852, 42,658 tons. The light house at the entrance of Charleston Harbor is on Light-house Island, & W. of the ship channel. Lat. 32° 41′ 54″ N., lon. 79° 32′ 30″ W. from Greenwich. The tower is 102 feet high, shows a revolving light elevated 125 feet above the surface of the sea, & is visible for a distance of 16¼ nautical miles. There is also a beacon, which with the light, is used as a range to cross the main bar, & two others, the Morris Island & Sullivan's Island beacons. By its being the port of an extensive system of railroads, it drains supplies from a wide range of territory; besides almost the entire State of South Carolina, it comprises a large portion of N. Carolina, Georgia, & of East Tennessee. Charleston was first settled in 1680. A colony of French refugees, exiled in 1690, in consequence of the revocation of the edict of Nantes, fled to South Carolina, & a portion of them settled in Charleston, from whom some of its most respectable inhabitants have descended. At the close of the year 1779 the city was captured by the British, who held it until the following May.

Pop. of pa. 1851, 22,399; do. of parl. bor., 28,424. It consists chiefly of one long, narrow, winding street, forming a continuation of the city of Rochester, & mostly accompanying the course of the Medway, which here begins to widen into its estuary. It is flanked on the E. & S. by heights partly built on & crowned with several forts. Town well paved & lighted, & has many good shops: but with exception of its noble dockyard & handsome military suburb of Brompton, it presents little worthy of notice. Principal edifices, the parish church, a modern building, embodying a small part of the original Norman structure; a charity hospital, reputed to have been founded by Bishop Gundulph in 1078; a small seamen's hospital, a proprietary school, & a literary institution, with a museum. There are 31 churches, viz., 3 Baptist, 4 Bible Christian, 10 Episcopal, 3 Independent, 2 Methodist, 1 Roman Catholic, & 1 Catholic Apostolical. The military & naval establishments, separated from the town and the country beyond by a line of fortifications, comprise large and very handsome infantry, marine, engineer, and artillery barracks, a school for engineers, and a noble marine hospital, the dockyard and arsenal, founded in the reign of Elizabeth, and now surrounded by a wall enclosing 90 ac. The dockyard, inferior only to those of Portsmouth & Plymouth, contains 5 tide-docks, and 6 building slips for vessels of the largest size; with saw-mills, forges, machinery-works, roperies, &c.; the latter has ordnance-ranges, an armory, officers, & artificers' quarters, & a chapel. Moored in the river opposite, are hulks for convicts, who labor in the yard. The population of Chatham is almost entirely engaged in the military and naval establishments, or in the retail trade arising out of the presence of the government works. Market, Saturday. Fairs, May 15 & Oct. 20. Races in August. The bor. has no municipal jurisdiction; but it now sends 1 mem. to House of Commons. In the last century it gave the title of Earl to the celebrated statesman, the elder Pitt. In 1667, the Dutch under De Ruyter sailed up the Medway, &, in spite of the forts on its banks, succeeded in burning many vessels & stores.

It stands on a rocky elevation, in great part enclosed by ancient & massive walls, which form an oblong quadrangle, surrounded by a public walk 2 miles in length. Its thoroughfares, preserving their ancient Roman direction, cross each other at right angles, and the four principal, which diverge to the cardinal points, have their carriage ways far below the adjacent houses, and are bordered with shops, over which are piazzas or "rows" for foot passengers. Principal edifices, the castle, comprising barracks & armory with nearly 30,000 stand of arms, the city jail, palatinate offices, city-hall, linen, union, & commerce halls, exchange, co. infirmary, co. lunatic asylum, 35 churches,—2 Baptist, 15 Episcopal, 2 Friends, 4 Independents, 8 Methodist, 1 Mormon, 1 Presbyterian, 1 Roman Catholic, & 1 Unitarian. The cathedral is an irregular massive structure, with a tower 127 feet in height; it has many fine monuments, with a handsome chapter-house, & adjacent to it are the remains of an ancient abbey, partly used for the grammar school. The bishop's palace & prebendal college occupy other portions of the abbey-precinct. St. John's church is a fine specimen of Saxon architecture; Trinity church contains the tombs of the poet Parnell, & of Matthew Henry the commentator on the Bible. At the end of either principal street of the city proper, is an arched gateway; & crossing the Dee is Grosvenor bridge, a stone structure of a single arch 200 feet in span. Public charities, very numerous, comprise St. John's poor's hospital & a large number of schools, including one supported by the Marquis of Westminster for 500 children. Chester has a good public library, a mechanics institution, with museum & theatre. Except shipbuilding, manufs. are of little consequence, & the commerce of Chester has greatly declined, owing to the filling up of the harbor, & to the proximity of Liverpool. Vessels of 600 tons, however, now approach the city, which exports cheese, copper plates, cast iron, & coal, & imports wines & other S. European produce & Irish provisions. Markets, Wednesday & Saturday. Fairs, principally for cheese, last Thursday in February & April, July 5 to 10, Oct. 10 to 15, & Nov. 24. Celebrated races are held in May, on a meadow outside of the city walls. Co. assizes for Cheshire; co. & bor. quarter sessions. The munic. & parl. bor., subdivided into 5 wards, is governed by a mayor, 10 aldermen, and 30 councillors. Chester sends 2 members to H. of C. The diocese comprises the counties Chester & Lancaster, with parts of Cumberland, Westmoreland, Flint, & Denbigh. Chester gives the title of earl to the Prince of Wales. About 3 m. S. is Eaton Hall, the magnificent seat of the Marquis of Westminster.

The harbor has a depth of from 12 to 15 feet of water, which makes it a commodious & safe haven, & it has been much improved artificially by the construction of piers which extend on each side of the entrance of the river for some distance into the lake, to prevent the accumulation of sand upon the bar. The light-house is on the South side of the harbor, & shows a fixed light on a tower 40 feet above the surface of the lake; & there is a beacon on end of the pier. The city contains a court house built of stone, cost $125,000; the county buildings, a commercial college, Rush Medical college, a marine hospital, a United States Land Office, 3 large market-houses, 32 churches,—2 Baptist, 1 Bethel, 1 Congregational, 1 Dutch Reformed, 3 Episcopal, 2 German Lutheran, 1 New Jerusalem, 5 Methodist, 5 Presbyterian, 6 Roman Catholic, 1 Scandinavian, 1 Swedish Episcopal, 1 Unitarian, 2 Universalist, & 1 African,—7 banks, with an aggregate capital of $2,114,000, 6 daily, 13 weekly newspapers, & 13 monthly publications, an academy, a fire insurance company, a mutual insurance company, & there are gas works, from which the city is supplied with gas, Hydraulic works, under a chartered company, & there are additional works being constructed by the city at a cost of $500,000, to give an extensive supply of water throughout the city. The University of St. Mary of the lake is under the direction of the Roman Catholics, it contains a president & 5 professors, & a tutor. The scholastic year commences on the first of September, & continues until the middle of July following; connected with this establishment is the St. Mary's Theological Seminary; it has 2 professors. There is also a convent of the Sisters of Mercy. The manufac. establishments of Chicago are numerous, consisting of iron foundries & machine-shops, steam flouring, saw & planing mills, manufac. of agricultural implements, &c. The capital employed amounted in 1853, to $2,500,000. Numerous steamboats & vessels ply between this place & Buffalo, & the various intermediate places on the upper lakes. West of the city, toward the West Plains r., is a fertile prairie, which, for the first 3 or 4 miles, is elevated & dry. Along the North branch of the Chicago & the lake shore are extensive bodies of fine timber. White pine lumber is obtained from the regions about Green bay & Grand river in Michigan, & across the lake from St. Joseph's river. The city is a great shipping point for an immense & fertile region. The Illinois & Michigan canal, which is 60 feet wide at the top, 6 feet deep, & 107 miles in length, including 5 miles of river navigation, through which is brought a large amount of produce from the South & Southwest; & the railroads radiating from Chicago, add to the vast accumulation which is here shipped for the Atlantic seaboard. There are ten steamers, thirty propellers, & 190 barks, brigs, schooners, & sloops, engaged in the Chicago trade. In 1836 the value of the exports was $1,000; in 1840, $228,635; in 1845, $1,543,519; & in 1852, $12,000,000. The shipments of produce & provisions, in 1852, amounted to 5,600,000 bushels grain, & 120,000 bbls. beef & pork. The most prominent feature of the commerce of Chicago is the lumber trade. In this 90 vessels were engaged in 1852, & the amount received was 147,816,232 feet; 77,080,500 shingles; 19,759,670 laths; besides over 20,000 cords of wood and bark; 199,221 cedar posts, & a large amount of square timber. The assessed value of real & personal estate in 1853 was $16,841,831. There are twelve trunk railroads now constructed, & in process of construction, all centering at Chicago, & measuring in the aggregate, 2,485 miles. Of this amount, 1,725 miles will lie within the state of Illinois, & the remainder in Indiana, Michigan, & Wisconsin. Besides these trunk roads, there are several hundred miles of branches, all centering toward Chicago. The trunk & branch roads reach the Mississippi river at ten different points from Galena, S. to Cairo. Chicago is supplied with the purest of water from the lake,—is within a short distance of the most extensive coal fields to be found in Illinois; & is the natural outlet for the produce of one of the richest agricultural sections of the Union. CHICHESTER, a city, co. of itself, & parl. & munic. bor. of Engl., cap. co. Sussex, on the S. coast r. r., 14¼ m. E.N.E. Portsmouth, & 28¼ m. W. Brighton. Area of city liberty, 1,680 ac. Pop. of parl. bor. 1851, 8,662. It stands in a plain between the Southdown hills & the sea, & is enclosed by walls of Roman construction, now formed into terraces with walks, & shaded by elm trees. It is neatly built, clean, & well paved, drained, & lighted, & intersected by 4 principal thoroughfares, directed toward the cardinal points, & meeting in the centre of the city, where there is an elegant octagonal cross, erected in 1478. The cathedral, though not large, is a well-proportioned & handsome edifice, mostly of the 13th & 14th centuries, 410 ft. in length, & 227 ft. in extreme breadth, with a spire 300 ft. in height. In its interior are a richly-adorned choir, portraits of all the sovereigns of Engl. from the time of the conquest, with other historical paintings, & numerous monuments, including some fine works of art by Flaxman. South of the cathed. is a quadrangle enclosed by cloisters, including the churchyard, and near it is the bp.'s palace & gardens. The see is coextensive with the co. Sussex, excepting 22 pas., which are peculiars. The city is divided into 8 pas. The church of St. Paul's is a handsome modern building. The guild-hall, a portion of an anc. friary, stands within a walled enclosure at the N.E. extremity of the city. Other principal edifices are the market & council-houses, corn exchange, jail, buildings of the mechanics' institute, & literary and philosophical society, the theatre, hospital of St. Mary, some alms-houses, & the infirmary, a handsome structure at the N. extremity of the city, near which is an increasing suburb named Summerstown. Chichester has a grammar school, blue-coat, national, Lancasterian, & other schools. Trade almost wholly in agricultural produce & live stock, for which a market is held every second Wed. The only manufs. are of coopers' & other wooden wares. About 200 years ago it monopolized nearly the whole manuf. of needles, but this trade is now entirely transferred to other places. It communicates with Portsmouth & Arundel by a canal. It sends 2 mems. to H. of C. Fairs for cattle & horses, May 4, Whit-Mon., Oct. 10 & 20. Originally the town was a Roman sta., most probably Regnum. It was taken & partially destroyed about A.D. 491, by the S. Saxons, under Ella, but rebuilt by his son Cissa (whence its name); & thenceforth it remained the cap. of the kingdom Sussex, till its conquest by the W. Saxons. Various Roman remains with inscriptions, have been discovered in the city & vicinity; & Kingly-bottom, N.E., is supposed to have been the place of interment of the S. Saxon monarchs; 4 m. N.E. is Goodwood, the seat of the Duke of Richmond. Chichester gives the title of Earl to the Pelham family. Among its eminent natives were the poets Collins & Hayley, & George Smith & brothers, landscape-painters.—Chichester Harbor, 2 m. S.W. of the city, is an inlet of the English Channel, between the peninsula Selsey & Hayling isl., containing several creeks & Thorney isl.—Chichester Rape comprises the 8 W. hundreds of the co. Sussex.

CHIHUÀHUA (pron. Chiwawa), a state of Mexico between lat. 26° and 32° N., and lon. 104° and 108° 40′ W. It contains an area of 13,493 square leagues, or 97,471 English sq. ms., and reaches from 26° 53′ 30″ to 32° 57′ 45″ N. lat. Its boundaries are, towards the north, New Mexico; towards the east, Coahuila and Texas; towards the south, Durango; to the south-west, Sinaloa; and to the north-west, Sonora. The great mountain chain of Mexico, the connecting link between the Rocky mountains of the north and the Andes of the south of this continent, is known here as Sierra Madre, and occupies chiefly the western part of the state, where it ascends to a considerable height, and then abruptly descending into deep ravines (barrancas), is lost in the rich plains of Sonora and Sinaloa. The highest point of the Sierra Madre (at Cumbres de Jesus Maria) is, according to Mexican observations, elevated above the sea 3,004 varas, or 8,441 English feet. The mountain ranges, running generally from the north to the south, are intersected towards the east by fine valleys and plains. The eastern portion of the state is less mountainous, containing wide plains, and lying for the greater part in the broad and high plateau, the flattened crest of the Cordilleras that extends from New Mexico as far south as the city of Mexico. The average elevation of this plateau in the state of Chihuàhua is between 4,000 and 5,000 feet.

The water-courses of the state are those that run, first, into the Gulf of Mexico; second into the Pacific; third, into lakes within the state. To the first class belong the Rio del Norte, running from north-west to south-east along the east border of the state; and Salado its tributary, the Rio Conchos. The water-courses that run into the Pacific all have their origin in the Sierra Madre, and are the following: the San Miguel, Refugio, Moris, Papigochic, and Gila. Of the latter, the Gila, the state of Chihuahua claims only the sources flowing from the Sierra de Mogoyon, until they unite with the Rio de San Francisco, a distance of 27 leagues. The third class of rivers discharge themselves into those peculiar lakes without outlet; the following rivers empty into such lakes: the Rio de Casas Grandes into Lake Guzman; the San Buenaventura into Lake Santa Maria; and the Carmen into Lake Patos. It appears as if those lakes are principally produced by the physical properties of the ground, to wit, a wide, very level plain, and great porosity of the soil. Some of the lakes are supposed to have been formerly connected.

Common and mineral springs are very frequent in the state; the latter are mostly sulphurous, but are seldom used for medical purposes.

The climate generally is temperate. The influence of the more southern latitude of the state is counterbalanced by its high elevation above the sea. In the mntnous. parts of the Sierra Madre, there is, of course, a greater variety in the seasons; hot summers, rainy seasons, & severe winters, often follow each other. But on the plains of the plateau, between 4,000 & 5,000 feet above the sea, there prevails a delightful, constant climate, with moderate temperature in summer and winter, with a clear sky and dry atmosphere, interrupted only by the rainy season, which generally lasts through July and August. The thermometer in the city of Chihuàhua seldom rises higher in the summer than 95° Fah., & the winter is moderate. The barometer exhibits in the city of Chihuàhua most regular daily oscillations, but very slight variations throughout the year. In the many observations made there in the rainy season, in the winter and spring, there is a difference only, between the highest and lowest stand of the mercurial column (reduced to 32° Fah.), of 0.580 inch.

The great dryness of the atmosphere produces, of course, a very free development of electricity.

The productions of the cultivated soil in the state of Chihuàhua are maize, wheat, beans, peas, red pepper, apples, peaches, onions; and in the less elevated regions, figs, granates, melons, grapes, &c. Cotton, too, has been tried with success in the southern part of the state. Generally taken, the country seems to be more fit for raising stock than for agriculture, as a great portion of it is either too mountainous, or too scantily supplied with water, to become very productive. But notwithstanding, the state has sufficient arable land in the valleys and plains along the water-courses to produce all the crops that are wanted for a much denser population than the present. In the mountains of the Sierra Madre there is an abundance of pines, which grow the finest and tallest, at an elevation of from eight to nine thousand feet above the level of the sea; while in an elevation of five and six thousand feet more, oak and cedar are found, and in the plains mezquite and shrubbery furnish the necessary fuel. In the city of Chihuàhua oak is used, carried there on pack mules from the mountains.

The annual produce of agriculture in the state is estimated at the value of $888,692. The following is a list of the items; Maize, 246,399 fanegas; barley, 830; wheat, 62,660; beans, 30,713; peas, 730; red pepper, 5,694; cotton, 12,957 arrobas; wine, 23,652 frascos; whisky, 28,900.

More important than agriculture is the raising of stock in the state. Horses and mules, cattle and sheep, thrive and increase very rapidly, and the wealth of the proprietors of large "haciendas" consists mostly in their innumerable stock, which is never kept in the stables, but during the whole year is allowed to roam about. Formerly the stock was so numerous that large proprietors never knew the extent of their own herds; & whenever it was necessary for them to realize some money, they would send droves to the south, even as far as the city of Mexico; and they often cleared as much as $100,000 in one such trip. But for the last twenty years, the wild Indians have become so hostile, and committed so many depredations, that the stock is diminishing every year. An official but rather incomplete account valued the stock of the state, in 1833, at $3,848,225.

Another most important branch of industry in the state of Chihuàhua is mining. Its many and rich silver mines have been celebrated for several centuries. They are principally found in the western part of the state, throughout the length of the Sierra Madre, and in a mean breadth of 30 leagues. The silver ores occur generally as sulphurets, with iron or lead, sometimes as native silver and muriate of silver, and are found either entirely in porphyritic rocks, or in stratified rocks (limestone), passing in greater depth into igneous rocks. They are worked either by amalgamation, or by fire in common furnaces. For the latter process they need generally an addition of greta (litharge, or oxyde of lead), which forms, therefore, a valuable article of trade. Besides the silver mines, rich mines also of copper, and some of gold, lead, iron, and tin, are found. The most distinguished mines of the state, of older and more recent date, are the following: The mines of Santa Eulalia, near Chihuàhua, have, during the last century produced immense masses of silver, as the following fact may prove: The cathedral in Chihuàhua, a most splendid building, was within the last century erected from a fund created from the proceeds of the Santa Eulalia mines, by a grant of one real (12½ cents) on every marc of silver (worth $8 25) obtained from the mines. This fund was created in 1717, and in 1789 the cathedral was finished, at an expense of $800,000. The amount of silver taken in these 72 years from the mines would, therefore, be $52,800,000. The abundance of lead found in Santa Eulalia makes the smelting of the silver ore very convenient. The mines are not yet exhausted; but from intrusion of water, want of capital, and the attraction of new mines, they are but little worked. The mines of Parral (Hidalgo) are the oldest of the state, and have also been extremely productive in silver; but for want of regular mining, most of them, though not exhausted, are made inaccessible and worthless.

The mines of Santa Barbara, discovered in 1547, were renowned for both silver and gold ores, but are now entirely abandoned. The mines of Batopilas were celebrated for the large masses of native silver, and the unusual richness of the ore. South of Batopilas lies the rich mine of Morelos, discovered in 1826, where one mass of native silver was found weighing 230 marcs. The mine of Sierra Rica, west of the old Presidio de San Carlos, was begun to be worked by a company in 1829. The prospects at first were most flattering; the superficial layers of the silver ore produced from one to a hundred marcs in the carga, sometimes 150, and in one instance even 327 marcs; but at the depth of 80 varas the mine seemed to give out, and the invasions of hostile Indians became at the same time so troublesome, that the mine was abandoned. Such extreme richness of the ore is, of course, not a common occurrence; and the result, found by comparison of Mexican and European mines, that the mines in Mexico are generally poorer as to the relative amount of silver, but far superior as to the abundance and extent of the ore, seems also to correspond with the mines in the state of Chihuàhua; because a silver mine furnishing from three to four ounces of silver in the carga, is generally considered good enough to be worked with advantage; and many with less per cent. are rendered profitable. In recent times the mines of Guazapares and of Jesus Maria have attracted most of the capital of the state. The latter, south-west from Chihuàhua, on the height of the Sierra Madre, were discovered in 1821; and so many valuable silver mines, and some gold mines, too, have since that time been opened, that it promises to be for a long time one of the richest mining districts in the state. Of the copper mines of Chihuàhua, the most celebrated is the "Santa Rita de Cobre," in the western angle of the Sierra de Mogoyon, near the headwaters of the Gila. The mine, known for a long time to the Apaches, passed through the hands of several proprietors, till in 1828 it was effectually worked by Mr. Coursier, a French resident of Chihuàhua, who is reported to have cleared in seven years about half a million of dollars from it. The ore looks extremely rich; it is a remarkably pure oxyde of copper, accompanied sometimes with the native metal, and said to contain some gold. Cinnabar also, says rumor, was discovered there in 1824, but nothing positive is known in relation to it. Coal has been found at two places in the state, near the mines of Carmen and near the mines of Sierra Rica; but it will probably occur in other localities. In the 24 years from 1738 to 1761, the amount of silver produced in the state of Chihuàhua was 3,428,278 marcs, or $28,283,293; and in the 17 years from 1777 to 1793, 1,394,161 marcs, or $12,501,828. The following is the estimated amount for later years:—

In 1824 . . .	69,816	marcs, or	$575,982
1826 . .	138,015	"	1,138,623
1827 . . .	129,402	"	1,067,566
1828 . .	142,785	"	1,177,976
1830 . . .	128,747	"	1,062,163
1831 . .	138,916	"	1,146,057
1832 . . .	117,484	"	969,243
1833 . .	116,802	"	963,616
1834 . . .	109,419	"	902,707

The annual average amount of the production of silver and gold in the state of Chihuàhua is 125,000 marcs, or $1,031,251; but 100,000 marcs of that sum pass through the mint; and it is supposed that 25,000 marcs are every year smuggled out of the country. There is a well-managed mint (casa de moneda) in Chihuàhua, coining gold, silver, and copper.

Of the commerce of the state very little can be said; a state so isolated in the interior of a large country, with a very thin population, without any navigable river, receiving most of its merchandize either by the long Santa Fé trail from the United States or from the interior of Mexico, or but occasionally by direct importation from the seaports on the Pacific, has certainly no claim to commercial advantages. But if a shorter communication should be opened with the seashore by a good direct road to the Rio Grande; if the indolent Mexicans should be spurred on to greater industrial energy by their go-a-head neighbors; if the Indian, the very scourge of the country, should be driven out or extirpated; if oppressive laws and monopolies should be supplanted by free competition of industry, the state would soon be productive and rich enough to exchange every year many millions of goods with the seashore, as well as with the interior. The population of the state, exclusive of the wild Indians, was, in 1827, 120,157; 1832, 138,133; 1833, 139,081; 1842, 147,600. At present it is estimated at from 150 to 160,000 inhabitants, which number would give about 1.3 for each English square mile. The greater part of the people are of Indian descent, though some have preserved their pure Castilian blood. The settlements generally commenced and progressed with the discovery of mines. The oldest town in the state is Santa Barbara, (near Parral,) whose mines were discovered in 1556. About 1600, the town contained 7,000 inhabitants, who were mostly occupied in the gold mines, which produced then from 12 to 14 ounces of gold in the carga. Afterwards Parral was settled, Santa Eulalia, Cieneguilla, Cosihuiriachi, &c. The numerous Indians that in former years occupied the country, have greatly diminished. Some of them have become Christians, and in their villages (pueblos) lead a poor and miserable life; others are untamed yet, and roam restless about, living by hunting and depredations upon the Mexicans. Those hostile Indians are principally the Apaches, a very general denomination, comprising the following related tribes: Tontos, Chirocahues, Faraones, Llaneros, Navajoes, Gileños, Mimbreños, Mezcaleros, & Lipanes. The four latter tribes live only within the state of Chihuàhua, and carry on a continual warfare against its inhabitants. All the warriors of these four tribes are not estimated at more than 1,400; nevertheless, this small number has ruined the industry and impeded the progress of the state so completely, that if more energetic measures are not taken, the Mexicans will yet become the vassals of these savage hordes.

In the north western part of the state of Chihuàhua some old ruins are found, built, no doubt, by a cultivated Indian tribe that has passed away. They are known as Casas Grandes, and lie near the village and creek of the same name, between Janos and Galeana. Ruins of large houses exist here, built of adobes and wood, squared, three stories high, with a gallery of wood, and staircase from the outside, with very small rooms and narrow doors in the upper stories, but without entrance in the lower. A canal led the water of a spring to the the place. A sort of watch-tower stands two leagues south west of it, on an elevation commanding a wide view. Along the creeks Casas Grandes and Janos a long line of Indian mounds extends, in some of which earthen vessels, painted white, blue, and violet, have been found; also weapons, and instruments of stone, but none of iron. The same artificial construction of houses is yet found amongst the Moqui Indians, N.W. of the state of Chihuàhua. But an old tradition reports that the Aztecs, in their migration from the north to the south of Mexico, made three principal stations—the first on the Lake de Teguyo (Great Salt Lake?), the second on the Gila, and the third at Casas Grandes. The ruins of Casas Grandes are only distant about four days' travel from Cosihuiriachi.

CHIHUÀHUA, the capital, and the largest and finest city of the state of Chihuahua, was founded about 1691, and is 338 leagues N. by W. from Mexico. The number of its inhabitants is said to have been much greater about the middle of the last century than now; at present it is estimated at from 12 to 15,000. Chihuàhua has a most beautiful situation in a valley, open towards the north, and surrounded on the other sides by the projecting mountains of the Sierra Madre. The city is regularly built; has wide and clean streets—in some of them quite handsome and convenient houses; plenty of water from the Chihuàhua creek, and from an aqueduct; fine gardens around the town, and a delightful public walk, (Alameda,) shaded with cotton trees. The finest place of the city, as usual in Mexico, is the Plaza, or public square. It is very spacious; has a public fountain in the middle, and foot walks on the sides, with benches and pillars of a white porphyry, which is found in the neighborhood. Three sides of the square are occupied with public buildings and stores; on the fourth stands the cathedral, a very imposing building, which is mentioned already in connection with the mines of Santa Eulalia. Although the style of the building is not throughout Gothic, it shows nevertheless great finish and elegance of construction; the two equal and parallel steeples in front of it are elevated 52¼ varas above the Plaza. Another expensive work of architecture, erected in Spanish times, is the aqueduct, built of rocks, with arches; it extends 6,553 varas, and provides the southern part of the city with water, while on the north side the Chihuàhua creek runs, which unites below with the "Nombre de Dios," and falls into the Conchos. Another remarkable building is the church of San Felipe, commenced by the Jesuits, and left unfinished after their expulsion. In this building the patriotic Hidalgo and his associates were confined before their execution; also the Texan officers of the ill-fated Santa Fe expedition, on their march to the south; and in more recent times it was converted into a foundry, at which were cast the cannon taken by Colonel Doniphan's regiment at the battle of Sacramento, and since transported to the distant capital of Missouri. In the interior of the building the Americans had their hospital established, during their occupation of Chihuàhua. Near the old church, on a public square, stands a simple monument, in honor of Hidalgo, Allende, and Jimenez, the revolutionary heroes that were shot here by the Spaniards. The elevation of Chihuàhua above the sea is, according to numerous observations, 4,640 feet; its latitude, 28° 38′ N.; its longitude, according to lunar observations made by Dr. Gregg, is in 106° 30′ W. of Greenwich. The climate is delightful. Part of the population are very wealthy, but the majority are quite poor. The lower classes are ragged and filthy, and as to thievishness, they might excel in London or Paris. The manners of the people are generally polite, (except in patriotic paroxysm;) the señoritas are celebrated for their beauty and natural grace; and fandangos and monte-banks, cock fights and bull-fights, flourish as well here as over all Mexico.

CHILI, or CHILE, a republic, S. America, situated along the W. shore of the continent, bounded by the Andes on the E., & Pacific Ocean on the W., extending from lat. 24° to 55° S., & between lon. 69° & 77° W. Length from N. to S., including isl. of Chiloe, 2,140 m.; breadth from 100 to 220 m. The boundary line separating it on the N. from Bolivia is near Huesco Parado; its southern limit on the mainland is the Bay of Ancud.

The mountain slopes of the Andes form the greater part of Chili. They are here a single range except at two places, where they separate, & enclose the elevated valleys of Tunyan & Uzpallata. The volcanic peak of Aconcagua rises to an elevation of 23,200 feet, that of Maypu to 15,000 feet. There are several passes across the Chilean range; one in Aconcagua, at an elevation of 14,000 feet; at Portello, 14,365; & at Tunyan & Cumbre, 13,210 feet. North of the Rio Chuapa the whole country is formed by the declivity of the Andes, except a narrow belt of plain 60 to 80 feet in elevation, bordering the sea. The surface is very irregular, rocky, sandy, & uncultivated, except a few spots on the banks of the rivers. S. of Rio Chuapa the country is more diversified. Hilly tracts occupy the middle of this space, but on either side are valleys & plains of considerable fertility. From the Rio Maule to the Biobio the land becomes more level, & is in general exceedingly fertile.

Chili is divided into 12 provinces, each governed by an Intendant, appointed every three years by the President; the provinces are divided into departments, each of which has a corporation elected by the people, & a governor appointed by the Intendant of the province; the departments are sub-divided in sub-delegations, & these again into districts.

The climate of Central Chili is hot & dry. In summer the thermometer rises to 90° & 95° Fahr.; in the other seasons the air is more temperate, & the climate, on the whole, healthy. In spring & winter ice is sometimes seen even on the coasts. In some of the valleys, as Copiapó, years pass over without rain falling, but dews are frequent. Farther south showers are only occasional, sometimes at an interval of 3 years. In the vicinity of the river Biobio rain falls regularly in winter. South of this river the rains are irregular, but fall heavily. In spring the sky is cloudy, but for many months of the year it is clear & transparent. High gales blowing in particular directions, are not unfrequent, & earthquakes occur very often, particularly near the coast. Snow falls on the summits of the Andes, and, by its gradual melting, affords a supply of water to the rivers. The lower limits of the snow line are, N. extremity 17,000 feet; in middle, 12,780 feet; in S. extremity 8,300 feet. The rivers N. of the Maypu bring down to the coast little water; & are not navigable. S. of lat. 34°, the rains are sufficiently copious to form considerable rivers. The Maule is navigable for vessels drawing 7 ft. water, & for barges, for about 20 m. The Biobio, the largest river in the country, has a course of 200 m., & is 2 m. wide at its mouth, navigable for boats for 200 m., but too shallow for large vessels. The other navigable streams are the Bueno, Chairin, Cauten, Sinfondo, & Valdavia; & there are about 100 smaller ones. The lakes are Bucalena, Cahul, Buchuguen, & Bolleruca, all salt; & of fresh water are the Aculéo, Ranco, & Villarica. There are several good harbors, such as those of Valdivia, Concepçion, Valparaiso, & Coquimbo. The tracts through the valley & ravines are only passable by mules, & good roads & bridges are very much needed.

The vegetation of the north of Chili is very limited. Tropical plants do not grow, from the extreme dryness of the soil. Farther south Indian corn, wheat, barley, oats, beans, & hemp, are extensively cultivated, & melons, pumpkins, figs, grapes, pomegranates, oranges, peaches, apples, & olives, are abundant. The S. forests also contain a variety of excellent timber trees. This is the native country of the potato. It is found growin the arid mntns. of Central Chili as well as in the moist temp. of Chonos & Chiloe Isles. Among the animals of prey the puma is the most conspicuous, & is not uncommon. The guanacoe & llama abound in the plains of the S. provinces, & the pastures feed large herds of cattle, horses, asses, mules, & goats. Jerked beef, tallow, hides, & live stock are exported. Gold is found in the sands of the rivers; silver mines exist in the S. Andes, but silver & copper mines are chiefly wrought in the more N. parts; lead & iron are found, but are not wrought. On the river Biobio coal & lignite beds abound, & are partially wrought.

In 1830 the department of Coquimbo contained 103 mines, viz.: 75 copper, 25 silver, & 3 of gold. The exports of silver bullion, copper, & silver & copper ores, in 1852, were $7,635,266; the coinage during the same year (owing to the imperfect state of the machinery in the mint) was only $1,532,686; but in the first 5 months of 1853 there were coined $1,093,952. The pop. consists of the descendants of the Spaniards & the Aboriginal tribes. All the inhabitants of the Biobio are of European descent, with scarcely any mixture of Indian blood. The Aborigines inhabit almost exclusively the country south of this river. Wealth & property are more unequally divided than in the states to the E. of the Andes. Some of the largest proprietors in the vicinity of the cities are said to possess annual incomes varying from $25,000 to $50,000. The gradations of rank are more strongly marked also, & the guaso or peasant here is not so independent a personage as the guacho of the eastern agricultural states. The religion is Roman Catholic, to the exclusion of public worship of any other. The government is vested in a President, elected for 5 years, a senate of 20 members, appointed for 9 years, & a house of representatives, elected by the people. Chili is at present the best governed & most prosperous of the S. Amer. republics. A well-organized militia force has lately been established, & the standing army has been reduced to 2,661 men. A single frigate & some smaller vessels constitute the navy. Revenue 1852, $5,480,480; public debt same year, $1,558,975. There are an university & lyceum at Santiago, & government schools & seminaries established throughout several districts. Santiago is the capital of the republic & the seat of government.

In 1852, 720,000 tons of shipping entered the ports of Chili, & 700,000 departed. The mercantile navy of Chili on the 1st June, 1850, was composed as follows: 20 ships, 82 barques, 50 brigs, 22 brig-schooners, 40 schooners, & 3 steamers, in all 217 vessels, with an aggregate tonnage of 47,735 tons.

Chili was taken possession of by the Spaniards after the conquest of Peru, & a settlement formed at Santiago in 1541. In 1810 the struggle for independence against the mother country commenced, & terminated in 1818 by the battle of Maypù & the formation of a republic.

CHI-LI, or PE-CHE-LE, the most N. prov. of China, mostly between lat. 35° & 41° 30′ N., & lon. 114° & 120° E., having N. Mongolia, E. the Gulf of Pe-che-le, & on the other sides the provs. Shan-tung, Shan-se, & Ho-nan. Pop. 1825, 27,990,871. It is well watered, but is the least productive prov. of China-proper; & it owes its chief importance to containing the capital, Pekin, & the great depôts of rice & salt for the internal supply of the empire, & of the cattle sent into China from Mongolia. Coal of inferior quality is raised in considerable quantities. The prov. is divided into 11 deps. Chief cities, Pekin & Yung-ping.

CHI LI, or PE CHE LE (GULF OF), an inlet of the Yellow Sea, between lat. 37° 10′ & 39° 20′ N., & lon. 118° & 121° E., communicating N. with the Gulf of Leao-tong, & E. with the Yellow Sea, bounded on other sides by the Chinese provinces Chi-li & Shan-tung. Length & breadth about 150 m. each. It receives the Pei-ho river on W., & the Chan-tou on N.

CHILICOTHE, city, capital of Ross co., O., 45 S. Columbus, 100 W. It is handsomely situated on the left bank of the Scioto, & on a plain elevated about 30 feet above the river. Its plan resembles that of Philadelphia. Pop. 1840, 3,977; 1850, 7,109. The principal streets follow the course of the r., & these are crossed by others at right angles, extending from the r. to the cr. The two main streets, which cross each other at right angles at the centre of the t., are 99 feet wide. Water street, which fronts the r., is 82½ feet wide; the other streets are 66 wide. Founded in 1796. It has a court house & jail, 2 market houses, an U. S. land office, 50 stores, 2 banks, 14 churches,—1 Associate Reformed, 2 Baptist, 1 Episcopal, 1 Lutheran, 5 Methodist, 2 Presbyterian, & 2 Roman Catholic,—4 printing offices, issuing a daily & 4 weekly newspapers, 2 paper fac., 4 flouring m., 3 saw m., & several other extensive manufacturing establishments. In the midst of the v. was an anc. mound, now removed to give place for buildings. The Ohio canal passes through it. On the W. side of the v. is a hill rising to the height of 300 feet, from which there is a beautiful & extensive view of the place, & the surrounding country.

CHILICOTHE, p-v., Peoria co., Ill., 88 N. Springfield, 882 W. It is situated at the upper end of Peoria Lake. Contains several stores & 500 inhab.

CHILICOTHE, p-v., capital of Livingston co., Mo., 150 N.W. Jefferson city, 1,053 W. Situated 3½ m. from the junction of the E. & W. forks of Grand river, on a prairie. It contains a court house & jail, 2 churches, 3 stores, & 650 inhabitants.

Vevay, at the E. extrem. of the Lake of Geneva, on an isolated rock, surrounded by deep water, & connected with the mainland by a wooden bridge. It was built by Amadeus IV. of Savoy, in 1238, & was long a state prison, but is now used as an arsenal. Bonnivard, prior of St. Victor, was confined here from 1530 to 1536, & the place is rendered famous in Byron's "Prisoner of Chillon."

CHILMARK, p-t., Dukes co., Ms., 100 S.S.E. Boston, 482 W. It is situated in the S.W. part of the isl. of Martha Vineyard. At the W. end of the t. is a peninsula, owned in part by the native Indians, on the N.W. point of which is the promontory called Gay Head, on the summit of which, 157 feet above the sea, is a light-house. In the S.W. part of the t. is a projecting point denominated Squibnocket. It has a woollen fac., 2 grist m., 7 schools. Pop. 1840, 702; 1850, 747. (See Gay Head.)

CHILMARK, a pa. of England, co. Wilts, 4 m. E. Hindon. Area, 3,154 ac. Pop. 615. Fair, July 30.

CHILMARY, Chilmari, a town of Brit. India, presid. of Bengal, dist. & 40 m. S.E. Rungpoor, on the Brahmaputra, & at which from 60,000 to 100,000 Hindoos are stated to assemble at certain religious & commercial festivals.

CHILO, p-v., Franklin t., Clermont co., O., 123 S.W. Columbus, 483 W. Situated on the N. bank of the Ohio r. It was called Mechanicsburg until 1829.

CHILOE, an island on the W. coast of S. America, which, with several smaller islands, forms a prov. of Chili. It is separated from Patagonia by Gulf of Ancud, & extends from lat. 41° 40′ to 43° 20′ S., with lon. 74 W. It is 120 miles in length & 40 in breadth. Pop. 1843, 48,876. The island is hilly but not mountainous, & densely covered with wood, except around the coast, where it is partially cleared & cultivated. The climate is temperate, but exceedingly moist—in winter almost incessant rains prevail, with frequent gales from W. to N.W.—the summer is warm, but the air frequently clouded & loaded with moisture: yet, on the whole, it is reckoned healthy. The soil is a rich sandy loam. The beech, cypress, laurel, & other trees grow in perfection. The chief products are wheat, barley, potatoes, apples, & strawberries; & cattle, sheep, & swine are reared in considerable numbers. The shores produce abundance of shell mollusks; and oysters, mussels, & pico (a barnacle), form a principal part of the food of the inhabitants. The population consists of natives, originally of Spanish descent and aboriginal Indians, but the great bulk of the inhabitants are a mixed breed. All are nominally Christians, but in general very ignorant & superstitious. The Indian language has become obsolete, & Spanish is that in general use. Agriculture is in a very primitive state, & the trade carried on is a species of barter, money being very scarce. The people are indolent & poor. Schools are general, but the teachers & priests are of a very illiterate grade. A coarse woollen cloth, dyed blue, is the principal local manufacture. Exports comprise provisions, timber, hides, brooms, woollens, to the annual amount of 25,000 dollars. The number of coasting vessels is about 1,500. Coal or lignite exists here, but is not wrought. Mines were formerly wrought, but are now given up. The island was discovered by the Spaniards in 1558. Castro, the ancient capital, was founded in 1566. San Carlos is now the chief town & port. This island was the last to throw off the authority of the king of Spain. The Chiloe Archipelago consists of upwards of 60 small islands, about 30 of which are inhabited, & several of which are well cultivated, & contain schools, &c. The prov. is divided into ten districts, & is governed by an intendant & a provisional assembly, subject to the general government of Chile.

CHILPANZINGO, a town of Guerrero, Mexico, 120 m. S. Mexico, on the road to Acapulco, & 4,800 feet above the sea.

CHILTEPEC, an arm of the river Tabasco, state of Tabasco, Mex., leaves the main stream at San Juan Bautista, & after a N. course of 60 to 70 m., enters the Gulf of Mexico, 30 m. W.S.W. La Frontera.

CHILTERN, two contiguous pas. of Engl., co. Wilts. —I. (All Saints), 5 m. E.N.E. Heytesbury. Area, 4,476 ac. Pop. 452.—II. (St. Mary), Area, 1,198 ac. Pop. 239.

CHILTERN HILLS, a range of chalk hills of Engl., co. Bucks, the S. part of which they traverse between Goring in Oxfordshire, & Tring in co. Herts. Breadth from 15 to 20 m. Height of principal summit, near Wendover, 905 feet above the sea. It is stated to have been formerly covered with a forest, some traces of which are extant, & it was notoriously infested with depredators, to suppress whose ravages the office of "stewarts of the Chiltern hundreds" was established under the crown. The duties of the office are now only nominal, but the recognition of them is retained to enable members of the House of Commons, by accepting them under the crown, to relinquish their seat in that assembly, which a member cannot otherwise do. There are 3 Chiltern hundreds, & the office is in the gift of the Chancellor of Exchequer.

CHILTHORNE-DOMER, a pa. of Engl., co. Somerset, 2 m. S. Ilchester. Area, 1,392. Pop. 269.

CHILTON, several pas. of Engl.—I. co. Berks, 3 m. N. East Ilsley. Area, 1,415 ac. Pop. 884.—II. county Bucks, 2¼ m. N.N.W. Thame. Area, 2,080 ac. Pop. 398.—III. co. Suffolk, 1½ m. N.E. Sudbury. Area, 979 ac. Pop. 151.—IV.—(Cantillo), co. Somerset, 2¼ m. E. Ilchester. Area, 631 ac. Pop. 115.—V.(Foliat), cos. Berks & Wilts, 2 m. W. Hungerford. Area, 3,740 ac. Pop. 748.—VI. (Trinity), co. Somerset, N. Bridgewater. Area, 1,543 ac. Pop. 52.

CHILVERS-COTON, a pa. of Engl., co. Warwick, 1 m. S.W. Nuneaton. Area, 3,730 ac. Pop. 2,613, mostly employed in ribbon-weaving. Annual revenue of free school & other charities of the Newdigate family, 250*l.* per annum. Ardbury hall here, the splendid seat of this family, was erected out of the ruins of an Augustine priory.

CHILWELL, a hamlet of England, co. & 4½ m. S.W. Nottingham, pa. Attenbury. Pop. 769.

CHILWORTH, a pa. of Engl., co. Hants, 3½ m. S.E. Romsey. Area, 1,400 ac. Pop. 177.—II. a chapelry, co. Surrey, 2½ m. S.E. Guildford.

CHIMALAPA, a vill. of Guatemala, 55 m. N.E. Guatemala, in a rich & fertile tract, on the right bank of Motagua, & consisting, a few years ago, of about 90 huts & a ruined church.—The Chimalapilla river is an affluent of the Coatzocoalcos, Tobasco, Mex.

CHIMALTENANGO, a prov. & t. of Guatemala, C. A., 28 m. W. Guatemala. Pop. of prov. 56,400, & of the t. 4,000.

CHIMAY, a town of Belgium, prov. Hainaut, cap. cant., on the Blanche, 32 m. S.E. Mons. Pop. 3,041. It has a noble mansion & park, a college, several iron-works, & breweries, & near it are some valuable marble quarries.

CHIMBO, a town of Ecuador, S. A., on the Chimbo river, in the Andes, at the foot of Chimborazo mountain, & 50 miles N.E. Guayaquil. It has an active transit trade.

CHIMBORAZO, a celebrated mountain of Ecuador, S. A., & the culminating point of the Andes of Quito. Lat. 1° 30′ S., long. 79 W., elev. 21,424 feet. It is in the form of a cone, & perpetually snow clad. It was ascended by Humboldt, 23d June, 1802, to an elev. of 19,286 feet, & again by Boussingault & Hall, 16th Dec., 1831, to 19,695 feet.

CHIMERA, or KHIMARA, a town of European Turkey, Albania, on the strait of Otranto, 22 m. N.W. Delvino, at the foot of the range of mntns. of same name, anc. Acroceranus, which terminates at Cape Linguetta, on the Bay of Avolona.

CHINA, p. t., Kennebec co., Me., 21 E. by N. Augusta, 616 W. Watered by a fine small lake, called Twelve Mile Pond, the outlet of which flows into a branch of the Kennebec, & affords good mill seats. The v. is pleasantly situated on the margin of this lake, & has a steam saw mill & an academy. There are in the t. a fulling m., 3 tanneries, 4 grist m., 8 saw m., an academy, 25 schools. Pop. 1840, 2,675; 1850, 2,769.

CHINA, p-t., Wyoming co., N. Y., 273 W. Albany, 348 W. Surface undulating, soil clay loam. Drained by Clear cr., a branch of Cattaraugus cr. The village is situated at the junction of Clear & Cattaraugus crs. & is called Arcade. (P-o. China.) It has 2 churches, 3 stores, several mills & factories, & about 300 inhabts. There are in the t. a woollen fac., a tannery, a grist m., 12 schools. Pop. 1840, 1,437; 1850, 1,961.

CHINA, p-t., St. Clair co., Mich., 51 N.N.E. Detroit, 575 W. Belle river passes through its N.E. corner; drained on the S. by Swan cr. It has a grist m., 2 saw m. Pop. 1840, 610; 1850, 1,037.

CHINA, p-t., Lee co., Ill. Pop. 688.

CHINA, a large & important country of E. Asia, constituting the principal part of the Chinese empire. China proper extends between lat, 20° & 42° N., & lon. 98° & 122° E. Greatest length about 1,600 miles; breadth varies from 900 to 1,300 m. Having N. Manchooria & Mongolia, W. Tibet & other dependencies, S. the Burmese, Laos, & Anamese doms., from S.E. round to N.E. the China & Yellow seas. It is shut out from its N. Dependencies by the great wall, constructed in the 3d century before the Christian era, & which extends over hill & dale for 1,250 miles, varies from 15 to 30 feet in height, & is strengthened at regular intervals by large square towers. The defensive barrier is now in decay. Estimated area, & pop. of the several provs. of China proper are, as follows:—

Provinces.	Area in sq. m.	Pop., 1845, according to an official census.	Chief cities.
Chi-li	58,949	27,990,871	Pekin.
Shan-tung	65,104	28,958,764	Tsi-nan.

China, so far as Europeans have been able to ascertain, consists of an elevated region in the N.; a great alluvial plain in the centre, through which the Yang-tze-kiang & Hoang-ho rivers wind into the sea; and in the S. a region alternately undulating & interspersed with broad valleys and lofty mountains, which increase in elevation as they proceed W-ward. It is estim. that 2-3ds of the country are mountainous. Next to the great rivers already named, which rank among the largest in Asia, the Yun-ling flowing near Pekin, and the Choo-Keang or Canton river, are of the highest importance; the prov. Yun-nan is traversed by the main streams, or by considerable affits. of all the great rivers of Further India. Lakes are both numerous & extensive; that of Tong-ting, in the prov. Hou-nan, is stated to be nearly 300 m. in circuit. The coast line has been estim. at 2,500 m. in length, & it is alternately bold & rocky, or low & swampy; it presents, however, many good harbors at the mouths of the rivers & elsewhere.

In China the winters are colder, & the summers hotter than in the same parallels of W. Europe. Pekin in the same lat. as Naples, has its average temperature 9° lower. In the southern prov., near Canton & Macao, the winter months are intensely dry & cold, March & April bring fogs & a milder temp. Much rain falls in May, and from July to September there is intense heat, with hurricanes, typhoons, & thunder storms. There are no active volcanoes in China Proper; but in sev. localities there are hot springs & emissions of gas. The vegetable productions of the country belong chiefly to the temp. zone. The tea plant is peculiar to this region, & the adjoining territory of Assam. The camphor tree grows to the height of 50 ft., & is a good timber tree; many lacker shrubs from which gum varnish is obtained, the croton sebiferum or tallow tree; an inferior sort of cinnamon tree, rhubarb, ginseng, smilax, & other herbs, are common. Among the fruits are the China orange, the lichi, loquat, & wampee. The nelumbium, a large water lily, yields edible seeds, & the camelia, the olea fragrans, the tree peony, and the Indian chrysanthemum are among the most conspicuous flowers. The wild animals of China, if they ever abounded, have been long since almost extirpated by the cultiv. of the land, & the dense pop.; but the tiger is still known in the forests of Yun-nan, & the wild cats in the forests of the S. The domestic dog is uniformly of one variety, of the spaniel size, & pale yellow color. The deer family are now rare. Birds, include pheasants, quails, ring-dove, fishing cormorant.

A few harmless reptiles still exist, & the locust frequently commits great devastations. Rice is the principal article of culture, & being the main food of the pop., its export is prohibited; wheat, barley, millet, & other grains of temp. climates are raised, especially in the N. & W. provs., where the climate is similar to that of latitudes much further N. in Europe, the cold being often severe. The density of pop. among other circumstances, has in many parts compelled the cultivation of every spot of ground at all capable of yielding produce for nutriment, & the mountain sides are often terraced & manured on principles of the strictest economy. The land is cultivated everywhere in small patches; a farm of 8 or 10 acres is considered large. Kitchen vegetables, oil plants of various kinds, & tobacco are almost universal articles of culture. Tea, the most valuable article of the foreign trade, & also very extensively consumed in China, is a product almost peculiar to this region. It is raised chiefly between lat. 25° & 31° N., on a tract extending from the coast inland for 500 or 600 m., & having an area of 350 to 400 sq. m., in the provs. Fo-kien, Ngan-hoei, Kiang-si, & Che-kiang. The soil on which it grows is composed of disintegrated granite & ferruginous sandstone. Of this article it has been estimated that upwards of 112 million lbs. are annually exported into foreign countries.

Estimate in pounds weight of the quantities of tea exported from China in 1851-52, specifying the countries for which the same was shipped, and the quantity shipped to each:

United States of America,	lbs. 34,327,000
Great Britain & Ireland,	65,100,000
Australia,	8,829,000
Holland,	2,500,000
India,	500,000
Other places,	1,200,000
Total,	112,350,000

The export of tea from China to the U. States in 1853, amounted to 40,303,600 pounds.—

The black teas are mostly prepared in Fo-kien, and the green in Ngan-hoei, both derived from one species of plant. The prov. Chi-li produces large quantities of salt and of coal, which, though of inferior quality, is especially valuable, owing to the general absence of timber or wood for fuel; in the S. eastern district lignite is also found. In Kan-su great quantities of tobacco are raised; in Che-kiang, silk is the chief article of produce, sugar in the S.; cotton, camphor, ginseng, rhubarb, & other drugs, numerous gums and varnishes, cassia, musk, the precious metals, gems, copper, tin, lead, mercury, arsenic, iron, and the finest porcelain clay, are among the principal products of the empire, the principal mines being in Kwi-choo & Yun-nan; live stock numerous only in the W. provs. Manufs. are of the most varied, and often of the most exquisite description. Chinese porcelain, silks, embroidery, & lacquered wares are unequalled for brilliancy, richness, and durability; & in carved goods in tortoise-shell, ivory, horn; in engraving, the manufs. of paper, ink, cabinet-work, the Chinese abundantly testify their ingenuity & talent for imitation. They excel also in ship-building & bell-casting, & are apt in all branches of art conducive to the comfort of life; but all their manufs. are carried on without any aid of machinery. The traffic, in the E. provs. especially, is conducted chiefly by water, & among the most remarkable of the national works for this purpose, is the Grand Canal, extending from Hang-choo-foo, N. for 700 m. to the Yan-liang riv. The W. provs. import rice & other grains from the E., in return for metallic & some other products. From Tibet, China imports coarse woollens, gold, bullion, Indian piece goods, shells, rhinoceros' horns, feathers, in return for silks, porcelain, English broad-cloths, pearls, coal, & large quantities of tea. A considerable trade is carried on with Nepaul, Bootan, & Kumaon, the exports to which comprise borax, salt, & woollen goods; the returns being in grain, mole skins, tobacco, & Indian rupees. Caravans go frequently from Chino to Yarkand, and other parts of Chinese Turkestan, with tea & various manufs., and bring back cattle & raw silk. The overland trade with Burmah is extensive; Bhamo, in the Burmese dom., is its principal seat, where a large annual mart is held for many months during the year. The trade with Russia is wholly conducted at Kiachta (which see), on the Mongolian frontier, where Chinese raw & manufd. silks, porcelain, rhubarb, sugar-candy, musk, and especially tea, are exchanged for furs, sheep & lamb skins, and woollen goods. We are unacquainted with the extent of the trade between China & Mongolia, Manchooria & Corea; but with the last named country there is certainly no extensive intercourse. From Leao-tong, on the N. frontier of the prov. Chi-li, wheat, cotton, & drugs are received in return for coarse manufd. goods. The marit. trade is by far the most important; & many years ago Mr. Crawfurd estimated the commercial shipping of China at 70,000 tons, & that of Hai nan at 10,000 tons, engaged in trading to Siam, Anam, Japan, & the Asiatic Archipelago. From 70 to 80 junks also leave Siam in the summer with grain, sugar, japan-wood, betel-nut, zinc, ivory, gamboge, & take back flour, peas, cured mutton, and other provisions. Gold, ebony, tin, edible birds' nests, shark fins, sea slug, pepper, & various condiments are imported from the archip.; the Canton trade with the Strait of Malacca is stated to employ a capital of about 1,250,000*l.* sterling; & the exports from Singapore to China are estimated at 2,900,000 dolls. in value, of which American British goods form a considerable part. The total marit. export & import trade of China with Europ. nations (Russia excepted), & with the U. States, has been estimated at $50,000,000 annually. The opium exported from Calcutta to China in 1844-5 (independently of that exported from Bombay), amounted to 18,792 chests, worth 2, 439,430*l.*, this being still a principal import into China, the trade being tolerated, though not legalized. The emperor is of a Manchoo dynasty, which conquered China in the 17th century; & the large property of the great offices of state are held by Manchoo Tastaos. The government is despotic, & is conducted under the emperor by an "inner" or privy council, a general council; the 6 supreme boards of civil office, revenue, rites, war, punishment, & public works; a censorate, high courts of memorials & appeals, & the imperial college which regulates everything relating to literature & science. The last is a most important engine of Chinese polity, literary acquirements being a chief step to advancement in the public service, and schools being universal. The code of laws is reckoned good, & the administration of these on the whole mild; but the slavish subjection in which the administrators are held, & a system of organized espionage on the functionaries, leads to deceit & bribery throughout all the offices of governments. The provs. are subdivided into what we may call departments, arrondissements, & districts, or, foo, ting, choo, & heen, which titles are respectively affixed to the names of their cap. cities & towns. The metropolitan prov. Chi-li, for instance, consists of 11 foo, 3 ting, 17 choo, & 174 heen dists., all under special governors, besides which officers, a tsungtuh or governor-general has usually authority over two or more provs. The standing military force, according to Teinhouslie, consists of 4 national divisions —the Manchoos in 678 companies of 100 men each; the Mongols in 211 companies, & 106,000 Chinese, all cavalry; & 500,000 native infantry, besides 125,000 irregular troops or militia—in all 829,900 men. Besides these, many troops are stationed in the provinces of Mongolia, Turkestan, Tibet, where the government is military, & in all considerable cities there is a garrison of Tartar troops. Since the termination of the contest with Britain, large quantities of military stores have been purchased from the United States, & the coasts have been fortified with great care.

In physical character the Chinese rank under the Mongolian family of men; the harsher features of this family being considerably softened. The head & face are square-formed, or angular—the nose flat, lips thick, & eyes small, with oblique eyelids, cheekbones prominent. Color of skin lemon yellow, hair black, beard scanty. While young, both males & females are frequently good-looking, but after 20 the features gradually assume a harsh & ugly appearance. The absurd practice of retarding the growth of the foot in females, which is confined chiefly to the upper ranks, renders these all lame, & comparatively incapable of active exertion. The Chinese intellect is shrewd, & takes a common sense view of things, not apt to be imaginative or speculative. The disposition is mild and peaceful, but deceitful; filial affection, & parental reverence are cultivated, but deliberate infanticide, practised on motives of expediency, shows a low state of moral feeling. At a very remote period, the natives appear to have advanced to a considerable state of civilization, & to the practice of the arts of domestic life, especially the arts of printing, the invention of the mariner's compass, & the manufacture of silk & porcelain; but here they have paused, & their government & institutions tend not to the further progress of improvement. The Chinese language is monosyllabic, & their letters express words & ideas; the roots or original characters amounting to 214. The fine arts have made no great progress; & though education in reading & writing is common, yet they have no pretensions to learning or science. The religion of Confucius is that adopted by the court & upper classes, & consists in a refined deism, with a great reverence for ancestors, & for the moral precepts of Confucius.

Buddhism is the religion of the great mass of the people in China-proper, Manchooria, Mongolia, and Tibet, which last country is its head-quarter, being the seat of its most sacred Llamas. The Taou religion is that next to importance, as respects the number of its votaries. Mohammedans are said to be numerous in China, especially in the prov. Shen-si; and in Chinese Turkestan they form the majority of the pop. Roman Catholics & Jews form a comparatively insignificant proportion of the pop.; of the former there are estimated to be 320,000. The political influence of China extends considerably beyond the territorial limits of her empire, & it is customary for embassies to be sent at stated times, generally from two to five years, from many surrounding countries, with presents to the emperor; other presents of at least an equal value being given back in return. The Chinese court affects to consider the complimentary gifts from foreign states as so much tribute, & in this sense they enumerate Anam, Siam, Burmah, the Laos, Sooloo, Holland, & even Great Britain, as tributary nations. The rule, however, of the present Tartar dynasty, even in the heart of its own dominions, is held by a very uncertain tenure; the Meaou-tu tribes in the S.W. provs. of China, & supposed to be their original inhabitants, have repeatedly risen in rebellion; secret societies, the principal of which is called "the Triad," and which has for its object the restoration of a native dynasty, are said to be rapidly extending; & the finances of the empire are believed to be in a very unsatisfactory condition, in spite of a revenue, officially stated to amount to 191,804,139 taels, or about £63,934,173 annually. The native records of China ascend as far back as as B. C. 2204; & however fabulous their early portion may be considered, there is no doubt that China is the oldest existing dominion on the globe. Some scattered notices of this empire appear in the works of middle age travellers; but Marco Polo was the first among the moderns to give a detailed account of China, the commencement of direct European commerce with which dates only since the discovery of the passage round the Cape of Good Hope. The first attempt of the English to open a trade with China was made in 1637, when 4 merchant vessels arrived at Macao, but through the intrigues of the Portuguese there established, the enterprise failed. Afterwards, the East India Company carried on some small traffic at the different maritime ports, & chiefly at Canton. In 1792 Lord Macartney's embassy attempted to put the trade on a more liberal basis, but with little success. In 1816, Lord Amherst's mission for a similar purpose also failed of success, though the English trade continued pretty quiet and steady for the next 20 years. In 1834 the exclusive trade of the East India Company with China terminated, & the country was thrown open to general traders. Still the trade with foreigners was refused to be recognized by the government of Pekin, & numerous petty annoyances were continually occurring, till at last, in 1839, the Chinese government forcibly obliged the English merchants at Canton to deliver up 20,283 chests of opium, which having been destroyed, & compensation refused, war was declared by England, & the coasts of China were blockaded by a British naval force, amounting in 1842 to 37 ships, mounting 784 guns, & manned by 7,069 men. After a series of successes, a peace was concluded at Nankin, Aug. 29, 1842, by which European merchants and a British consul were allowed to reside at the ports of Canton, Amoy, Foo-chow, Ning-po, & Shang-hai; the island of Hong-Kong was ceded to the English in perpetuity, & 6 million dollars were agreed to be paid by seven instalments, as indemnity for the opium destroyed in 1839; 3 million dollars as the amount of debts due by insolvent Hong merchants; & 12 million, as indemnity for the expenses of the war. In 1847, fresh outrages on the part of the people of Canton, led to another temporary capture of the Bogue Forts, & a new convention. The Chinese empire comprehends China-proper, Manchooria, Mongolia, Chinese Turkestan, Tibet, Hai-nan, Corea, adding to the pop. perhaps eight or ten millions. But though most parts of this empire are undoubtedly densely populated, the estimates of their amount greatly differ, and are all, probably, very vague. In addition to the statements above, we may add that Grossier, in 1743, estimated the population at 200 millions; Balbi estimates the population at only 170 millions; Lord Macartney at 333 millions; a Chinese census of 1812, gives the amount at 360 millions; do. of 1825, 367 millions.

CHINACHIN, a large town of Nepaul, on an affluent of the Goggra, 250 m. W.N.W. Khatmandoo. Houses of brick or stone, with flat roofs. It has 2 Hindoo temples, and an important trade in metals, spices, and manufactured goods from Hindostan, to which country it exports horses, salt, drugs, musk and seeds.

CINALOA, or SINALO, a river of Mexico, in the state of the same name. It rises in the Sierra Madre, lat. 25° 30′ N., & flows in a very circuitous course of about 250 miles into the Gulf of California.

CINALOA, a state of Mexico. Area, 4,266 square leagues. Pop. 1850, 160,000. It occupies the western slope of the Sierra Madre, from the river Bayona, about lat. 26° 30′, to the river Mayo, lat. 27° N., with a coast line of about 225 miles, & a general breadth of 150 ms. Drained by Chamatha, Culiacan, Del Fuerte, Sinaloa, Ayata, & Plastla rivers. The country bordering the Gulf of California is generally low & flat, with a sandy soil, which, when properly irrigated, is extremely fertile, yielding fine crops of Indian corn, wheat, sugar, beans, &c. The hills for some distance from the coast are usually covered with low stunted bushes & a few trees, but near & along the mountain ridges of the Sierra Madre there are extensive forests. It has a few mines of silver & washings of gold. Capital, Culiacan.

CINALOA, a town of the above state, situated at about 10 miles distant from the left bank of the Cinaloa r., 50 miles above its entrance into the Gulf of California. Lat. 25° 45′ N., lon. 108° W. It has considerable trade, & in its vicinity are some gold washings. Pop. 4,500.

CINCINNATI, the metropolis of Ohio, capital of Hamilton county, & the largest & most commercial place west of the Alleghany mts. It is situated on the rt. b. of the Ohio river, 455 miles below Pittsburg, & 1,548 above New Orleans, & 592 miles from Washington. It is the largest city of the Mississippi valley north of New Orleans, & the fifth in population in the United States. Population in 1800, 750; in 1810, 2,540; in 1820, 24,831; in 1840, 46,338; in 1845, 65,000; 1850, 115,438; in 1853, 160,141. The suburbs have 25,000 inhabitants additional.

This city is near the eastern extremity of a valley, about twelve miles in circumference, surrounded by a series of hills, which rise to the height of 300 feet by gentle & varying slopes, & are partly covered with the native forest trees. From the summit of these hills is presented a beautiful & picturesque view of the city & valley. It is built on two table lands, the one elevated from 40 to 60 feet above the other. Low-water mark in the river, which is 108 feet below the upper part of the city, is 432 feet above tide water at Albany, & 133 feet below the level of Lake Erie. Covington & Newport, opposite, in Ky., & Fulton & the adjacent parts of Mill Creek township on the north, are but suburbs of Cincinnati, & if added to the above population would extend it to 185,000. The shore of the Ohio at the landing is substantially paved to low-water mark, & is supplied with floating wharves, adapted to the great rise & fall of the river, which renders the landing & shipping of goods at all times convenient.

Cincinnati is laid out with great regularity. North of Main street, between the north side of Front street & the bank of the river, is the landing, an open area of 10 acres, with about 1,000 feet front. This area is of great importance to the business of the city, & from sunrise to sunset presents a scene of much activity. The central part is compactly & well built, with spacious warehouses, large stores, & handsome dwellings; & many of them are of stone or brick; & of those recently erected, a very large number are of a beautiful kind of stone: the style of architecture is constantly improving. The streets are well paved, extensively shaded with trees, & many of the houses surrounded with shrubbery. The climate is more variable than on the Atlantic coast, in the same latitude. Snow rarely falls sufficiently deep, or lies long enough, to furnish sleighing. Few places are more healthy. The inhabitants are from every state in the Union, & from various countries in Europe.

The Ohio river at Cincinnati is 1,800 feet, or about one-third of a mile wide, & its mean annual range from low to high water is about 50 feet; the extreme range may be about 10 feet more. The greatest depressions are generally in August, September, & October, & the greatest rise in December, March, May, & June. The upward navigation is in winter very rarely suspended by floating ice, & in some winters not at all. Its current at its mean height is about 3 miles an hour; when higher or rising it is more, & when very low it does not exceed 2 miles. The quantity of rain & snow which falls annually at Cincinnati is near 3 feet 9 inches. The average number of clear & fair days in the year is 146; of variable, 114; of cloudy, 105.

Among the public buildings is the new court house & city hall; the Cincinnati Observatory; the first & second Presbyterian churches are beautiful edifices: & the Unitarian church is singularly neat. There are several churches, built within the last three years, which possess great beauty, either internally or externally. But the most impressive building is the Catholic cathedral, which surpasses in beauty & picturesque effect the Metropolitan edifice at Baltimore. There are many fine blocks of stores, on Front, Walnut, Pearl, Main, & Fourth streets, & the eye is arrested by many beautiful private habitations. The most showy quarters are Main street, Broadway, Pearl, & Fourth street.

There are over 100 churches in Cincinnati, viz.: 7 Baptist, 1 Bethel, 4 Congregational, 5 Disciples, 5 Episcopal, 2 Friends (Hicksite & Orthodox), 4 Jews' synagogues, 12 Lutheran, 22 Methodist, 10 Presbyterian, 13 Roman Catholic, 1 Second Advent, 1 Unitarian, 1 Unitarian Baptist, 2 Universalist, &c. There are 6 market houses, & 3 theatres, of which 1 is German.

The city contains many literary & charitable institutions. The Cincinnati college was founded in 1819. The building is in the centre of the city, & is the most beautiful edifice of the kind in the state. It is of the Grecian Doric order, with pilaster fronts, & façade of Dayton marble, & cost about $35,000. The Law department only, now in operation, has a faculty composed of three professors, & the course of instruction embraces a period of 8 months, viz.: from the 23d Sept. to the 1st of June. Woodward college, named from its founder, who gave a valuable block of ground in the north part of the city, has a president & five professors or other instructors, & including its preparatory department, near 200 students. The Fairmont Theological Seminary, under direction of the Baptists, building not yet finished). The Cincinnati Theological Seminary, Old School Presbyterian, was organized in 1850. St. Xavier's college, under the direction of the Roman Catholics, has a president, 8 professors, 100 students, & near 5,000 volumes in its libraries. Lane Seminary, a theological institution, is at Walnut Hills, 2 miles from the centre of the city. It went into operation in 1833; has a president, 3 professors, 75 students, & over 13,000 volumes in its libraries. There is no charge for tuition. Rooms are provided & furnished at $5 per annum, & the students boarded at 62½ to 90 cents per week. The Medical College was chartered & placed under trustees in 1825. It has a large & commodious building, recently, erected, in the Collegiate Gothic style, a library of over 2,000 volumes, 7 professors, & about 150 students. The Wesleyan Female College, established in 1844, has 437 pupils. The Mechanics' Institute, chartered in 1828, has a valuable philosophical & chemical apparatus, a library, & a reading room. The free schools of the city are of a high order, with competent teachers, fine buildings, and apparatus. In the colleges & high schools there are not less than 1,500 pupils; in the common & private, 20,000; making an aggregate of 22,000 persons in the various departments of education. In 1831 a college of teachers was established, having for its object the elevation of the profession, & the advancement of the interest of schools in the Mississippi valley, which holds an annual meeting in Cincinnati in October. The young men's mercantile library association has a fine library, & reading rooms. The library contains over 13,000 volumes, & the institution is unsurpassed in the United States. The library & reading rooms are connected in one vast room, 18 ft. high, 140 long, & 60 broad. The apprentices library, founded in 1821, contains about 5,000 volumes.

The charitable institutions of the city are highly respectable. The Cincinnati orphan asylum is in a building which cost $18,000. Attached is a library & well-organized school, with a provision even for infants; & is supported by ample grounds. The Catholics have one male & female orphan asylum. The commercial hospital & lunatic asylum of Ohio was incorporated in 1821. The edifice is in the north-west part of the city, & will accommodate 250 persons. A part of the building is used for a poor-house, & there are separate apartments for the insane.

The city is supplied with water raised from the Ohio river by steam power, capable of forcing into the reservoir 5,000,000 gals. of water each 12 hours. The reservoir is on elevated ground (about 400 feet above the Ohio); its entire length is 368 feet; width 135 feet; & 28 feet deep; estimated to contain 5,000,000 gallons of water. Cost $796,000, & is the property of the city. The city is lighted with gas, supplied by the Cincinnati gas light & coke co. Capital, $100,000.

Cincinnati is an extensive manufacturing place. Its natural destitution of water power is extensively compensated at present by steam engines, & by the surplus water of the Miami canal & the White Water canal, which extend 25 miles & connects with the White Water canal of Indiana, half a mile south of Harrison, on the state line. The manufactures of the city, already enormous, may be expected to greatly increase. It appears that the manufactures of Cincinnati of all kinds, according to the census of 1850, employed a capital of $6,833,796; & produced articles valued at $19,685,022. These amounts, according to Cist, should be more than doubled to express the capital actually employed, and the value of articles produced. Wine, from the Catawba grape, is extensively made, from the produce of the numerous vineyards in the vicinity. There are 10 daily, 1 tri-weekly, & 21 weekly newspapers, & 6 semi-monthly, 24 monthly, & 2 quarterly publications printed in the city.

The site on which the Cincinnati observatory is erected is one of great beauty. The building crowns a hill which rises some 500 feet above the line of low water of the Ohio, and commands a varied and picturesque view. The main building is built of stone, 80 ft. front, two stories and a half on the wings, and three in the centre. Through the centre of the main building, and founded on the natural rock, rises a pier of grouted masonry eight feet square, entirely insulated from the floors through which it passes, to furnish a permanent and immovable basis for the great equatorial telescope, one of the largest in the world, made at the Frauenhofer Institute, Munich. The focal length is about 17½ ft.; the diameter of the object glass, 12 inches; bearing magnifying powers varying from 100 to 1,400 times. Clock-work is attached to the telescope, and its machinery and circles, by which its mass, weighing some 2,500 lbs., is moved with such admirable accuracy that an object under examination, may be followed by the telescope at the will of the observer. It is mounted on a stone pedestal, and rises, when directed to the zenith, some 20 feet above the floor of the rooms. The apartment is surmounted by a roof of peculiar structure, and so arranged that a portion of the vertical wall and roof strongly framed together, and mounted on wheels on a circular track, may, by a single person, be moved either north or south, when the entire heaven falls within the sweep of the telescope. On the floor below, in the transit room, is the transit telescope, and connected with it, is an admirable siderial clock, and also the machinery invented by Prof. Mitchel; this mechanism consists of two instruments of entirely different construction, the one intended to record the observations of right ascension; the other, observations of difference in declination. By means of the electro-magnet, the clock is made to record its own beats with surprising nicety, on a disc, revolving with uniform velocity on a vertical axis. This disc, covered with paper or metal, receives a minute dot, struck into it by a stylus, driven by a magnet, whose operating electric circuit is closed at each alternate beat, by a delicate vibrating wire attached to the pendulum of the clock by a spider's web; thus, at each alternate vibration of the pendulum, the circuit is closed; and the second is entered, magnetically, on the revolving disc. At the close of each revolution, the disc moves itself forward about the tenth of an inch, without check or interference with the uniformity of its angular motion, and a new circumference of time dots, commences to be recorded. On the time scale thus perpetually forming, the observer can enter, magnetically, by the touch of a key, the observed transit of any star or other object across the meridian wires of the telescope. These entries are subsequently read from the disc, even to the thousandth of one second of time.

The trade of Cincinnati embraces the country from the Ohio to the lakes, on the north; & from the Scioto to the Wabash, east & west. The country bordering the Ohio river, in Kentucky, for 50 miles down, & as far up as the Virginia line, obtain their supplies here. Its manufs. are sent into the upper & lower Mississippi country.

There are six incorporated banks, with aggregate capital of $5,800,000, besides 10 unincorporated banks; 8 fire insurance companies, 3 life insurance companies, & 1 live stock insurance company. Cincinnati is the greatest pork market in the world. The pork, bacon, lard, lard-oil, star candles, soap, bristles, &c., amount in value to about 10 millions of dollars annually. Imports, year ending August 31st, 1853, $51,230,644. Exports, same year, $36,266,108. Tonnage of the port, 1853, 10,191. There were 25 steamboats & 3 barges built in 1853, with an aggregate tonnage of 10,252 tons. The total arrivals of steamboats for the year 1853 was 3,630; and the departures 4,113.

Cincinnati enjoys great facilities for communication with the surrounding country. Two trunk-lines of railroads enter the city, viz., Little Miami and the Cincinnati, Hamilton & Dayton. From each of these diverge numerous branches. Two other trunk-lines are constructing, viz., the Dayton Air Line, and the Ohio & Mississippi, which is to extend to St. Louis. From Covington, on Kentucky side of Ohio, a railroad is constructed to the heart of Kentucky.

The city is divided into 16 wards, & is governed by a mayor, & a board of trustees of three members for each ward, styled the city council. The mayor is elected biennially, and the trustees annually.

Cincinnati was founded in 1789, by emigrants from New England & New Jersey, on the site of Fort Washington. It has grown with great rapidity, and being the great emporium of the centre, it must continue to increase with a ratio unprecedented.

The licensed and enrolled tonnage of the dist. for 1851 was 36,070 tons; 11,857 steam, & 24,615 sail.

The harbor of Cleveland is one of the best on Lake Erie. It is formed by the mouth of the Cuyahoga r., & improved by a pier on each side, extending 425 yards into the lake, 200 ft. apart, & faced with substantial stone masonry. Cleveland is the great mart of the greatest grain growing state in the Union. It has a ready communication with New York via railroad and the Erie Canal, with Philadelphia by railroad and canal, with Cincinnati by railroad, & with the Ohio river by the Ohio canal, & it exports much by the way of the Welland canal to Canada.

The Western Reserve Medical College was founded in 1844, has 6 professors, 177 students, & 12,000 vols. in its libraries. Lectures commence on the first Wednesday in Nov. The Western College of homœopathy was founded in 1850, has 5 professors & 62 students. Lectures commence on the first Monday in Nov.

Ohio city, on the opposite side of the Cuyahoga riv., constitutes virtually one place with Cleveland. (See Ohio city.) It has, however, a separate incorporation.

Cleveland derives its name from Gen. Moses Cleveland, an agent of the Connecticut land Co., who accompanied the first surveying party upon the Connecticut Western Reserve. The city plot was surveyed under his direction in 1796. The Indian title to the territory had been extinguished two years before, but was not on the W. side of the r. until July 4th, 1805. Cleveland was incorporated as a village in 1814, and as a city in 1836. The light-house at the entrance of Cleveland harbor, on the E. bank of the Cuyahoga r., is in lat. 41° 30′ N., lon. 81° 51′ W. It shows a fixed light elevated 15 feet above the surface of the lake, & is visible for a distance of 13¼ m. The beacon on pier, W. side of entrance, is elevated 48 feet above the surface of the water, & is visible for a distance of 11½ miles.

CLYDE, one of the largest & most important rivs. in Scotland. It takes its rise from numerous streams flowing from the mountain range in S. part of Lanarkshire & borders of Dumfriesshire; the chief summits of which are the Lowthers, Leadhills, Queensberry hill, & Roager Law, with elevation approaching 3,000 ft. The original source of the Clyde, popularly so called, has its rise about 2 m. S.E. of Roager Law, & 4 m. E. vill. of Elvanfoot, at an elevation of 1,400 feet. After a course of a few miles this small stream is joined by the Daer, Powtrail, Elvan, & other mountain rivulets. It now flows in a N.E. direction, receiving tributaries from the Tinto hills, then turning with many windings N.W. & W., is joined by the Douglas Water from the S.W., the Medwin, Mouse, &c., and entering Lanark parish forms the celebrated falls descending by several rapids about 230 ft., amid high shelving sandstone rocks, & most picturesque scenery. Its course is now through rich & fertile valleys on to Glasgow. From this city it expands into a river navigable for ships of 300 to 400 tons, & flows N.W., dividing the cos. Renfrew on the W., from Dumbarton on the N.E., receiving the tributaries of the Kelvin, Cart, Leven. After passing Dumbarton, it opens up into a noble estuary 4 m. in width, spreading N.ward into Loch Long, & S.ward into the Firth of Clyde, with the isls. of Bute & Cumbraes, situated at the mouth of the estuary. Here the Clyde expands into a firth averaging about 32 m. in width, & at the distance of 48 m. becomes identified with the N. Channel. The length of the riv. from its source to Glasgow, including windings, is about 75 m. From Glasgow to the S. point of Bute island about 40 m. In the Clyde was launched the first steamboat constructed in Britain (1812.—See Hudson riv.)—Clydesdale is the district forming the valley of the Clyde [LANARKSHIRE], and is celebrated for its orchards, coal & iron mines, and horses. COLONY, p-o., Knox co., Mo.

COLORADO, riv., Texas, rises in the W. part of the state, in the Guadalupe mountains, from which it has a course to the sea of about 600 m., flowing first in a N.E. direction to its junction with the Pasigono, whence it inclines to the S.E. Its banks are steep and seldom overflowed, & abound in fine timber. About 10 miles from its mouth is "the raft," formed of drifted wood, which greatly obstructs navigation. It consists of detached masses of timber, with portions of the river intervening. The Colorado enters the bay of Matagorda by two outlets, about 2 m. apart. The following streams enter it from its left bank: Cummings, Rabb's, Pine, Oak, Eblin's, Walberger's, Bear, Hamilton, Cypress, Honey, & Hunting. From the right it receives Wilson's, Jenning's, Jones', Buckners, Cedar, Walnut, Onion, Spring, & Bull creeks. The Agua Fria enters the Colorado from the W., 12 m. above Austin. Nearly 22 m. above Austin the Peidernales or Flint river enters it from the W. Although its length does not exceed 70 m., it is so much increased by tributary waters from mountain springs, that it rivals the main stream in volume near the point of confluence. The Llano also flows from the W., & carries a considerable body of water to the Colorado. A few miles above the mouth of the Llano, & 4 m. below Hunting creek, are the falls, or a succession of cascades, extending about 800 yards. The first fall is about 20 feet perpendicular. Within a hundred yards there is another of 10 feet. And thus they continue, until they reach a total perpendicular fall of nearly 100 feet. The river flows from a distance of 180 m. above, through an even and clear channel, to the falls. The San Saba, a river about 200 miles in length, rises in a spur of the Guadalupe mountains, & winds its course between two hilly ridges, parallel, & but a short distance from, the Colorado, for 40 m. above its confluence. The San Saba is about 50 yards wide, & generally deep, but it is obstructed by numerous shoals. The Pecan Bayou, which enters about 25 m. above the mouth of the San Saba, has a course of 120 m. in length. About 100 m. above the mouth of the Pecan Bayou the Pasigono river enters the Colorado from the N.E. Its tributaries are the Piaroya, the Mochique, and the Salada creeks. Above the mouth of the Pasigono, the principal branches of the Colorado are the Pisape-Sunova, Arroyo-Frio, & the Aguilas. During the dry season its average depth is about six feet, except at the shoals. When "the raft" has been removed, & the contemplated improvements have been completed, it is anticipated that this river will be navigable for large steamers; now it is only navigable for small-class steamers, when the river is high, as high as Austin, or about 220 miles.

COLORADO, a river of Utah, California, and New Mexico, enters the N. extremity of the Gulf of California, after a course of nearly 800 m. Its extreme source is N. of 43° N. lat., but one of its main affluents rises in the S. pass of the Rocky Mountains, under the parallel of 40° 20′ N. The elevation of this pass is about 7,000 feet above sea level, yet the ascent to it from the Platte and Sweetwater rivers, on the E. side, over a sandy plain 120 m. long, is so gradual that the traveller is scarcely conscious of rising to the summit of a high ridge of mountains. After passing 2 or 3 m. over a level surface, between low and sloping elevations composed of sand & clay, he descends by a gentle declivity two miles, to a spring known to emigrants as the "Pacific Spring," the water from which forms the upper stream of the Colorado, known to travellers and trappers as the Green river. The distance from Fort Laramie to the Pacific Spring is 311 m. Within the space of a few miles the Wind River mountains supply a number of tributaries to the Green river. At a point in about 40° 46′ N. lat., & at an elevation of 5,150 feet above sea level, the Colorado in the month of June was found by Fremont and his party to be swollen to the top of its banks, and several hundred yards in breadth, with a depth in many places near its banks of from 15 to 20 feet. Below this the river enters between lofty precipices of red sandstone, and the country is said to assume a very rugged character, the river passing through canons which forbid all access to its verge. The course of the Colorado is prevailingly S.S.W. It is joined by the Grande river at about 37° 30′, & by the St. John's & Chelly under the 37th parallel, & by the Jaquesila about 40 m. lower down, the Rio Virgin from the W. at 35° 30′, and the Mohave a little above 34°. At about 32° 38′ the Gila comes into it at nearly right angles, and the point of junction, strangely chosen, is the hard butte, through which, with their united forces, they cut a canon, 1,000 feet in length, with vertical walls about 50 ft. high, & then flow off due W. in a stream 600 ft. wide, & with a perfectly straight course for 3 or 4 m. Up to its junction with the Gila the Colorado is always navigable for steam boats; above it is full of shifting sand bars. From this point the banks of the Colorado is thickly studded with mezquite willows, Equisetum hyemale, & cotton wood. At the ford leading to Sonora, about 70 m. from its mouth, the Colorado in the month of November was found to be 1,500 ft. wide, and flowing at the rate of 1¼ m. per hour. Its banks were low, & its greatest depth at the crossings was only four feet. There is every reason to suppose that the Colorado can be navigated by light draft steamers for a distance of 200 m. above the mouth of the Gila.

COLORADO, county, Texas. Area, 825 square m. Drained centrally by the Colorado r. Surface generally rolling, with a light soil, producing good cotton, except on the bottom lands along the Colorado, where the soil is a dark chocolate color, producing the sugar cane in perfection. COLUMBIA, or OREGON, river, Washington and Oregon Ter. & British possessions. Its northern branch take its rise in the Rocky Mountains, in lat. 50° N., lon. 116° W.; from thence it pursues a northern course to near McGillivary's Pass, of the Rocky Mountains. At the boat encampment, the river is 3,600 feet above the level of the sea (here it receives two small tributaries—the Canoe river, & that from the Committee's Punch Bowl), from thence it turns south, having some obstructions to canoe navigation, and receiving many tributaries in its course to Colville, among which are the Kootanie, or Flat Bow, and the Flat Head or Clarke river from the east, & that of Colville from the west. This great river is bounded, thus far on its course, by a range of high mountains, well-wooded, & in some places expands into a line of lakes before it reaches Colville, where it is 2,049 feet above the level of the sea, having a fall of 550 feet in 220 miles. To the south of this it trends to the westward, receiving the Spokane river from the east (which is not navigable), & takes its rise in the Lake of Cœur d' Alene. Thence it pursues a westerly course for about 60 miles, receiving several smaller streams, &, at its bend to the south, it is joined by the Okanagan, a river that has its source in a line of lakes, affording canoe & boat navigation for a considerable extent to the northward The Columbia thence passes to the southward until it reaches Wallawalla, in the lat. of 45°., a distance of 160 miles, receiving the Piscous, Y'Akama, & Point de Boise, or Entyatecoom, from the west, which take their rise in the Cascade range, & also its great south-eastern branch, the Saptin or Lewis, which has its source in the Wind river Mountains, and brings a large quanity of water to increase the volume of the main stream. The Lewis is not navigable, even for canoes, except in reaches. The rapids are extensive, and of frequent occurrence. It generally passes between the Rocky Mountain spurs & the Blue Mountains. It receives the Kooskooske, Salmon, and several other rivers, from the east & west—the former from the Rocky Mountains, the latter from the Blue Mountains —and, were it navigable, would much facilitate the intercourse with this part of the country. Its length, to its junction with the Columbia, is 520 miles. The Columbia below this point forms the boundary between Oregon & Washington territories to the Pacific. The river at Wallawalla is 1,286 feet above the level of the sea, & about 3,500 feet wide; it now takes its last turn to the westward, receiving the Umatilla, Quisnel's, John Day's, & de Chute rivers from the south, and Cathlatate's from the north, pursuing its rapid course of 80 miles, previous to passing through the range of Cascade Mountains, in a series of falls & rapids that obstruct its flow, & form insurmountable barriers o the passage of boats by water during the floods. These difficulties, however, are overcome by portages around the falls. The waters here descend 40 feet in the distance of 2 miles. From thence there is still-water navigation for forty miles, when its course is again obstructed by rapids. At the Dalles the river is compressed into a narrow channel 300 feet wide, and half a mile long, & flows between high walls of basalt, & the water falls 50 feet in the distance of two miles. Thence to the ocean, 120 miles, it is navigable for vessels of 12 feet draught of water at the lowest state of the river, though obstructed by many sand-bars. In this part it receives the Willamette from the south, & the Cowelitz from the north. The former is navigable for small vessels 20 miles, to the mouth of the Klackamus, three miles below its falls; the latter cannot be called navigable, except for a small part of the year, during the floods, & then only for canoes & barges. The width of the Columbia, within 20 miles of its mouth, is much increased, & it joins the ocean between Cape Disappointment & Point Adams, forming a sand-spit from each, by deposit, & causing a dangerous bar, which greatly impedes its navigation and entrance. The influence of the tides is felt 80 miles above its entrance into the Pacific. Its entire course is about 750 miles. During the year 1850, 160 vessels entered & departed from the ports of Columbia r. Vessels of a draft of 17½ feet have been safely taken over the south bar, and it is supposed that vessels drawing over 20 feet can enter safely. This noble river was discovered by Capt. Gray, of Boston, in the year 1792, in the ship Columbia, and named from the ship. It was first explored from its sources to the sea in 1804–5, by Messrs. Lewis and Clarke, by order of the government of the United States. By the Oregon treaty its navigation is open to British vessels.

COMO (LAKE OF), German Comersee, anc. Larius Lacus, a lake of N. Italy, Lombardy, prov. Como, forming the greatest sinus of the river Adda, which enters it at the foot of the Lepontine & Rhetian Alps, & quits it at Lecco, in the midst of mntns. of from 1,000 to 1,300 ft. in elevation. It is of a very irregular shape, being separated into the 2 branches of Como & Lecco, by the promont. of Bellagio. Extreme breadth between Menaggio & Varena, 3 m. Length, Como to Riva, 35 m. Como is, on account of the beauty of its basin, & its favorable exposure, the most celebrated of all the lakes of N. Italy. Its shores are covered with elegant villas, among which are the Villa d'Este, long the resid. of Queen Caroline of England, & the Villa Lenno on the supposed site of Pliny's villa. The lake abounds in all kinds of fish; its navigation is liable to interruption from sudden storms; regular steam communication is established between its principal towns.

COMO, Comum, an anc. episcopal city of Lombardy, cap. prov. same name, in a picturesque situation, at the S. extremity of the lake of Como; elev. 702 ft. Pop. including its 9 suburbs, 18,600, of whom 7,400 belong to the city proper. It has a public library of 15,000 vols., a botanic garden, 3 gymnasia, & a museum of antiquities. Chief edifices, the cathedral, commenced 1396, built entirely of marble, & decorated with numerous works of art; an anc. town-hall, also of marble. Manufs. comprise woollens, silks, cotton, & soap. Trade is much facilitated by navigation in the lake, & by excellent roads. Many of its inhabitants emigrate, as masons & makers of barometers. It was the birth-pl. of the younger (& probably also of the elder) Pliny, of Volta, & of Pope Innocent XI. A colossal statue

CONNECTICUT, r., the largest in New England, has its source in the highlands on the N. border of New Hampshire, & its W. branch forms the boundary, by treaty, between the U. States & Canada, to the 45° of N. lat. Its general course is S. by W., & dividing New Hampshire & Vermont, it passes through the western part of Massachusetts, & the central part of Connecticut; & below Middletown, proceeding in a S.S.E. direction, it enters Long Island Sound, between Saybrook & Lyme. Its whole length is about 410 miles; & it flows through a fine country, & passes many flourishing towns. On its borders in New Hampshire are Haverhill, Hanover, Charlestown, & Walpole; in Vermont, Newbury, Windsor, & Brattleboro'; in Massachusetts, Greenfield, Hadley, Northampton, & Springfield; & in Connecticut, Hartford, Middletown, and Haddam. It is navigable for vessels drawing 10 feet of water to Middletown, & for vessels drawing 8 feet of water to Hartford, the head of sloop navigation. Above this it is navigable for boats carrying 10 or 12 tons in descending, & two-thirds as much in ascending, passing a number of falls & rapids in canals around them, to the mouth of Wells river in Newbury, Vt., a distance of 250 miles above Hartford. Immediately above this are the Fifteen Mile Falls. The whole descent of the river between Hanover, N. H., & Enfield, Ct., is 371 feet, of which 218 have been overcome by locks; at South Hadley 50 feet, Nutter's Falls 71, Bellows' Falls 48½, Water Queechee 12½, & White r. 36 feet. At Enfield is also a fall of 5 or 6 feet, around which is a canal 5½ ms. in length. The principal tributaries of the Connecticut are, in New Hampshire, the Upper & Lower Ammonoosuc, Sugar, & Ashuelot rs.; in Vermont, Passumsic, Wells, White, Queechee, Black, Williams, & West rivers; in Massachusetts, Miller's, Deerfield, Chickopee, & Westfield rivers; & in Connecticut, Farmington r. There are numerous bridges over the Connecticut, the lowest of which is at Hartford, Ct. In some places the banks of this river are rough & precipitous; but through a considerable part of its course, there are intervales on each side, from half a mile to 5 miles wide, but little raised above the surface of the river, portions of which are annually overflowed, & thus enriched, & which have great fertility. There are steam passage boats, which form a line from Hartford to the city of New York, & a line of propellers with Albany, N. Y. This r. is distinguished for its shad fisheries, & the fish which are caught are considered of a superior quality. Some other fish are taken, but salmon, formerly common, no longer frequent the river. The lighthouse on Lynde Pt., at the entrace of the r., is in lat. 41° 16′ 13″, lon. 72° 20′ 18″ W. from Greenwich. The light is elevated 80 ft. above the level of the sea, & is visible for a distance of 13¾ nautical miles.

CONNECTICUT, one of the United States of America, & the southernmost of the New England states, is situated between 41° & 42° 2′ N. lat., & 71° 20′ and 73° 15′ W. lon., & between 3° 46′ 24″ & 5° 41′ 24″ E. long. from W. It is bounded N. by Massachusetts, E. by Rhode Island, S. by Long Island Sound, & W. by New York. It contains 4,750 sq. m., or 3,040,000 ac. Pop. in 1790, was 237,946; in 1800, 251,002; in 1810, 261,942; in 1820, 275,248; in 1830, 297,711; in 1840, 300,015; in 1850, 370,792. The capitals are Hartford, on the right bank of the Connecticut, at the head of steamboat navigation, 50 miles from its entrance into Long Island Sound, & New Haven, at the head of a bay which sets up 4 m. from the sound. It contained, in 1850, 8 counties. The following table gives the number of dwellings, inhabitants, cultivated farms, & manufacturing establishments in each:

Education.—This state has three colleges. Yale college at New Haven is one of the oldest, & is the most flourishing institution of the kind in the United States. It was founded in 1701, & removed from Saybrook to New Haven in 1717. Trinity College at Hartford, under the direction of the Episcopalians, was founded in 1826, & is flourishing. The Wesleyan University at Middletown, is under the direction of the Methodists, & is a growing institution. The Asylum for the Deaf & Dumb at Hartford is the oldest & most respectable institution of the kind in the United States. The State Normal School, estab. in 1849, is under the control of 8 trustees appointed by the general assembly. The Retreat for the Insane at Hartford was estab. in 1822. In 1850, there were 3 colleges, 716 students; 203 acad., 7,018 pupils; 1,656 schools, 71,269 scholars;—there were in the state 164 libraries, aggregate number of vols. 165,318; there were printed 51 newspapers,—7 daily, 4 tri-weekly, & 30 weekly; & 1 bi-monthly, 1 monthly, 2 quarterly, & 1 tri-yearly publication. Total circulation, 4,267,932.

Connecticut has a larger productive school fund in proportion to its pop. than any other state, amounting to $2,049,482. This originated chiefly from the sale of the Western Reserve, constituting a large part of the northern portion of the State of Ohio included in its original charter, & ceded to it by the United States by way of compromise. In 1852, there were in the state 53 banks, with a capital of $12,509,808. It has no state debt. There is a state prison at Wethersfield, erected in 1826. There were in this state, Jan., 1854, 669 m. of r. r. completed, and 83 in course of construction.

Form of Government.—The government of the state is vested in a governor, lieutenant-governor, who is president of the senate, & in a senate & house of representatives. The senate consists of not less than 18, nor of more than 24 members. Most of the towns have 2 representatives, some of less pop. but 1. The sessions of legislature are held annually, alternately at Hartford & at New Haven. The supreme court consists of 5 judges appointed by the legislature, holding their offices during good behavior, or until they are 70 years of age. These judges hold separately a court twice a year in each county, & all the judges together hold one court annually in each county as a court of errors. The county courts consist of 3 judges in each county, appointed annually by the legislature. There are justices of the peace in the several towns, who have cognizance of all cases where the demand does not exceed $35. The cities have city courts consisting of the mayor and 2 senior aldermen, having cognizance of all civil actions which do not respect the title of land.

The state consisted, at its first settlement, of two colonies, denominated Connecticut, having the seat of government at Hartford; and New Haven, at New Haven. The colony of Connecticut was settled in 1633, at Windsor, by emigrants from Massachusetts, who penetrated through the wilderness. Hartford was settled by the English in 1635, the Dutch having previously built a fort there, which they did not permanently hold. Wethersfield was settled in 1636. The colony at New Haven was settled by the English in 1638. By a charter granted by Charles II., in 1665, these colonies were united. During the tyranny of Andros, an attempt was made to procure a surrender of the charter. The subject was publicly debated in the evening, at Hartford, when suddenly the candles were extinguished, & the charter was hid in the hollow of an oak tree, which has become famous since as the Charter Oak. This charter continued to be the basis of the government until the year 1818, when the present constitution was formed. In 1708, the celebrated Saybrook Platform, or the constitution of the Congregational churches, was adopted. Connecticut took a very active part in the revolutionary war, & a number of her towns, particularly Danbury & New London, were burned by the enemy; the latter under the command of the traitor Arnold.

The constitution of the United States was adopted in a convention, January 9, 1788; yeas 128, nays 40; majority 88.

CONSTANCE (LAKE OF), German Bodensee, anc. Brigantinus lacus, a lake of Europe betw. Switzerland and Germany, traversed from E. to W. by the Rhine. Length, 42 m.; extreme breadth, 9 m.; elev. above the sea, 1,250 feet; depth, 904 feet. Its shores are bounded S. by Switzerland, S.E. by Austria, N.E. by Bavaria & Würtemberg, & N.W. by Baden. Near Constance it separates into 2 branches, Unter see (lower lake) on the W., & Ueberlingen see (lake of Ueberlingen) on the N. W. of Constance. The principal part of the Boden-see communicates with the Unter see only by a narrow channel traversed by the Rhine. The waters of the lake are subject to rise & fall suddenly, without apparent cause; this phenomenon is called rehm. The shores of the lake, which are in general flat, are very fertile. It is regularly traversed by steam packets. Principal affls. besides the Rhine, the Aach & Argen on the W. Chief towns on its shores, Constance, Bregenz, Lindau, Meersburg, & Ueberlingen.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Stamboul, the cap. city of the Turkish, as formerly of the Byzantine, or Lower Roman, empire, near the E. extremity of European Turkey, separated by the Bosphorus from Asia Minor. Lat. of St. Sophia's 41° 0′ 16″ N., lon. 28° 59′ 14″ E. Pop. uncertain, but estimated at 400,000, including its suburbs Galata, Pera, Tophani, &c., composed of 150,000 Greeks & Armenians, 20,000 Europeans, & 60,000 Jews, & the remainder Turks & Arabians. The city proper occupying a triangular promontory of land between the Bosphorus & its inlet the "Goldern Horn," is about 4½ m. in length N.W. to S.E., by from 1 to 4 m. in breadth, enclosed by a triple range of walls 12½ m. in circ., & entered at present by 28 gates. The city is built on an undulating declivity, highest on the land side. Externally it has an imposing appearance with its mosques, cupolas, & minarets, interspersed with cypresses, & its port crowded with shipping; but internally it consists mostly of a labyrinth of crooked, ill-paved, & dirty lanes, and a crowd of low built and small houses, formed of wood or roughly hewn stone. Its drainage is favored by its uneven site & a great number of public fountains, which amply supply the city with water brought from artificial tanks constructed at some distance. A great number of dogs are permitted to range the streets, which act as scavengers. They have no private owners, but belong to the community. Each ward has its own particular dogs, and should an individual trespass upon a neighboring territory, he is immediately driven off by the dogs that occupy it.

The climate is variable, and the temperature, especially in winter and spring, subject to great vicissitudes, snow and hard frost alternate with mild weather. The mean temp. of year, 56° .3; winter, 40° .8; summer, 71° .2, Fahr. The annual quantity of rain which falls is moderate. This capital, including its suburbs, contains 14 royal & 332 other mosques, 40 Mohammedan colleges, 183 hospitals, 36 christian churches, several synagogues, 130 public baths, & 180 khans or inns, besides numerous bazaars, coffee houses, & caravanserais. The extreme point of the city on the E. is occupied by the "seraglio," or private domain of the Sultan, the boundaries of which are supposed to have been those of the ancient Byzantium. It comprises an area about 3 miles in circ., separately enclosed by walls and extending down to the sea of Marmara. Its surface is irregularly covered with detached suites of apartments, baths, mosques, kiosks, gardens, and groves of cypress." Its inner enclosure alone is devoted to the sole use of the Sultan and his harem; in the second court are the treasury, imperial kitchens & stables, divan, hall of justice, the arsenal, formerly the church of St. Irene, and the Corinthian column of Theodosius; & in the outer court (the ancient Forum Augusti), are the mint, various state-offices, the infirmaries, &c. This court is entered from the city by a large and heavy gate termed the "Porte," a name which has thence been applied to the divan of the Turkish Sultan. Immediately without the seraglio, is the principal mosque of St. Sophia, originally a christian cathedral, built by the Emperor Justinian, between 531 & 538, at a cost equivalent to at least 1,000,000*l.* sterling. This edifice is in the form of a Greek cross, 269 feet in length by 143 in breadth (in its interior), & surmounted by a flattened dome 180 feet above the ground, besides several minor cupolas, & 4 minarets added to it by the Turks. In its interior are numerous large columns, a floor of variegated marble, & some magnificent bronze gates, but most of the ancient Byzantine paintings and decorations have been hidden by Turkish inscriptions, and the general effect of the buildings is destroyed by the presence of a multitude of lamps, globes, & other insignificant ornaments depending from the dome. Near St. Sophia, is the mosque of Achmet, a fine structure with a beautiful marble pavement, and 6 minarets, a number possessed by no other mosque in the Mohammedan world. This mosque stands on the At-meidan or "Horse course," the ancient Hippodrome, of historic celebrity, a space of 300 yards in length by 150 in breadth, and on which are the granite Theban obelisk set up by Theodosius, the broken pyramid of Constantine Porphyrogenitus, shorn of its bronze plates, & the identical twisted brass column which originally supported the tripod in the temple of Delphi. Other principal mosques are those of Solyman the Magnificent, a masterpiece of Saracenic architecture, of Mohammed II., Bajazet II., Selim II., Mustapha III., and Otham & Eyub, with the Valide mosques, built by the mother of Mohammed IV., and containing pillars from the ruins of Troy. Most of these establishments have attached to them one or more colleges or charitable institutions; that of Mohammed II. is surrounded by 8 endowed academies, a diet house for the poor, hospital, carvanserais, and baths, all surmounted by lead covered cupolas. There are government, naval, and military & medical colleges, as well as numerous inferior schools, but the system of education throughout the whole is on a low scale, & very inefficiently conducted. The bazaars are extensive and well supplied, but have no architectural beauty; the numerous cemeteries in and around the city are among its greatest ornaments. Many new barracks, schools, and hospitals have been established in different parts of the metropolis by the late and present Sultans. Principal antiquities are the "burnt column," originally erected by Constantine the Great, a part of the column of Arcadius, the pillar of Marcian, vestiges of the Boucoleon palace, built by Theodosius II., the aqueduct of Valens, various subterranean cisterns, the principal of which called by the Turks "the thousand and one columns," is a vault 240 feet in length by 200 feet in width, supported by 424 pillars. About the S.W. angle of the city is the cidadel of the "seven towers" (Heptapyrgium), a fortress erected about A. D. 1000, and now used as a state prison. The city proper comprises separate quarters for the Jews, Armenians, & Greeks, that of the last, "the Fana" extends along the shore of the port, or the "Golden Horn." This fine harbor, which has usurped the name of the promontory on which Byzantium was built, extends between the city and its suburbs. Pera, Galata, &c., for about 4½ m. S.E. to N.W., breadth varying from 1 to 4 furlongs. It is deep enough to float ships of the largest size, can receive 1,200 sail of the line, and is always full of mercantile and other vessels, with a vast number of light boats, which here form the principal vehicles of transport. A bridge of boats across it, constructed in 1837, connects the Fanar with Pera; besides which suburb, those of Cassim Pasha, Tophani, Galata, & Tershanna with the imperial arsenals & dockyard, are on its N. shore. [See the articles on those suburbs, also SCUTARI.] The foreign commerce of Constantinople, though extensive is not so large as might have been expected. Imports consist of corn, iron, timber, tallow, & furs from the Black Sea & Russia, cotton stuffs and yarn, woollens, silks, metallic goods, watches, jewellery, furniture, dyes & drugs from W. Europe, corn, & coffee from Alexandria, sugar from the E. & W. Indies, wax, copper, gums, drugs, porcelain, overland from China, &c. About 2,000 tons of coffee, 1,200,000 lbs. of sugar, 300,000 lbs. of pepper & spices, 2,000 puncheons of rum, & large quantities of low priced cotton manufs. are said to be required annually for home consumption. Exports consist of silk, carpets, hides, wool, goats' hair, potash, gall, yellow berries, linseed, madder, valonea, bones. In 1840, 5,630 ships entered, and 5,499 cleared out of the port; those entering comprised 567 British, aggregate burden 134,876 tons, the rest were principally Greek, Austrian, Russian, Italian, & Ionian. Smyrna is the place of rendezvous for caravans from Persia, Armenia, &c., & is the seat of the principal [illegible] & manufs. of Turkish silk and cotton goods. Other manufs. are morroco leather, saddlery, glass, meerschaum pipe-bowls, mouth-pieces, pipe-tubes, & expressly for the manufacture of the last, large numbers of cherry trees are raised near the city. Constantinople is the see of Greek, Armenian, & Catholic Armenian patriarchs. It was originally founded by Byzas, B.C. 656, & rebuilt by Constantine, A.D. 328, since which time it has been repeatedly besieged, but only twice taken; viz., in 1204 by the Crusaders, who retained it till 1261, and by the Turks under Mohammed II., May 29th, 1453—an event which marked the final extinction of the Rom. empire in the E.

Drained by San Ramon, Jagerto, Nuecos, Hambre, Puiole, San Pablo, San Leandro, & San Lorenzo, all of which are dry in summer; many springs & plenty of water for cattle except on the San Joaquin plains. Sulphur springs abundant, mostly tepid; saline springs exist. It is one of the most fertile counties in the state, possessing rich agricultural land, which embrace an interior coast of thirty leagues, extending in the bays of Santa Clara, San Francisco, & San Pablo, the straits of Carquines, the bay of Suisun, & along the San Joaquin r. The coast range is here broken by the passage of the Sacramento r. It forms the water-shed nearly central in this county. Capital, Martinez. Mount Diablo, whose summit is elevated 3,793 feet above the level of the sea, forms a conspicuous land mark for vessels entering the harbor of San Francisco, & also for a great distance inland in all directions. It is about 10 miles south of the Sacramento & 28 miles a little north of east from San Francisco. The tradition related of this singular peak is as follows: In 1806 a military expedition from San Francisco marched against the tribe of "Bolgones" who were encamped at the foot of the mount; the Indians were prepared to receive the Spaniards, & a hot engagement followed. While the battle raged fiercely, & each party in turn, were doubtful of the result, an unknown personage decorated with the most extraordinary plumage, suddenly appeared near the combatants, & the Indians were victorious; the incognito (Puy) departed toward the mount. The defeated soldiers named the mount "Diablo." The mysterious individual continued to make his appearance daily, until the tribe were finally subdued by the troops under the command of Moraga, in the second campaign of the same year. In the aboriginal tongue "Puy" signifies Evil Spirit; in Spanish Diablo. Pop. 1852, 2,745; whites, males, 1,927; females, 550; negroes, 2; mulattoes, males, 17; females, 2; Indians domesticated, males, 156; females, 115. COPENHAGEN (Dan Kjöbenhavn, "Merchant's port") an important city of N. Europe, cap. of the kingdom of Denmark, in the Sound, is built on the islands Seeland & Amager, which are separated by a narrow arm of the sea, forming an excellent harbor. Lat. of observatory 55° 40′ 43″ N., lon. 12° 34′ 44″ E. Pop. 1850, 129,695. Mean temp. of year, 46° .6; winter, 31° .3; summer, 62° .7, Fahr. Copenhagen, the residence of the sovereign & seat of the court, is strongly fortified, and is one of the finest cities in Europe; it is divided into two parts, the smallest of which, called Christianshaven, is on the island Amager. Within the walls there are 15 open squares, one of which, the "Königs Neumarket," is remarkable for its elegance & extent. On the north of the city, & connected with it by an esplanade, is the citadel of Frederickshavn, a regular polygon with 5 bastions. The city contains many noble public buildings, among which are the palace of Amalienburg, inhabited by the royal family, the castle of Charlottenburg, with a public library of 410,000 vols. & 16,000 (?) MSS. It is now used as an academy of the fine arts, and its parks are converted into a botanic garden. The castle of Rosenburg, built 1604, in which are deposited the regalia and many antiquities; the town-house, built 1805–15; the university, partly rebuilt between 1831 & 1836, and the royal theatre. The chief ecclesiastical buildings are—the Frauen Kirche, the metropolitan church of the kingdom, adorned with the finest sculptures of Thorwaldsen; St. Peter's, or the German church, with a spire 250 feet in height; the Trinity church, on the round tower of which is placed the astronomical observatory; and the church of our Saviour, in Christianshavn, with a spire 288 ft. in elev. Long at the head of civilization in N. Europe, Copenhagen possesses many scientific & literary estabs. Its university is rich & flourishing; and had, in 1845, 38 professors & 1,100 students. It has a polytechnic sch., a royal acad. of sciences & arts, an astronomical & a magnetic observatory, a large gallery of paintings, & a botanic garden. Its numer. acads. publish important memoirs. Copenhagen is the centre of the commerce of the kingdom, and, by means of canals, large ships reach its warehouses in the centre of the city. Its commerce extends to all parts of the world. In 1847, 1,400 merchant vessels—ave. burden, 57,000 lasts—entered & left its ports. It communicates with Roeskilde & Corsoer by a r. r., & by steam packets, with the chf. ports on the Baltic, & with Havre in France. It is also the station for the naval force of the kingdom, & has a cannon foundry, an arsenal, & extensive shipbuilding docks. In 1847, there were on the station 6 ships of the line, 8 frigates, & upwards of 100 smaller vessels. The manufs. are not important; the chief industrial estabs. are woollen facs., steam spin. mills, distilleries, breweries, iron foundries, tanneries, sugar refineries, manufs. of sail-cloth, porcelain, tobacco and chocolate. Copenhagen was founded by Bishop Axel in 1,168. Originally built of wood, it was burned in 1728 & 1795. It was taken by Nelson in the Battle of the Baltic, 2d April 1801, & bombarded by the English in 1807. Being very little above the level of the sea, it is liable to be overflowed during storms, & it suffered much from this cause in 1824.

CORDOVA, or CORDOBA (French Cordue, anc. Corduba), a city of Spain, cap. prov. of same name, & formerly cap. kgdm. in a salubrious plain on the Guadalquiver, 86 m. N.E. Sevilla. Lat. 37° 52′ 15″ N., lon. 4° 49′ 36″ W. Pop. of prov. 1849, 348,956; of the city, 41,976. Its Moorish walls, built on Rom. foundations, enclose a large area, much of which is now occupied by gardens or by ruins, except one large square, bordered by lofty & handsome edifices; & the city is generally badly laid out, meanly built, & dirty. It communicates with a suburb across the riv. by a noble stone bridge of 16 arches, built by the Moors in the 8th century, & commanded by a Saracenic castle, still kept in a state of defence. Its cathedral, formerly one of the most holy mosques of the Mohammedan world, & still one of the most remarkable edifices in Spain, presents in its interior a "labyrinth of columns," of all orders & materials, which were brought from various ancient temples all around the Mediterranean. Other princip. buildings are 13 pa. churches, gorgeously adorned, about 40 convents, the bishop's palace, with fine gardens, the remains of a palace of the Moorish sovereigns, now converted into stables for a royal breeding stud, the city hall, 16 hospitals, foundling & other asylums, 3 colleges, & several schools. The famous Cordovan manufs. of leather (hence called Cordwain) have declined into insignificance; but the silversmiths & filigree workers of this city maintain their repute; and manufs. of paper, barrels, hats, & silken fabrics, are carried on. Cordova was taken by the Moors in 672, & for many centuries afterwards remained the splendid cap. of the "Caliphate of the West," & was occupied & pillaged by the French under Dupont, in June 1808. It is the birthplace of the two Senecas, the Roman poet Lucan, the Arab physicians Avicenna & Averroes, &

Gonzalves Fernandez. Cordova was for some time comprised in the country of the kings of Sevilla. It was taken by Ferdinand III., king of Castilla, in 1236, & became cap. of one of the 4 old provs. of Andalucia, with the title of kgdm. The prov. of Cordova is bounded N. by Badajos & Ciudad Real, E. by Jaen, S. & S. E. by Granada & Malaga, & S.W. by Sevilla. It retains its old boundaries unaltered by the decree of 1834.

CORDOVA, a town of Vera Cruz, Mexico, 50 m. W. S.W. Vera Cruz, on the S. route to Mexico. Pop. 6,000. It is well built of stone, & has many handsome public edifices, an active trade in sugar & coffee for the supply of Mexico, & manufs. of cotton & woollen fabrics. In the vicinity tobacco is extensively cultivated.

CORDOVA, a state of the Argentine, Plata, South America, near its centre, bounded by Santiago, La Rioja, San Luis, & Santa Fé. Estimated pop. 86,000 to 90,000. Surface mostly mntnous., rising in some places to 2,500 feet in elevation, & the ranges interspersed with stony or sandy flats. Climate variable, with medium moisture. Little wheat is raised, that consumed being imported from San Juan. Cattle, sheep, & goats, are numerous, & beef, maize, & fruits are the princip. products. Its E. portion is nearly uninhabited.—Cordova, the cap., is in lat. 31° 26′ 14″ S., lon. 63° 55′ W. Estimated pop. 14,000. It is encircled by the Rio Primero, & is neat & clean, though its streets are unpaved, & few of its buildings possess any architectural merit. It has a cathed., several churches, & formerly an university conducted by Jesuits, now only a provincial school, the library having been transferred to Buenos Ayres.

Leaotong by a wooden palisade, & having N. Manchooria, E. the Sea of Japan, & W. the Yellow Sea. Area, including isls., 80,000 sq. ms. Pop. uncertain. Coast line elevated & fertile; the interior is little known. Products comprise wheat, millet, rice, cotton, hemp, tobacco, ginseng, the fruits of N. China, plenty of cattle & timber, furs, bullion, iron, rock-salt, & coal. Manufs. are similar to those of the Chinese, whose habits & religion mostly prevail amongst the pop., though the Coreans use an alphabetic & not symbolic mode of writing. Commerce chiefly with Japan, whence are imported pepper, aromatic woods, alum, horns, Japanese & Dutch manufactured goods. The trade with China is stated to be wholly contraband; & no Corean trader is suffered to settle in China, or Chinese in Corea. Government despotic; & the election of the sovereign, & many of his important public acts, must be approved by the Emperor of China. Corea is divided into 8 provs.; chief city, Han-ching. It became subject to China at the end of the 17th century, to which country it sends every four years an embassy with tribute in ginseng root, skins, cotton, pepper, silk, horses, & silver ingots. The Archip. of Corea comprises numerous isls. & islets in the Yellow Sea, & on the coasts of the peninsula; the chief are Quelpaert & Amherst.—Corea Strait is between the peninsula of Corea & the isl. of Kiusiu.

CORK, p-o., Dearborn co., In.

CORK, the most southerly & largest co. of Ireland, Munster, bounded on the N. by Limerick, N.E. by Tipperary, E. by Waterford, & on the other sides by the Atlantic Ocean. Greatest length 100 m., breadth 55 m. Area, 2,885 sq. m., or 1,846,400 ac., of which about 1,538,000 are arable, 52,180 is plantations, and 165,889 waste. Inhabited houses, 121,510. Pop. 1851, 648,303. Surface undulating in the W.; in the S. & E. rich & fertile, but deficient in timber. Old red sandstone & mntn. limestone are the predominant rocks, with some seams of coal. Silurian strata in the S.E. dists. prevail. Coast deeply indented by some of the finest bays & harbors in the world; the principal being Bantry and Dunmanus bays, and Clonakilty, Kinsale, Cork, & Youghal harbs. Principal rivs., the Blackwater, Lee, & Bandon; the first chiefly, the others wholly, within this co. Small lakes are numerous, and in many parts the scenery is highly picturesque. Chief crops, oats, wheat, & potatoes; considerable quantities of which are exported from Cork. Properties generally very large, farms small. Average rent of land 13s. 7d. per ac. From 1,500 to 2,000 hands are employed at Allahies in raising copper; after which limestone is the principal mineral product. Principal manufs. linen weaving, with distilling in Cork. This co. is subdivided into E. & W. Ridings, 19 baronies, & 260 pars., mostly in the dioceses of Cork, Cloyne, & Ross. After Cork city, the cap., the principal towns are Youghal, Bandon, & Kinsale. The city proper is built on an isl. formed by the Lee, which riv. is here crossed by 9 modern bridges, several of them elegant structures. Its main streets are broad, well paved, and lighted with gas; but a large part of the city consists of wretched lanes, inhabited by a pop. in the lowest destitution. Houses in the more ancient quarters are mostly of limestone; elsewhere they are of brick, frequently faced with slate, & nowhere do they present much regularity of architecture. Among the most striking edifices, are the city & co. court-ho., erected at a cost of £22,000, & having a portico, surmounted by a group of colossal figures; the mansion-ho., on a fine walk termed the Mardyke; the exchange, commercial buildings, old co. court ho., co. & city prisons, ho. of correction, convict dep't, savings bank, N. & S. infirmaries, lunatic asylum, custom-ho., Cork royal institution, & the Episcopal palace of the united diocese of Cork, Cloyne, & Ross. The cathedral is a plain & uninteresting building. There are three large Roman Catholic churches, one of which ranks as a Rom. Catholic cathedral, various other places of worship, Augustine, Franciscan, Dominican, & Capuchin monasteries (the two latter possessing very handsome chapels), & two nunneries, to which are attached large female schools. Charitable institutions comprise, besides the infirmaries, fever, lying-in, & foundling hospitals, the Magdalen asylum & refuge for females, green & blue-coat schools, the Monk's schools, government pawn-bank (mont de piété) estab. in 1841, & numerous other charities of less note. Principal scientific institutions—Queen's College, the school of medicine & surgery, Cork library, public-pld library, fine art, Cuvierian, agriculture, horticultural, & other societies, & the mechanics' institution. Cork has several club-houses & banks, a chamber of commerce, 3 theatres, a circus, & 3 newspapers. Near it are cavalry & infantry barracks, a depôt for 2,000 arms, & in its vicinity is a public cemetery. Its beautiful environs are studded with country residences belonging to merchants, &c. Principal manufs. are of leather, iron, & other metallic goods, glass, gloves, & paper; & there are some extensive breweries & distilleries; the woollen & cotton manufs., formerly extensive, are now all but extinct. The trade is extensive, the exports consist of corn, flour, butter, & other Irish produce; imports consist chiefly of manufactured goods from England; wines, fruits, & salt from Portugal & the Mediterranean; timber from the Baltic & N. America. Cork communicates by steam-packets with London, Dublin, Bristol, Liverpool, & Glasgow. Its corporation consists of a mayor, recorder, sheriff, 16 aldermen, and 48 town-councillors, elected from its 8 wards. It is the seat of assizes for the city & the co. Cork, of quarter sessions, & a recorder's weekly court; & the headquarters of the S. military dist. of Ireland. It sends 2 mems. to the H. of C. Mkts. daily; those on Wednesday and Saturday for grain; cattle-markets 3 times weekly; and 2 large annual fairs are held in the vicinity. Cork is the birthplace of the artists Barry and Maclise, of O'Keefe, & of the dramatic author Sheridan Knowles.—Cork Harbor is a fine land-locked basin, formed by the estuary of the Lee, which is navigable to 1¼ m. above Cork city. It is large & deep enough to contain the whole British navy, & has an entrance 1 m. across, within which its breadth varies to 8 m. It contains Spike & Haulbowline isls., on which are artillery barracks & various ordnance works. Lat. 51° 50′ 4″ N., lon. 8° 19″ W. On its shores are the towns Cove & Passage, (which see), with quays 4 m. in length, & which were erected at a cost of £100,000.

CORNWALL, a co. of England, forming its S.W. extremity, enclosed on all sides by the sea, except eastward, where it is mostly separated from Devonshire by the river Tamar. Length, 78 m.; breadth, 43 m. Area, 1,365 sq. m., or 873,600 ac., of which 650,000 are estimated to be arable, pasture, & meadow lands. Inhabited houses, 67,978. Pop. 1851, 355,558. Surface intersected from W. to E., by a ridge of rugged and bleak hills, & very scantily timbered, but it has some very picturesque & fertile valleys. William of Worcester states, that between Mount's Bay and the Scilly Islands, there had been woods and meadows, & arable lands, & 140 parish churches, which, before his time, were submerged by the ocean; and the sub-marine forests show, in this tract, a subsidence of at least 12 feet. On the N. coast, a considerable extent of surface has been overwhelmed with sand, covering hills of several hundred feet in height, which have a shifting progress. Shores greatly indented by inlets of the sea, the principal of which are St. Ives and Padstow, harbors on the Irish sea; & on the English channel, St. Ruey bay, Falmouth harbor, & Mount's bay, between the promontories of the Lizard & Land's End. Principal rivs., the Tamar, Lynher, Towey, Fal, and Camel or Alan. The climate is very mild, especially the winters, but damp, with cloudy atmosphere, & frequent rain, yet on the whole very salubrious. Myrtles & some other plants of S. Europe, flourish in the open air, but fruits do not ripen well. Corn and potatoes are the chief crops, & agriculture has lately improved, though farms remain mostly small. The pilchard fishery employs capital, varying from 200,00*l*. to 250,000*l*. Cornwall is rich in metals, its tin mines have been known & wrought from remote antiquity. The great metallic district, extends from Dartmoor, in Devonshire, on the E., to the Land's End on the W. Tin is found most abundantly in the St. Just, & St. Ives, & St. Austell districts. Copper in the districts Gwennap, Redruth, Camborne, Breague, Marazion, and Gurnnear. Silver, lead, zinc, iron, manganese, antimony, cobalt, bismuth, are also found in various localities. The capital invested in the Cornish mines is estimated at nearly 2½ millions sterling, & about 71,000 hands are employed. The tin produced is estim. to average 4,000 tons annually. Nearly all the ores are sent into S. Wales to be smelted. About 5,000 tons of soapstone, & 7,000 do. of porcelain clay, are shipped annually from Cornwall for the potteries. The exports are nearly confined to mining produce and fish. Manufs. almost wholly domestic. Cornwall, including the Scilly islands, is sub-divided into 9 hundreds, and 203 pas., all in the diocese of Exeter, & S.W. circuit. Before the Reform Act, it contained 20 bors., & many of them being mere vills., each sending 2 members to H. of C. It now, with its towns, returns 14 members, including 2 for each division of the county. Principal towns, Bodmin, Truro, Launceston, Falmouth, Penrhyn, & Penzance. This part of Britain was not subdued by the Saxons, till the time of Athelstan, and its vernacular language (Cornish, a dialect of the Celtic) has become extinct only during the present century. The dist. contains many Druidical stones & other rude monuments, as also ruins of baronial castles.

CORSICA (French Corse), an island in the Mediterr., sit. between lat. 41° 20′ & 43° N., & lon. 8° 30′ & 9° 30′ E., separated S. from Sardinia, by the strait of Bonifacio. Shape nearly oval, with a projecting appendage N.ward. Length, N. to S., 120 m.; greatest breadth 45 m., cap. Ajaccio. Pop. 1851, 236,251. Shores mostly low; centre mountainous; culminating point, Monte Rotondo, 8,760 feet in elevation. Soil in most parts very fertile, but agriculture is very badly conducted, the pop. generally impoverished. Rearing live stock is the chief branch of industry; next to cattle, the chief products are timber, honey, wax, olive oil, the fruits of Italy & S. France, & fish, which latter are, however, mostly taken by Genoese & Neapolitan fishermen. Corsica is rich in minerals, but few mines are wrought: and manufs. are nearly limited to the production of coarse woollens, hardwares, & leather. Pop. mostly of Italian descent. Paoli and Napoleon were born in the isl. The dep. is divided into the 5 arronds. of Ajaccio, Bastia, Calvia, Corté, & Sartene, its principal towns. It was ceded to France (of which it forms a dep.) by the Genoese, in 1768. In 1848 a light-ho. was erected on the island Giraglia, off the N. point of Corsica, in lat. 43° 1′ 45″ N., lon. 90° 24′ 17″ E.

COSIHUIRIACHI, or SANTA ROSA DE COSIHUIRIACHI, (also written Cosiguiriachi & Cusihuiriachic,) is 90 m. W. from Chihuahua, Mex. It was established in the beginning of the last century, in consequence of the accidental discovery of silver mines, which must have been very productive. The population was estimated at 10,700 souls; while at present, with the surrounding settlements, it hardly exceeds 3,000. The mountain chain on which it is situated is called Sierra de Metates, & forms a part of the Sierra Madre, which occupies the whole western portion of the state of Chihuahua. The mines are all in the mountain chain, west of town, and called San Antonio, Santa Rosa, la Bufa, etc.; the first had been worked to a depth of near 300 varas. The mines are all found in porphyritic rocks, the prevailing formation in this part of the country. Silver occurs as sulphuret, in combination with sulphuret of iron & of lead. At present very little mining is done, more from want of capital than from exhaustion of the mines. Some have been abandoned on account of the water in them. The few wealthy families that live here, & attend to mining on a small scale, are unwilling to risk anything by expensive machinery, & foreign capitalists & miners have in the last twenty years been more attracted by the rich mines of Jesus Maria, further west. The ores of the few mines that are worked yet, contain, on an average, from three to four ounces of silver in the carga, (300 pounds.) The silver is extracted by fire. With the decline of the mines, the town also decayed, & the greatest part of the population looks at present wretchedly poor. Besides that, they are afflicted with two diseases, very common among them, and not apt to promote propagation, syphilis & lepra. In Cosihuiriachi itself they cultivate only a few gardens, but in the neighborhood are some villages & settlements, with cornfields & orchards; & if it were not for the scourge of the country, the hostile Indians, all the plains might be cultivated, & the people might get richer by the raising of stock than by the mines. The elevation of Cosihuiriachi above the sea is, according to the observations of Dr. Wislizenus, 6,275 feet, & the height of the "Bufa," the highest mountain in the range, is 7,918 feet above the sea, or 1,643 feet above Cosihuiriachi. The climate, notwithstanding the high elevation, is more temperate than cold; during the winter ice is sometimes formed, but rarely snow.

COSTA RICA, a republic of Central America, bounded N. by Nicaragua, from which it is separated N.E. by the river San Juan, E. & N. by the Caribbean Sea, E. by New Granada, from which it is separated E. by the river Chirigue entering the Caribbean Sea, & the Chiripai entering the Pacific, & S. & W. by the Pacific, between lat. 8° & 11° N., & lon. 81° 45′ & 84° 40′ W. Area about 16,250 sq. ms. It is divided into six districts, viz.: San José, Cartago, Heredia, Alajuela, Guanacaste, & Punta Arenas, & estimated to contain 138,000 inhabitants, of whom 2,500 are Indians. It is intersected diagonally by the primary range of the isthmus, which throws off numerous spurs on either side, giving to the surface a continued alternation of abrupt heights & sudden depressions. The principal range has several lofty eminences, & also several volcanoes, both active & dormant, including those of Orosi, Vetos, & Cartago; from the summit of the last of which both the Pacific & the Atlantic waters are distinctly visible. The N.W. districts are more rugged & mountainous than the S.E., but bordering the coast of the Pacific, & especially the Bay of Nicoya, the country is picturesquely diversified by valleys, & intersected by numerous streams. Costa Rica contains some exceedingly rich gold mines; hence the origin of its name. The mines, however, are now very little wrought. Silver & copper also exist. With the exception of the sea coasts, the climate is mild & temperate, never subject to excessive heats or colds, & rarely experiencing any other vicissitudes than those from the dry to the rainy season. It is therefore extremely well-adapted to agricultural purposes, & capable of bringing to maturity most of the plants peculiar to the tropics, & many exotics. The soil is remarkably fertile, especially the valleys & the table lands. The productions are coffee, cacao, Indian corn, tobacco, sugar, & some wheat. The horses of Costa Rica are of an inferior description, but the mules are much esteemed; & cattle, sheep, goats, & hogs, are reared in great numbers, & of excellent quality. The wild animals include the cougar, wolf, tapir, wild boar, deer, hares, sloths, & squirrels. The wooded coasts of the Pacific are much infested by dangerous reptiles, & great devastation is frequently caused by locusts. The birds, which include vultures, pelicans, parrots, pigeons, ducks, quails, teal, &c., exhibit the gayest & most beautiful plumage.

The woods of Costa Rica are valuable, comprising mahogany, cedar, Brazil, & various other kinds of timber. On the sea coast of Nicoya some pearls, & large quantities of mother-of-pearl shells, are found. Coffee, however, forms the most important product of the republic. Its cultivation, though only introduced about the year 1830, has increased so rapidly, that 3,000 to 4,000 tons are now exported annually. Tobacco, which is of excellent quality, is a government monopoly, & is exported in small quantities. The other exports are gold, sugar, Brazil wood, mother-of-pearl, ox & cow hides, horns, &c. The imports consist chiefly of manufactured goods. Total revenue 1852, $454,113; expenditure same year, 415,207.

Costa Rica is divided into 6 departments, each electing 2 deputies to the legislature. The departments are again subdivided into partidos, or districts. The principal cities are San José, the capital, Cartago, Erredia, Esparza, & Ujarras. The two established ports of entry are Punta Arenas, in the Gulf of Nicoya, & Matina, on the Caribbean Sea. The government of Costa Rica was established in 1823, & is accounted the best & most liberal in Central America. It has a representative Legislature, & the executive is entrusted to a President elected for 6 years, & a vice President is elected for the same term. The Religion is Roman Catholic. The inhabitants are extremely industrious & orderly, & are making rapid strides in wealth & improvement. The route across the Isthmus by the San Juan river, along part of the frontier of Costa Rica, is opened, so that steamers now ply on the river in connection with others on the lake of Nicaragua. (See America, Central.)

COSTA RICA, a riv., on the N. frontier of the Plata, 30 m. in length, is an affluent of the San Juan.

COVENTRY, a city, co., & municip. & parl. bor. of Engl., cap. co. Warwick, nearly in the centre of S. Britain, on the Sherbourne, an affl. of the Avon, & on the London & Birmingham r. r., 174 m. E.S.E. Birmingham. Area of city, 4,920 ac. Pop. 1851, 36,208; of its co., which is co-extensive with the parl. & munic. boundary, 15,616 ac.; pop. 36,812. It stands on a slope, & has some remains of its anc. walls, which were 3 m. in circ. Streets of the old town generally narrow & ill-paved, & buildings antiquated; but it has several good thoroughfares; & of late years many new streets and extens. suburbs have been laid out. It is conspicuous from a distance by the elegant spires of its churches, the princip. of which are St. Michael's, a fine Gothic structure with a steeple 303 ft. in height, Holy Trinity, St. John's, & Christ church, to the last of which is attached the spire of an anc. monastery. Besides the churches, 20 in number, viz.,—3 Baptist, 6 Episcopal, 1 Friends, 4 Independent, 2 Methodist, 1 Mormon, 1 Rom. Catholic, & 1 Unitarian,—the public buildings comprise a co. hall, St. Mary's hall, used for public meetings, the drapers' hall, canal office, jail, barracks, & theatre. Endowed foundations of the city have an aggregate income of 10,359*l.* annually. The latter comprise Bablake's hospl. for aged men, a school for boys; & a free grammar school having an income of 1,070*l.* a year, 2 fellowships at St. John's college, Oxford, & one at Catherine hall, Cambridge, besides 3 exhibitions in each university. At this school the antiquary Dugdale was educated. Coventry has a mechanics' institute, public library, and various associations. Its woollen manufactures, formerly flourishing, have wholly decayed, but have been succeeded by a large manufacture of all kinds of silk fabrics, especially ribbons. In 1839, there were in the city & suburbs 3,967 looms, mostly wrought for silk stuffs, & employing nearly 4,000 persons in their own houses, besides 1,862 looms in fac.; watchmaking is another important branch of manufacture, & here are large dye-works employing several hundred hands. Coventry is divided into 6 wards. It has quarter sessions; and sheriff's county courts monthly. It sends 2 mems. to H. of C. Mkts., Wed. & Saturday. Fairs, 8 days from the first Friday after Trinity Sunday, 2d Friday in Lent for linens & woollens, May 2, for cattle, Aug. 26, 27, & Nov. 1, besides which monthly cattle fairs, & cheese fairs in May and Sept. have been established. Races are held in March annually. This city was originally chartered by Earl Leofric, in the time of Edward the Confessor, at the instance, it is said, of his Lady Godiva, in commemoration of whom a curious annual festival takes place in the city. It was the seat of two memorable parliaments in the 15th century. Besides the remains of its walls traces exist of its cathedral, destroyed under Henry VIII., & of a monastery of white-friars, Cheylesmore castle, & an episcopal palace. It formed a part of the see of Lichfield & Coventry, until 1836, when it was transferred to the see of Worcester. It gives the title of Earl to the descendants of John Coventry, Lord Mayor of London in 1425.

CUBA, the largest of the W. India isles, situated between lat. 19° 50′ & 23° 9′ N., & lon. 74° 8′ & 84° 58′ W. It is of an elongated narrow shape, greatest length 648 miles, breadth varying from 25 to 107 m. Area, 31,465 sq. ms., or with the other small islands attached to it, 32,857 sq. m. The census of 1775 gave a pop. of 170,370; that of 1817, 551,998; that of 1841, 1,007,624; & that of 1850, 1,247,230, of whom 605,560 were whites, 206,570 free colored, & 436,100 slaves. The coasts are surrounded with reefs and shallows, & only one-third of them accessible to vessels; on this part, however, there are several excellent harbors. There are numerous islets surrounding the coast, the principal of which are Los Pinos, Romano, Turigmano, Cruz, Coco. The S.E. part of the island is intersected by a mountain range, the Sierra Maestra, the highest parts attain an elevation of 7,000 feet; this chain, with various local names, as "Organos," "Sierra del Abra," &c., extends along the entire length of the island. The northern part is more level, with rich valleys & plains. Extensive lagoons & salt marshes lie along the flat shores. There are no large rivers. Some are navigable for a few miles inward for boats; others are used for irrigating the fields. The climate is more temperate than that of the other W. Indian isls., but also more variable. Snow never appears even in the highest parts; but hail storms occur sometimes, and ice occasionally is formed at an elevation of a few hundred feet. Hurricanes are less frequent on land than in the other isls., though common in the neighboring ocean, but earthquakes are frequent. W. winds prevail during the cold season, & rain falls every month of the year. Except in the low marshy grounds the climate is salubrious, & invalids from the United States resort to the isl. Primary rocks & limestones prevail in the mountain districts; good bituminous coal has been found near Havana; copper mines were worked near Santiago in 17th century, afterwards abandoned, but have again been re-opened & worked with success, & a copper mine has been recently opened near Santa Clara by an American company. Gold & silver to any extent have never been found in the island. Extensive districts, especially in the mountain regions, are covered with dense forests, among which the majestic ceiba & mahogany trees are conspicuous, with other valuable wood fit for ship-building, & palms, plantains & beautiful ornamental trees abound. Only a small proportion of the land, about 2 millions of acres, is yet under cultivation, but it produces abundant crops of maize, yams, bananas, potatoes, sugar, coffee, tobacco, & to a small extent, cotton, cocoa, indigo. There are in Cuba 1,442 sugar estates, 1,618 coffee estates, 912 tobacco estates, & 9,930 grazing farms; number of cattle reared, 898,199.

The value of the principal articles produced in Cuba in 1849 were as follows:—

Garden fruits	$14,839,050	Cedar, mahogany, &c.	1,711,193
Sugar	18,699,924	Molasses	1,462,728
Esculent vegetables, &c.	6,097,080	Beef	3,605,780
Tobacco	5,042,829	Pork	1,346,055
Coffee	2,206,131	Birds	1,074,216
Indian corn	1,884,982	Milk	326,040
Other agricultural food	3,728,175	Hides	180,289
Charcoal	1,750,110	Mutton	120,600
Total value			$59,791,462

The uncultivated portions contain extensive and fertile prairies, where large herds of cattle are reared. Only one indigenous quadruped has ever been found, the huita, resembling a rat, & 18 inches in length. Amphibious reptiles, as the alligator, manatai, tortoise, abound, & serpents from 10 to 12 feet in length. Birds of beautiful plumage are numerous, and fish of various kinds swarm along the coasts. Cuba is divided into 3 departments (intendencias), viz., the Occidental, the Central, & the Oriental, the W. & central being the richest & most populous. Chief towns, Havana, Santiago, Mantanzas, Santa Clara, Santa Maria, Trinidad, &c. The commercial prosperity of Cuba has been of late years greatly on the increase. Provisions of all kinds, & manufactured goods, are the chief articles of importation, which, in 1850, amounted to $28,989,227. The exports amounted to $25,631,948. Of the imports into Cuba in 1850, these were from Spain 29.81 per c.; from the United States of America, 22.96 per c.; from Britain, 21.10 per c.; Germany, 7.27 per c., France, 6.03 per c., & Spanish America, 6.91 per c. Of the exports, 11.98 per c. was to Spain, 32.61 to the United States, 27.55 to Britain, 7.30 to Germany, 7.27 to France, & 2.26 to Spanish America. With all this trade it has not a single bank, & though it has only a specie currency, in no other country is there so much paper-money. The internal traffic is now facilitated by improved roads; & 10 lines of railroad has been opened, the aggregate length of which is about 300 miles. The government of the island is vested in a captain-general, who is supreme military commandant, & civil governor of the departments. The revenue of Cuba in 1850 amounted to $12,248,712. There is a military garrison of several battalions, & a marine force of 1 frigate, 2 steam-ships, & 16 small craft. Steamships ply between Havana & New York, Charleston, New-Orleans, &c., & smaller vessels between Havana & other parts of the coast. No foreigner can land on the island without procuring the security of a native of responsibility for his good behavior. Cuba was discovered by Columbus in his first voyage, October 27th, 1492. In 1511 the first settlement was made by the Spaniards, & soon after the aboriginal inhabitants were wholly extirpated. In 1762, Havana was captured & taken possession of by the British, but restored to the Spaniards next year. Cuba, from its position, & the nature of the trade-winds & gulf stream, might control the trade & intercourse of the whole Gulf of Mexico & the islands in the Caribbean Sea.
